ELDERS' AND DEACONS' INSTITUTE, FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

On Thursday, July 22d, at 8 p. m., the Elders' and Deacons' Institute of Fayetteville Presbytery opens at Red Springs, N.C.

There is abundant prospect of a most delightful and profitable Institute. The program is most important and attractive, being graced from beginning to end with valuable subjects and distinguished names. The service of praise, which is always a prominent feature of the Institute, will be exceedingly interesting and attractive this year being in the hands of Rev. Arthur J. Smith, of Savannah, Ga.

The staff of speakers is unusually strong and includes such names as Rev. Eugene Daniel, D. D., of Raleigh, Rev. Dr. Howerton, of Charlotte, Rev. W. W. Moore, D. D., of Union Seminary, Rev. P. H. Hoge, D. D., of Wilmington, President Alderman, of Chapel Hill, and Rev. A. J. Smith, of Savannah, Ga.

We hope that a large number of elders and deacons as well as others, will take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the Institute for improvement in knowledge and grace. Careful measure, have been taken to prevent anything inconsistent with the true spirit of the occasion, and all attending the Institute should find the exercises most profitable to religious life.

Any information in regard to board, &c., will be furnished by Martin McKinnon, D. K. McIver, T. W. Costen, S. A. McQueen, or J. A. McKay—Local Committee.

ROLLING FORK.

This is the county seat of Sharkey county, one of the richest and most fertile counties in the Delta, with a population of at least five hundred, with splendid railroad facilities, situated on the main line of the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley, from Memphis to New Orleans, and at the junction of the Valley Railroad from Rolling Fork to Coahoma, via Greenville; and yet there is not a Presbyterian church in the county. Such should not be the case any longer; and the writer, who has charge of this work, with the help of the Lord, and the brethren of the Synod, must see to it that a neat and comfortable church is established here as early as possible; for one established here will be accessible to our members at Anguilla, Carey, Nita, and Yuma, all nice little towns, five, eight, and nine miles respectively. Besides, the influence for Presbyterianism will be advanced and strengthened in the county more than can be estimated.

This work has been neglected, in the past; for I find many of our members in other churches, because they had no church of their choice in which to worship. Rev. W. D. Morton, D. D., our Synodical Evangelist, visited this place last November, and after a few days services, organized a church here with ten members. So anxious were they to have regular services, that they promised the Chairman of the Home Mission Committee, to pay the sum of two hundred dollars annually, if arrangements could be made to give them one Sabbath a month. This alone will convince you of their earnestness. Their request was granted. I came to this field about the last of February, and found the work very encouraging indeed. About the time we were considering the building of a church, the overflow came, which very much hindered us in our efforts; but with renewed energy and determination we have gone to work; for a church we must have.

The Methodists have been very kind in giving us the use of their church in which to hold services, which we fully appreciate. Yet it is not our church; and we cannot expect to advance so long as we depend upon other denominations to furnish us with a church in which to hold our services.

We can raise at least two hundred and fifty dollars towards a church building, and will have to call upon our friends in this noble work for at least seven hundred and fifty dollars. Brethren can't you come to our help? Any amount thankfully received, from a postage stamp up; so, don't be afraid you wont send enough; send what you have and do not stand back on ceremony. 2 Corinthians ix. 7, "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver." Remember it is the Lord's work we are trying to advance in this part of His vineyard.

Any information wanted will be gladly furnished.

"ONLY A BOY."

More than a half century ago a faithful minister, coming early to the kirk, met one of his deacons, whose face wore a very resolute but distressed expression.

"I came early to meet you," he said. "I have something on my conscience to say to you. Pastor, there must be something radically wrong in your preaching and work; there has been only one person added to the church in a whole year, and he is only a boy."

"I feel it all," he said. "I feel it, but God knows that I have tried to do my duty, and I can trust Him for the results."

"Yes, yes," said the deacon, "but 'by their fruits ye shall know them,' and one new member, and he too only a boy, seems to me rather a slight evidence of true faith and zeal. I don't want to be hard, but I have this matter on my conscience, and I have done but my duty in speaking plainly."

"True," said the old man; "but 'charity suffereth long and is kind; beareth all things, hopeth all things.' Aye, there you have it; 'hopeth all things.' I have great hopes of that one boy—Robert. Some seed that we sow bears fruit late, but that fruit is generally the most precious of all."

The old minister went to the pulpit that day with a grieved and heavy heart. He closed his discourse with dim and tearful eyes. He wished that his work was done forever, and that he was at rest among the graves, under the blooming trees in the old kirkyard.

He lingered in the dear old kirk after the rest were gone. He wished to be alone. The place was sacred and inexpressibly dear to him. It had been his spiritual home from his youth. Before this altar he had prayed over the dead forms of a bygone generation, and had welcomed the children of a new generation; and here, yes, here, he had been told at last that his work was no longer owned and blessed.

No one remained. No one? "Only a boy."

The boy was Robert Moffat. He watched the trembling old man. His soul was filled with loving sympathy. He went to him and laid his hand on his black gown.

"Well, Robert?" said the minister.

"Do you think if I were willing to work hard for an education, I could ever become a preacher?"

"A preacher?"

"Perhaps a missionary."

There was a long pause. Tears filled the eyes of the old minister. At length he said: "This heals the ache in my heart, Robert. I see the divine hand now. May God bless you, my boy. Yes, I think you will become a preacher." Some few years ago there returned to London, from Africa, an aged missionary. His name was spoken with reverence. When he went into an assembly the people rose; when he spoke in public there was a deep silence. Princes stood uncovered before him; nobles invited him to their homes.

He had added a province to the Church of Christ on earth, had brought under the Gospel influence the most savage of African chiefs, had given the translated Bible to strange tribes, had enriched with valuable knowledge the Royal Geographical Society, and had honored the humble place of his birth, the Scottish kirk, the United Kingdom, and the universal missionary cause.

It is hard to trust when no evidence of fruit appears. But the harvests of right intentions are sure. The old minister sleeps beneath the trees in the humble place of his labors, but men remember his work because of what he was to that one boy and what that one boy was to the world. "Only a boy."—Christian Messenger.

"HIS MERE GOOD PLEASURE."

God is sovereign. Being the infinite, first and uncaused Cause of all things, there is no one in all the universe to whom he needs to give account or explanation of that which he does. There is no escape from this truth. The sooner we settle down upon it as a fact, ceasing to object and question and rebel, and content to let God be God, the sooner and more surely shall we be at peace. But whether we rebel or submit, God is still the same and nothing that we do can change the counsel of his will.

But why should any one chafe? Why should any one wish to change the purposes or the plan of God? Why should there be any distrust or any antagonism aroused by the announcement that God does all things "according to his own mere good pleasure?" The truth, and any simple statement of it, seems to arouse suspicion and excitement in many minds. But why should it?

When we learn that God does all things "according to his own mere good pleasure," we should be assured that all things are done in perfect accordance with the highest demands of goodness, tenderness, wisdom and righteousness, for God takes pleasure in nothing less. When we learn of a statue that it was carved by Michael Angelo's work uninterfered with by any one, and simply according to his own mere good pleasure, we are not disturbed, for we know that he was a master. When we read of a symphony that it was written by Beethoven, an expression of his own unaided musical genius, and to be performed without the change of a single note, people are satisfied. The statue is all right. The symphony is all right. But when God calls a universe into being, peoples it and provides for it in infinite wisdom, power and goodness, there are those to hold up their hands and cry out in horror against what they suppose to be some expression of blind, unreasoning, cruel tyranny.

If Beethoven can be trusted with a symphony, and Angelo with a statue, God can be trusted with a universe, and we are to feel no more uneasiness or rebellion as concerns God's direction of his universe than we are as to the music or the marble. If we have any just or proper conception of what is involved, we shall be content to let God be God.

The doctrine of election has many mysteries. Why should it not have? Why should any one expect to understand God's reasons for everything he has done, especially when he has not seen fit to give us his reasons? But if, because I do not know God's reasons and he has not told me what they are, I cry out that he is unreasonable, or arbitrary, or tyrannical, I rave and prate like a fool. God never does anything without a perfect reason. I do not undertake to sit in judgment on Mozart's music, for I am sure that he had a skill at which I can only wonder. I do not undertake to cry down Thorwaldsen, for I know him as a master. But some people would snatch the pen or the chisel from the hand of God as though he were not to be trusted with the work he devised in eternity.

There are mysteries in God's election. But it is the most unspeakable arrogance for any mortal to presume to find fault with God's plan and work. Let it be settled, for all time, that God never does, has done, or will do, anything without the most perfect reason for it. We are only little children. We can trust God with that which he alone can do.

A father takes his child, and, placing him at his side in the carriage, takes the reins and drives out on the ride. The father knows whither he is going and why. He goes over plain and hill, through forest and valley, now east, now north, always guiding the horses himself, and going now rapidly and now slowly. He has, say fifty, miles to drive. The number of miles can not be increased nor diminished by the child at his side. It is of the mere good pleasure of the father, so far as that child is concerned. What does he do? Does he suspicion his father? Never. Does he call him arbitrary or tyrannical? No. Is he fearful or rebellious? No. Each little thing his father bids he is glad to do by the way, and in the evening they reach their destination and greet their loved ones and are glad.

We have had revealed to us something of the perceptive will of God, so that we may know how to live and act, how to obey and how to be saved, and how at last to come to our eternal home in peace. We have had revealed to us little of the decretive will of God. He has not told us his plan in regard to everything and every soul. But he has told us, each one, that if we will only trust his dear Son we shall be saved and blessed forever. Questions of curiosity he does not answer. Much that he does we know not now. Many things we may never understand, so long as we are finite and God is infinite, but we shall surely come, if we are his children, to the condition in which we are sure that God does all things wisely, lovingly and well. There we shall be content. There, even now, we are content. The best possible outcome of this universe, and of all who are in it, is assured since God controls. I want nothing else or less than this. That this is to be the outcome I am assured, since all is in the hands of God. If I am content to let God's pleasure be wrought out in my heart and soul, the result will be more satisfactory than the music of Mozart on the marble of Angelo.—Herald and Presbyter.

FRIENDSHIP AND RIGHT.

Many a sin is committed that friendship is expected to justify. It is not exactly what we would have done if we had been left to ourselves to decide, but under the circumstances we could not see what else to do. Rather than be disobliging, rather than be thought Puritanical or "righteous overmuch," we yield, waive the obligation to conscience in favor of the desire to oblige a friend, and charge the debt of conscience to the score of kind feeling. But it is at bottom a question of allegiance. The Master asks an undivided heart, and we have no right to betray him in the home of our friends. To hate father and mother and friends for his sake is ethical, not emotional. It is a question of loyalty. To please them would we displease him? If so, we are not his followers, but theirs. No man can obey two masters. Solomon's building a heathen shrine to oblige a heathen wife was heathenism pure and simple, idolatry root and branch. To neglect a duty, to compromise a principle, to pull down colors, to do a little wrong rather than be thought a religious prig, bigoted, or, at least, peculiar, is a great temptation; but then is the time for the uncompromising, "the everlasting No!" to ring within us, and firm loyalty to God to be seen without. Friendship that calls for disloyalty to God needs destruction or reconstruction.—Sunday School Times.

TWO MEN IN ONE.

One man is always made up of two—the ideal and the real person. In his own thoughts, usually, the conceited man poses as the ideal character. He conceives of himself as being just such a man as he ought to be. It is a delusion very gratifying to his vanity. He does not see his chief faults or realize his commonest mistakes and failures. But to his friends and neighbors it is oftener the actual man who is visible, the man in every-day clothes, who lives in the basement instead of among the clouds. He may appear as weak and irritable, sordid and selfish, while he fancies he seems strong, self-controlled, magnanimous, and elevated. When he gets a glimpse of the actual man, he is as much startled as one who unexpectedly catches a side view of himself reflected, in a distant mirror, from another mirror before which he stands. It may be a great gain to see ourselves as others see us, that we may be stimulated to bring the real nearer to the ideal, instead of attributing to ourselves the graces and perfections which we only gaze at from afar.—Ex.

CONDUCTED BY REV. A. D. McCLURE.

Third Quarter—Lesson IV.

July 25, 1897.—Acts xvii. 22-34.

Commit to memory verses 24-27.

Subject. Paul Preaching in Athens.

Golden Text. "God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Jno. 14 : 24.

CATECHISM.

Question 50. What is required in the second commandment?

Answer. The second commandment requireth the receiving, observing and keeping pure and entire all such religious worship and ordinances as God hath appointed in His Word.

Time. A. D. 52.

Place. Athens, capital of Attica in Greece.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul was now about fifty years old and alone in Athens the great metropolis of literature and art for the world. It was named for Athenae, the goddess Minerva, and was founded by Cecrops about 1556 B. C. It contained about 150,000 inhabitants.

Silas and Timothy were left at Berea and Thessalonica and Luke at Philippi.

When persecution arose in Berea as it had in Thessalonica, Paul's friends hastened him away secretly leaving Silas and Timothy in Macedonia, because Paul could escape more easily alone and the others, less prominent, could remain and finish the work. Paul was brought to the sea and then sailed two hundred miles by places of historic interest to Athens. Paul found the city full of idols. He began his work in the Jewish synagogues on the Sabbath, but went daily to the Agora, or market place and discussed religious themes. He aroused so much interest that the Ephesians and Stoics, leaders in philosophy and religion became interested in him. Prof. Ramsay shows reason that the hearing of Paul was before the council of Areopagus as a stranger teaching "some new thing." Imagine Paul then surrounded by the philosophers and professors of Athens university and lecturers. This was the scene to which our lesson would introduce us.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 22. In the midst of Mars Hill. Either the place or the court of Areopagus. This court existed as a criminal tribunal before the time of the Athenian lawgiver Solon and was a most venerable and august body. It is not probable that Paul was formally arraigned for trial before this body. The object of the movement was rather to bring Paul to an elevated place and to the hearing of the learned. Too superstitious. Means literally more divinity fearing than the rest of the Greeks. Paul would say that they were very religious as objects of religion was on every side. Their religion was idolatrous and false. This appearance of Paul at Athens is one of the most interesting events in Christian history. It was in a city midway between Jerusalem and Rome which three cities were representatives of religion, intellect and power.

Vs. 23. As I passed by or along in wandering about the city and beheld with attention, your devoutness, not acts of worship or people at worship, but objects of worship, such as temples, altars and images. To the unkown God rather means an unknown god as in worshipping many gods they feared lest they might omit some one. Whom. (R. V. What.) Ye ignorantly worship. As some Divine they felt must exist besides those they knew, they worshipped not knowing His name and nature and attributes. This unknown Deity he proceeded to declare unto them.

Vs. 24. God. The true God, not an idol or one of many divinities, but the Creator of all things, the Supreme Being, the One God. The Lord of heaven and earth, of wisdom, power, omnipresence, goodness, truth and authority. Dwelleth not in temples made with hands like the gods they worshipped. This is a reference to the dying speech of Stephen, to which Paul must have listened and which made such a powerful impression on Paul's life.

Vs. 25. Neither is worshipped (R. V. served with men's hands as idols are.) For the true God dwelleth in human hearts and is served in men's consecrated lives

Vs. 26. Of our blood. One ancestor, source, or family, all nations of men. In this sense all are brethren and the Gospel is suitable and destined for all races of men. Determined. God is not only the Architect and Preserver of all, but also the Governor of each people and watchful and does not dwell apart from the affairs of men as did the Epicurian gods.

Vs. 27. That they should seek the Lord. The object of the divine Providence is to bring them to a knowledge of the one true God as Lord and Saviour Might feel after him. Is the position of all idolatry and modern systems of religion that leave out Christ and the inspired Word of God. They ask questions to which Christ is the answer revealed in the Bible. Not far from every one of us. In His love and care, in the voice of conscience, in spiritual yearnings, in His Spirit and in His Word.

Vs. 28. In Him we live. Dependent on Him every moment for our life.

Vs. 29. We ought not. Using the first person Paul skilfully avoids making a personal charge and losing their attention and interest.

Vs. 30. God winked at. Overlooked, as sins of ignorance. But now since Christ came with full revelation of God and messages to men.

Vs. 31. Judge the world. Without bribery or covering up, or mistake in right eousness. By that man, the Lord Jesus Christ. Give assurance. A ground for faith to rest upon with confidence.

Vs. 32. When they heard. The address of which we have but the outline.

Vs. 33. Paul went out from among them, and we never hear of his visiting Athens again, nor does he ever mention it in his letters.

Vs. 34, Areopagite. A member of the court of Mars Hill and therefore a prominent and probably learned man. A church was founded in Athens later, and the Parthenon became a Christian temple.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The prominent point in Paul's preaching as proof of the power of God and the assurance of faith was the resurrection.

1. Athens was a picture of the human heart needing to know the fact and doctrine of the resurrection and its power.

2. It shows that the highest culture fails to make holy.

3. The failure of Paul's preaching was not in himself, but the hearts and prejudices of the people.

Notes :

When the object of worship is not worthy of the homage bestowed, or when the worship is prompted by other than a desire to honor and glorify the object upon whom it is bestowed the worship is false. Extreme instances are the worship of idols which manifestly are liable to the first condition, and which are prompted mainly by fear of offending supposed power to hurt, or oftener it may be, of appeasing anger presumed to exist and which threatens to destroy.

True worship can only be sincerest homage proceeding from right disposition of heart and designed to honor and glorify supremest excellences in the person worshiped. True worship then can be directed to God alone

When we come to consider how God shall be worshiped our Saviour tells us : God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth. This injunction includes all the essential details of mode and manner of worship; but more in detail: In order to spiritual and truthful worship there must be intelligence. We must know from God's revelation to us in His Word what He is, in order to due reverence and due disposition of heart and mind, and we must know His will concerning the manner of our approach and conduct. Thus our worship will be heartful expression of supreme adoration, springing from and maintained in rightness of spirit. Worship must be truthful—that is absolutely free from any insincerity of design or purpose, and unmixed with any selfishness, or from that which would detract in any way from the honor and glory due to God alone.

From the above we may deduce for practical consideration :

That forms and ceremonies or peculiar garbs or artistic methods, however serviceable they may be in attracting or in pleasing, for their own sakes, add nothing to, if they do not detract from, the worship proper to the sanctuary. If in any case they really aid devotion they are not only tolerable but desirable.

It is a mistake to suppose that worship must of necessity be conducted more spiritually and more in accordance with God's will, just in proportion to the degree that plainness is considered or elegance discarded in our houses of worship. Where comfort or elegance are the means of drawing the soul from communion with God they are altogether harmful, and they do seriously detract from true and proper worship, but elegance and comfort in the house of God may come from the desire to bring forward our best gifts and thus to honor our Maker, and in such case they result from motives that are an inspiration and a help to sincerest worship.

Reverence is an essential to worship which sometimes is lightly esteemed or considered. Yet God is specially jealous in this regard. We are glad to think of God as our Father, but in approaching Him as children coming to a father, which is all welcome to Him, we must not forget that God is our King—high and lifted up and supreme in His majesty, and that God is our Judge—infinitely holy and infinitely wise, while we are despicably sinful and ignorant. All lightness, or thoughtlessness—and surely all flippancy—must be abhorrent to Him. Whether in prayer or praise, in the temple or elsewhere we are brought, as it were, face to face with Him. The above includes that forgetfulness of proprieties of time or place, that permits whispering or other irreverent conduct or demeanor in the house of worship.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

Over twenty thousand visitors are said to be in San Francisco during the session of the C. E. Convention. Huge buildings are filled at every service with enthusiastic workers, who represent the thirty-seven thousand societies in the United States. Beginning with the early morning prayer-meeting, the entire day is devoted to religious exercises and discussions of practical work, one hour being reserved for worshipping in silence. Reports of the Junior work and the Mothers' Society have been most encouraging, and the work in all the branches shows deep zeal and consecrated labor.

Of especial interest have been the visits to Chinatown conducted by Rev. Kee Gam, head of the Congregational Chinese mission and the Chinese children from the Occidental Home, Chinatown.

Every arrangement has been made for the pleasure and comfort of guests and the charms of California are being exhibited with pride by the citizens of San Francisco.

ARROWOOD. — Mrs. Mary Ann Arrowood, a daughter of John Froneberger, was born in Gaston county, N. C., Jan. 15th, 1820, and died in same county Jan. 3rd, 1897. On December 2nd, 1841, Mary Froneberger was married to Wm. Arrowood and settled near Long Creek church where she lived until her death. From this marriage resulted eleven children, seven sons and four daughters. Three of those sons are Presbyterian ministers, viz : Rev. W. B. Arrowood, of Laurinburg, N. C., Rev. R. S. Arrowood, in charge of a group of churches in Iredell county, N. C., and Rev. M. C. Arrowood, Evangelist of Mecklenburg Presbytery in Union and Anson counties, N. C. It is a remarkable fact that of this large household of boys and girls not one has failed to confese Christ before men and live a consistent life.

Early in life Mrs. Arrowood connected herself with the Lutheran church, the church of her fathers, but after her marriage joined the Presbyterian church with her husband. Being the wife of an elder, she was brought into close contact with the workings of a large country congregation, which did much to develop and intensify her love for the Church, for whose interests no sacrifice was too great. But her love for the Church did not cause her to forget the poor, the needy and the suffering about her, for these were the special objects of her sympathy and care. "It is a pleasure to testify that no pastor ever had a more loyal and devoted friend. She was ever ready to excuse his short comings and encourage his labors with kindly sympathy, and was more anxious for the poor and the destitute of the community to enjoy his ministry than to claim it for herself. "When I became her pastor the active years of her life had passed, but, being a woman of fine health her mind was still vigorous and strong and much of her time was spent in reading. Her abiding motherly care for her children was strikingly brought out in two little instances near the close of her life, the one a piece of unfinished handy work for a son in another county who had daughters large enough to have performed it, and the saying concerning another son, far away from home on an untried journey: "I think of him every day." She was buried from Long Creek church in the presence of many relatives and friends, including all her children save two, one living in far away Colorado and one having preceded her in infancy to the spirit land.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE SABBATH DAY.

Six days of toil! With weary mind
We view the week just passed awa y
We long for rest, and, joyful, turn
To greet the holy Sabbath day.

Blest day of rest, how oft the saints
Were gladdened by thy shining morn;
How longed they for that peaceful day,
When men their souls with grace adorn.

So we would upward turn our face,
On this, the Lord's own blessed day;
And peer into the heavenly realm,
To hear what God the Lord doth say.

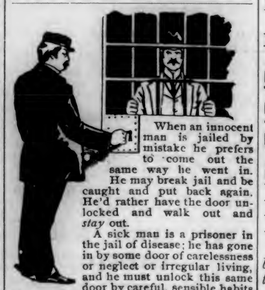
Let church be filled, let heart attend
Upon the stated means of grace;
Oh, let us love the prayer, the song,
That rise within this sacred place.

And as the Word of love is preached,
May all our hearts within us burn,
As Jesus calls from heaven above:
"Ye sons of men, return, return."

And as the evening shadows fall,
And men to God, the Father, pray,
Oh, may the hearts of all cry out:
"Lord, we have seen thy face to-day."

—Alexander Corkey, in Herald and Presbyter.

"ANNIE LAURIE."



In a charming book of travels by Theodore F. Wolfe, we find a lovely account of Annie Laurie. Most persons think she is only a musical creation in the song so widely known, but she really lived in Scotland, at the ancient manor house of Maxwellton. She was born on December 15th, 1682. Her father was Robert Laurie, and Jean Riddle her mother. In the last century, much of the venerable edifice was destroyed, but the older portion remains intact since Annie Laurie dwelt there. Her boudoir is in the second story of the tower. A portrait of her hangs there—an impressively beautiful woman, large tender eyes, long oval features and profusion of dark brown hair. Her hands like her "fairy feet, were of exceptional smallness and beauty. The lover who immortalized her was William Douglass, of England. He met her at a ball in Edinburgh, and they were so attracted to each other that her father took her home out of his way. He followed her to Nithedale, and they met in "Maxwellton's bonnie braes." She gave "her promise true," and he went off to the wars. He wrote the song "Annie Laurie." It is different in the original. When he came back, he found her the wife of another — Alexander Ferguson—a wealthy laird near by; lived to be seventy-six years of age and is buried in the churchyard of Glencairn.—Ex.

Florence Nightingale received her Christian name from the town in which she was born—Florence, Italy. Her name is not Nightingale, but Shore, her father being a Nottingham banker who inherited the estates of Peter Nightingale on condition that he assume the name.

HOW NIAGARA STOPPED FLOWING.

It seems almost incredible that at one time in its history the greatest and most wonderful waterfall in the world actually ran dry. Nevertheless it is an established fact that this occurred on March 29th, 1848, and for a few hours scarcely any water passed over Niagara Falls. The winter of that year had been an exceptionally severe one, and ice of unusual thickness had formed on Lake Erie. The warm spring rains loosened this congealed mass, and on the day in question a brisk east wind drove the ice far up into the lake. About sunset the wind suddenly veered round, and blew a heavy gale from the west. This naturally turned the ice in its course, and, bringing it down to the mouth of the Niagara river, piled it up in a solid impenetrable wall.

So closely was it packed and so great was its force that in a short time the outlet to the lake was completely choked up, and little or no water could possibly escape. In a very short space of time the water below this frozen barrier passed over the falls, and the next morning the people living in the neighborhood were treated to a most extraordinary spectacle. The roaring, tumbling rapids above the falls were almost obliterated, and nothing but the cold, black rocks were visible in all directions. The news quickly spread and crowds of spectators flocked to view the scene, the banks on each side of the river being lined with people during the whole day. At last there was a break in the ice. It was released from its restraint, the pent-up wall of water rushed downward, and Niagara was itself again. —Exchange.

When an innocent man is jailed by mistake he prefers to come out the same way he went in.

He may break jail and be caught and put back again. He'd rather have the door unlocked and walk out and stay out.

A sick man is a prisoner in the jail of disease; he has gone in by some door of carelessness or neglect or irregular living, and he must unlock this same door by careful, sensible habits if he wants to be a free, well man again.

If dyspepsia and biliousness or constipation is the way he got into disease, he has got to overcome just those troubles before he can get out.

The majority of diseases begin with some trouble of the digestive organs or of the liver, which prevents the supply of proper nourishment to the system. The best remedy for these troubles is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, because it gives the digestive and blood-making organs power to assimilate food and transform it into pure, nourishing blood, vitalized with an abundance of red corpuscles.

It acts directly upon the liver and gives it capacity to filter all bilious impurities out of the circulation. It builds up solid, muscular flesh and healthy nerve-force.

In obstinate constipation the "Discovery" should be used in conjunction with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the most natural and thoroughly scientific laxative ever devised. The "Pellets" regulate and invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One is a gentle laxative; two act as a mild cathartic.

"My wife had suffered for seven years with dyspepsia, sick headache and costiveness," writes Mr. Alonzo D. Jameson, of Dunbarton, Merrimack Co., N. H., "we tried many doctors and many kinds of medicine, but all were of no avail. We purchased six bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which together with the 'Pleasant Pellets' has entirely restored my wife's health, and we cannot say enough in thanks to you for these valuable medicines."

TWO PENNIES.

Two beautiful, shining pennies!
Bright, and yellow and new!
Don't tell me about the heathen—
I want them myself; I do.

I want a top and some marbles,
A sword, and a gun that shoots;
A candy cane and a trumpet,
A knife and a pair of boots.

But then, what if I were a heathen,
With no precious Bible to tell
The story of Jesus our Saviour,
Who loved little children so well!

For Jesus, you know, may be asking
This question of you and of me;
"Did you carry my love to your brothers
And sisters 'way over the sea?"

I guess you may send them my pennies,
Perhaps in some way they will grow,
For little brooks grow to be rivers,
And pennies make dollars, you know.

I'm not very wise, but there's one thing
I think must be certainly true,
If little boys ought to give pennies,
Big men should give dollars, don't you?

HOW JIM BEGAN TO BE A MISSIONARY.

BY RACHEL RICHARDSON.

Mrs. Cuthbert was just the right kind of mother for boys. She said quietly:

"Oh, well, Jim is not a bad boy, I do not think he can be in any mischief, and he certainly has not been stolen for he would have roused the whole of Myrtle Avenue if an attempt had been made to kidnap him." And so they quietly ate their lunch and went back to work.

Some two hours later, the click of of the gate latch was heard, and both ladies went to the window, and then both burst into laughter, for there came Jim leading his forlorn patients, only the number had increased by a very dirty girl of four or five.

Jim led the way triumphantly, his face wearing a look of importance that would have been very funny, if it had not been so touching. He had gone out into the highways and had gathered in some of the sick and suffering!

Mrs. Cuthbert laid down her work and met them at the door.

"Why, my boy where have you been, and who are these children?"

"W'y mamma, I dis vent to fin' some sick and sufferin' to pit in my hospital. I am doin' to make 'em well, an' you dis div 'em a whole lot ter eat, 'cause dey's awful hung'y; an' Nick's eye got bangded, 'an de baby's dot de hoopin' cough, an' dis girl she's, she's—a she dis comed to see my hospital so she can come here w en she gets sick!"

Mrs. Cuthbert found it pretty hard work to control herself, but managed to say quietly:

"Well, mother's boy meant right, but you know this is not a "sure enough hospital, and I am sorry you made the children think so. I will give them something to eat and then they must go."

Jim's eyes grew wider and wider open, and began to fill with tears.

"Oh, mamma! mamma! don' you want me to help people?"

"Yes, but you must always ask mother first. You are only a little boy and do not know how to work by yourself."

Then Mrs. Cuthbert told the children to sit down, while she went to get them something to eat.

Poor Jim felt very badly. He stood for a moment with a very shamed-faced expression on his face, but suddenly he remembered that he had not only promised to heal them, but to give them bread and meat, but candy too.

He went to his mother with his head bowed down, and said very humbly:

"Mamma, I spec' I'll have to dive de chillen' some canny, 'cause I promised to make 'em well an' dat you dive 'em bwead, an' canny too maybe. I mus' do dat, an' I fink I oughter to put a clean cloth on Nick's eye, don' you?"

Mrs. Cuthbert was very much touched and pleased, and put her arm around the little doctor and said:

"Mother's little Good Samaritan!" She hunted up some candy, and some clean soft cloth, and then fixed a waiter of bread and meat, and took all out to the astonished children.

They ate greedily, and then Mrs. Cuthbert bound up the boy's eye with a clean cloth.

When they had gone Mrs. Cuthbert explained to Jim why it would not do for him to try hospital work by himself, but in her heart she thanked God for this missionary spirit in her boy.

The years passed swiftly and all the time Jim was trying to do the Master's work among the sick and suffering, and he learned too, what "lost soule" meant, and has helped to find more than one and lead him to Jesus.

When he is a man he means to be a "sure enough missionary" he says, but his mamma tells him that he is one now, and that he began to be one the day he brought his first patients home to his "hospital!"

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Editor:—I have never written to you before. My sister wrote to you some time ago. I have a colt, its name is Bell. It is more than a year old. I have a little calf. We have a great deal of fruit this year. I am saving my money to get me a bicycle. I have fifty cents on it now. My brother and I have a bat and ball and we have a nice time playing ball. My cousin and I have a nice time bathing in the Catawba river. We are learning to swim. I will close asking a question for the Puzzle Department.

Your friend,

Editor N. C. Presbyterian:—Dear Sir—I am a little girl eight years old. I have no pets but a cat. I could not write good and so I got papa to write for me. I have been going to school but my school is out. We had a spelling match that night we had a large crowd. I studied second reader and spelling book. I will close for this time.

Your little friend,
VIOLA J. PAISLEY.

McLeansville, N. C.

Dear Mr. McLaurin:—Perhaps you will wonder to hear from us who live in such a distant country. Though we do do not know you each other in body, we are all one in Christ, for we are all believing in Him. We are all learning at Joshigakuin. Our school is a missionary school, so we have four American missionaries. We are all in the same building and are under the care of Miss Leete and Miss Gardener. We saw in a paper Miss Leete showed us, that some little American girls had recited perfectly the Shorter Catechism. We four girls have done the same, and received from Miss Leete a very pretty Bible.

We thank you Christians for sending us the Bible and missionaries to teach us its holy truths. Hope you would remember us in your prayer, that we may grow stronger in spirit and to do the works which God gives us to do.

Yours truly.

Dear Presbyterian:—I am a little stranger to you, but I thought maybe you would like a letter from this part of the country. I read the letters in Uncle John's papers. I am a little girl eleven years old. I go to the Presbyterian Sunday-school. My teacher is Miss Gussie Struper. There are six girls and six boys in my class. My brother Harry is older than I. His Sunday-school teacher gave him a medal yesterday for perfect lessons and good behavior. My teacher gave me a cent and told me to see how much I could make and I made ninety cents and my little brother George made ninety cents. My eldest brother has just come home from school, and we are so glad to see him. I am the only little girl, have three brothers. I won't write any more for fear you will not give my letter a place in your paper.

Your unknown friend,

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The cotton acreage of the Sharon section will not equal that of last year.

Mr. L. A. Weedon has removed his shuttle factory from Fayetteville to Wilmington.

The blackberry crop in the Pineville section is a great success.

Crops in the Rolesville section, Wake county, are looking well. As are those also in the Henderson neighborhood.

A monument was recently unveiled in Newton in memory of eleven men who were killed while protecting the frontier settlements from the depredations of Indians during the Revolution. They were under the command of Mathias Barringer. The principal address of the day was delivered by Dr. Barringer of the University of Virginia.

DOMESTIC.

The coal strike continues in Ohio. Several large shops have closed for lack of fuel and a coal famine is threatened in Chicago unless a settlement can be affected at an early date.

While a gang of workmen were excavating on the line of the street railway in Lexington, Ky., one of them struck what appeared to be a piece of pipe, but which proved to be a sixty-four pound dynamite cartridge. A fearful explosion followed and six negroes were blown to atoms.

Gen. Booth-Tucker, American Commander of the Salvation Army, has called upon Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture in regard to the former's scheme to colonize the people of the overcrowded city districts in the country. Mr. Wilson offered to aid the scheme as far as possible and recommended the vicinity of Washington as a good location for small farms on account of the desirable market for farm products, also the cheap price for land.

The heat in the North and West has been intense. Deaths are reported from many cities. The prostrations in Cincinnati and the neighboring towns are stated as high as five hundred. In Boston the maximum heat was 110. There has, however, been a cooler wave all over the country.

Farmers are pleased with the elegant harvest weather of the past two weeks in Baltimore county. Not only has the weather been propitious, but the crops as a general rule are far beyond the average. Nearly all the wheat and hay in the county has been harvested. The oat harvest, which also promises an abundant yield, will come next.

The building and steel department of the North mill of the Lackawana Iron and Steel Company of Scranton, Pa., has resumed operations and the South mill will begin work in a few days.

St. Augustine, Fla., has a seed bed for celery which contains 350,000 young plants which will be transplanted at Linton, nearly three hundred miles distant in the fall.

FOREIGN.

Saadi Bey has been appointed mutesariff of Urfa, Asiatic Turkey. As he is suspected of young Turkey affiliations, this is tantamount to sending him into exile. Saadi Bey was the chief accountant of the ministry of commerce.

The property loss in South France by the recent floods is stated to be $40,000,000, and the number of persons drowned 300.

Owing to the drought in New South Wales and South Australia it will be necessary to import thousands of tons of California wheat.

The Queen Regent has pardoned one hundred and eight Cubans confined in the Spanish penal establishments of Centa Samarizas Fernandolo. The condition of the pardon will not allow them to return to Cuba.

Horner for N. C. Boys.

Willis G. Peace, of North Carolina, won his appointment to West Point in a competitive examination in 1896. Shortly after he entered West Point he was selected on class days as the first of four model soldiers on all points to represent his class. Again in a review just held before the Secretary of War he was selected as one of the four models. Mr. Peace was also one of only three men in his class to receive no demerits during the year. Boys prepared at Horner School win honors wherever they go.

Lyman A. Cotten while at the Horner School, Oxford, N. C., won his appointment to Annapolis in a competitive examination. He stands among the first in a large class in which are many college graduates.

The Minutes of the General Assembly of 1897, are about ready for distribution. Orders should be sent to Publication Office, 1001 East Main Street, Richmond, Va. Price 25 cents per copy.

JOSEPH R. WILSON,
Stated Clerk.

At a recent competitive examination for appointments to West Point and Annapolis both appointments were awarded to boys prepared at Horner School, Oxford, N. C.

THINGS USEFUL.

It is said that if horse radish is applied to the temples when one is suffering with a neuralgia headache it will give relief.

Lemon Sauce.—Mix one tablespoonful cornstarch into three of cold water. Stir in one cup of boiling water and cook until clear and thick. Add a teaspoonful butter, the grated yellow rind and half the juice of a lemon, and one cup granulated sugar; simmer two minutes; beat one egg, add to it two teaspoonfuls cold water; pour the boiling mixture into this, stirring rapidly. Heat again, but do not boil. Serve.

In ornamenting summer cottages a bare corner may be made very effective at a trifling cost. Secure an empty nail keg from a hardware store, cover it with ebony paint and gild the hoops. Partly fill the keg with sand to give it weight, and fasten a piece of board over the top a little larger than the keg. Place it in the vacant corner and cover the wooden top with a fringe-trimmed square of pretty silk or cretonne. Stand an unused ginger jar or a cheap effective vase upon this pedestal and fill it with grasses, dried ferns and cattails.

MY PETITION.

Lord, who art merciful as well as just,
Incline Thine ear to me, a child of dust!
Not what I would, O Lord, I offer Thee,
Alas, but what I can.

Father Almighty, who hast made me man,
And bade me look to heaven, for Thou art there,
Accept my sacrifice and humble prayer;
Four things which are not in Thy treasury
I lay before Thee, Lord, with this petition—
My nothingness, my wants,
My sins and my contrition.
—Southey.

We must be richer and happier for having been loved, if the true wealth of man is in the heart. What we have enjoyed already may be disturbed and interrupted, yet nothing can rob the past of its joy. Nothing can make us unlive the happy golden years, when we walked side by side with those who are now in their graves. Nay, if we could have looked forward, would we have refused our marriage vows, because in the course of years one would be taken and the other left? Would we have preferred to go through the world childless, because the sadness of a little grave may for a moment seem worse than the stillness of an empty nursery? Would we have no joys in life, lest haply we lose them? Shall we refuse to love because in front of us is the tomb? No, no! The heart says no. The reason says no. The conscience says no. * * * If we are Christians, we shall take life as God ordains it, drink the cup as He mixes it, taste joy when He permits it, accept sorrow when He ordains it, and, remembering that here we have no continuing city, and that our rest is to come, wait for our "gathering together unto Him."—Bishop Thorold.

REV. GEORGE SUMMEY, D. D.

Our illustration this week is of a native of the Old North State, Rev. George Summey, D. D., the Chancellor of the Southwestern Presbyterian University, Clarksville, Tenn. Dr. Summey was born in Asheville, N. C., June 3d, 1853, and is the son of A. T. Summey, Esq., now the oldest resident of that city, and for about fifty years a faithful ruling elder. Dr. Summey's mother was S. Rose Morrison, so that the subject of our sketch belongs to that family which has given more ministers to the Church, in the past four generations, than perhaps any family in the South. In the outline of the Morrison family and their descendants which was published by Dr. Rumple, some years ago, it was shown that scores of preachers of the Gospel have come of the line of the old Rocky River Ruling Elder Morrison. Dr. Summey was prepared for college in the widely known classical school of Col. Stephen Lee, of Asheville, his step-grandfather, and at a very early age entered the University of Georgia, and afterwards Davidson College, graduating at the latter institution with the first honor men the same month in which he was seventeen. Entering Union Seminary in Virginia immediately, he completed the full course there and received his certificate in 1873. He was licensed by the Presbytery of Mecklenburg in August, 1872, and took the charge of Bolivar church, Tenn., in May, 1873, before reaching twenty years of age, being the youngest minister in the history of our Church. In 1875 he became pastor of the Ninth Street, now Madison Avenue church, in Covington, Ky., where he labored for something over five years, the church doubling in membership during his pastorate. After being laid aside, from a throat trouble, for nearly a year, he had charge, for three years, of the work at Graham and Burlington, N. C., both of which churches developed rapidly in numbers and activity. He then became pastor of the church at Chester, S. C., where he labored for nearly nine years, developing one of the largest and strongest churches in South Carolina, and leaving behind him, in the beautiful building of that congregation, a structure which all regard as a monument to his energy and activity. Here he also devoted much attention, and with large success, to mission work in the region about Chester. He was for a number of years chairman of the Presbytery's Executive Committee, and contributed much to the advancement of the evangelistic interests of the Presbytery. In 1892 Dr. Summey was called to the Chancellorship of the Southwestern Presbyterian University, in Clarksville, Tenn., and for five years has devoted himself with success to the interests of that important institution. Throughout his ministry he has been greatly interested in educational matters. While in Covington, Ky., he was connected with the School Board, while in Chester he was a member and then Chairman of the School Board, and for years he was an active trustee of the Davidson College Board, and also a director of the Seminary at Columbia. He is now the President of the Board of School Commissioners of Clarksville, Tenn. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, in 1891, from the institution which subsequently called him to its head. Since 1887 Dr. Summey has been the managing editor of the Presbyterian Quarterly, which he founded, and the great success of which, as a theological review, is due to his activity. For a few years he was also the half owner, as he was with a distinguished Northern minister, also the founder, of the great Review of the Church north of the Potomac. In the midst of his many duties and cares, he has found time to travel extensively, through Europe and the East, and his services are often in requisition for lectures, addresses, etc.

Dr. Summey was married in 1875 to Elizabeth Rebekah Worth, a native of Wilmington, the daughter of the late Thomas Clarkson Worth, whose memorial window in the First Presbyterian church of Wilmington preserves the memory of the beloved physician and church officer who gave his life to the yellow-fever sufferers in 1862. His wife has been noted for her usefulness and helpfulness, a woman of great simplicity and straightforwardness, unaffected, sincere and earnest, of fine literary tastes and a constant helpmeet to her husband in all the work of his life. They have four promising children, two sons and two daughters, one of the latter already distinguishing herself in gifts of expression and vocal music.

A sketch of Dr. Summey's life cannot be complete without alluding to the Union Seminary Class of '73, of which he was a member. For the usefulness and activity of its members, and their success in their ministry, it is the most notable class that the seminary ever graduated. Among its members are Dr. Davis, of China, Mr. Painter, of the same mission, Dr. Rosebro, of Petersburg, Dr. Cannon, of St. Louis, Dr. Kerr, of Richmond, Dr. Turnbull, of Durham, Dr. Rose, of Morganton, Dr. Woods, of Memphis, Dr. Wiggins, of Texas, Dr. Rawlings, now of Virginia, besides others who have been among the most useful men in the Church. The class has been most remarkably preserved, only two of the number, Johnston, of Memphis, and Gammon, of Richmond, having passed away in the past twenty-three years.

There are millions of dazzling pearls and gems hid in the ocean's depths and the dark caves of the earth, but if they could all be gathered up, they could be counted, but the riches which dwell in Christ can not be counted. They are unspeakable, but they are all for the supply of the need of His trusting people,

THE YOKE OF CHRIST.

Yoke is defined as a wooden frame by which two oxen are connected for drawing. Its most obvious use is to put the animals so connected under the absolute control of their owner. From this it has become when figuratively used expressive of servitude, bondage, abject subjection. In the Christian life and service there is a yoke to which the signification last given may apply with singular precision—the yoke of legalism. In the Christian life we say, for it is not for us to assume that those who so bind themselves have not accepted the invitation to come unto Christ—though they fail to take the further step, to take His yoke upon them. We would not undertake to define how little or how feeble that faith may be, that yet is saving faith. To return from the digression the legalist not only takes the yoke, but makes the yoke that he takes. He takes the letter which killeth and sets out certain rounds of duties, or certain forms for observance, to which with more or less exactness he rigidly conforms. He may thus be liberal or serviceable, for instance, but his charities, either in gifts or service, must be individualized, not so much that they may be conspicious, as that they may serve as a comfort or a solace to his conscience, which seeks in them as in other things for rest and peace. They serve another purpose, too, they constitute a standard by which others may be judged, for the legalist is even more exacting as to what would be required of others than of what should be claimed from himself. But there is no peace in this; no rest of soul is possible; the yoke is galling, it is not the yoke of Christ.

Where the beasts of service are used the yoke is forced upon them, they are expected to resist and once secured they require to be driven. Not so with the yoke of Christ. Christ forces his yoke upon none. That yoke must be voluntarily assumed. It does not imply a bject servitude, but loving and entire submission. It may be the yoke of Christ as it implies a submission such as Christ assumed: "Lo I come to do thy will O God"—the yoke implied in his absolute submission in all things to the Father even to the taking upon Himself "the form of a servant and becoming obedient unto death." To take the yoke of Christ is in glad surrender and joyous service to go forward in the way that Christ marks out, making His will one's own.

But this is not all there is in taking the yoke of Christ upon one. Taking the yoke is an act not only, but a process, it means action not only, but progressive action; it is a learning of Christ, a knowing more and more of Him, drawing nearer and nearer to him, a constant leaning more clingingly to Him, a becoming more and more like Him. And the reason for this learning of Christ's is found in Christ's qualifications as a teacher—a teacher by precept indeed, but a teacher also by example—one who in himself illustrates and adorns the very lessons He would enforce. He who "when He was reviled reviled not again, when He suffered threatened not; but committed His cause to Him who judgeth righteously."

And the result of this yoke-taking and Christ learning: Rest for the soul. 'Tis here alone that rest is found—rest for the weary soul. Rest! enchanting word! what visions of delight it conjures up! Rest for the weary body, rest for the wearied mind, what a longed-for blessing this—but rest for the troubled spirit, rest for the weary soul, heavy-laden with sin yet longing to be free. Rest with peace of conscience and joy in the Holy Ghost. Supremest of blessings this, and worth all labor and toil and hardship to attain.

And yet Christ's yoke is easy and His burden is light. One prime purpose of a yoke is to relieve the strain of the burden-bearing and to lighten it. It is not then an instrument of torture, but a most serviceable help. A forceful suggestion is made by a writer, that the yoke is for two, and in bearing the yoke one has always the loving, tender Saviour by his side, to impart the needed grace and strength and to divide the burden with him. Another thought we gather: The yoke of Christ is always lined with love. And says Spurgeon, very slightly paraphrased: "What a lining is love. A cross of iron, lined with love would never gall the neck, much less Christ's wooden cross. Lined with Christ's love to us! Covered with our love to Him! Truly the yoke is easy and the burden is light. Whenever the shoulder becomes sore, let us look to the lining. Keep the lining right and the yoke will be no more a burden to us than wings are to a bird, or her wedding-ring to a bride."

IN NOTHING has the century now drawing to a close been more distinguished than in the progress made in archæological research. There may indeed be said to have been no discoveries through excavations before the opening of the century, and the first half of it well nigh was consumed in getting ready for the marvellous progress which has been made in the latter part, and especially within the last decade or two. The rocks and hills, the pyramids and the tombs have been made to give forth their testimony to the histories of Egypt, Babylonia, Assyria and Palestine ages before the Christian era. It is needless to say that the greatest interest taken in these discoveries by Christians is due to the confirmation they give of the biblical records, and the light that independently they throw directly upon them by bringing us into the knowledge of the manners and customs of the ancient people and of their attainments in mechanical arts. Sensationalism finds place to some extent in this matter, and indeed the field for it would be most inviting, but for the fact that each successive find adds to the revelations which to one and all seem scarcely less than romance. We make no apology considering the interest and importance of the subject in giving the following clipped from the Baltimore Sun:

"The tomb of Egypt's first King, Mena, who reigned some 5,000 years B. C., is supposed to have been found by M. Jacques de Morgan, the director-general of antiquities for the Egyptian government, in the Nile Valley, between Thebes and Abydos. The tomb had never, it seems, been entered before. It had over a score of rooms and in each room was a sarcophagus containing the mummy of some royal personage, with statues, vases, implements and inscriptions in great number. In the central room was a sarcophagus, with surroundings on an exceptional scale of grandeur, supposed to be that of Mena himself, or of some other king of a very remote period. The period is indicated by the extremely archaic character of the inscriptions and of the articles found in the various rooms. In several particulars the tomb itself differs in its mode of construction from those of later date. Among the proofs of its early character is the finding of numerous flint implements, which indicate an undeveloped state of the art of working in flint. A wooden statue, however, and various alabaster vessels found with it suggest a knowledge of copper or iron tools. It is difficult to conceive that a tomb with granite floor and sides, sarcophagi, vases, inscriptions, &c., could have been constructed by a people not advanced beyond the use of stone implements. The stone knives are to be accounted for, perhaps, by the fact that, having been first used in religious ceremonies, they were accounted more sacred than metallic implements, and were on this account employed in funeral rites.

Another "find," by Mr. Flinders Petrie, of some four thousands of papyri in the sands of Western Egypt attracts new attention to the possibilities of that region. The documents, which range from the first to the sixth century, seem to be a library which some barbarian threw away as useless."

OUR TENDEREST sympathies are extended to Rev. J. L Wicker, pastor of Brevard and Davidson River churches, whose little daughter two years old died on 9th inst., after a painful illness of six weeks.

"'Twas but a flower too good for earth Transplanted into heaven."

The funeral services at Davidson River were conducted by Rev. R. P. Smith.

TO-DAY THE Sixth Annual Conference of the Elders' and Deacons'

Institute of Fayetteville Presbytery will begin its sessions at Red Springs. A list of the subjects to be discussed and the names of the speakers who will discuss them gives assurance that it will be a season, not of pleasure only, but of profit. Our readers have had attention called to the notable speakers—some of them—who will be there. Ruling elders we note will be heard from on various practical subjects connected with Christian life and service.

We trust much good will come of the meeting. We hope to give report next week of the exercises.

THE JAPANESE are very practical, as well as very thoughtful and shrewdly wise. They have not failed to see, the leaders of thought and of action, that the Western nations owe their attainments in the arts of civilization and refinement to the Christian religion. It would seem then that the way would be clear for rapid and all but uninterrupted progress for Christianity. But like all other peoples the Japanese cling to the religious teachings and traditions of their fathers. Any religion has a hold far beyond aught else, on its devotees, hence the reluctance to abandon what they have been taught from earliest times, is alone religious truth. Between conflicting desires and impulses one can readily believe, as is stated, that an attempt is making by Japanese scholars, freely using the press, to introduce a new religion; one that will combine tenets of Christianity and Buddhism with the cult of Confucianism and so secure the best results of Christianity without entire abandonment of the false religions. Of course the attempt is foredoomed to failure. Christ hath no fellowship with Belial, and it may be that when this composition of iron and clay shall fall to pieces that the way will be more clearly open for the advancement of the religion of Christ.

ON OUR 8th page are two articles sent by Rev. S. G. Walker, Superintendent of the Academical and Industrial Institute at North Wilkesboro, N. C., for the education and training of colored boys and girls. We commend these articles to our readers. The Institute is in charge of some of our wisest business men, and the Superintendent, as we have said again and again, is most admirally qualified for performance of the duties laid upon him. Very little money is needed for making the Institute a perfect success, and the plan to secure these means seem to us entirely feasible.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Hundreds of his friends throughout the State and elsewhere will learn with the deepest regret of the serious illness of Prof. Vinson. For some months he has been troubled with an affection of the heart, but it was not looked upon as dangerous. During the past week, however, his symptoms have become more alarming, and the whole village watches each day for news from his bedside. Prof. Vinson has always been an exceedingly popular man among the student body. He is a mathematician of unusual power, and a man of most varied intellectual gifts. All connected with the college hope and pray that his life may be spared.

On the 11th inst., we had the pleasure of hearing a sermon from one of our honored alumni, Rev. B. Watkins Mebane, of the class of '75. Mr. Mebane was a valedictorian of his class, and is now the successful pastor of the church at Fredericksburg, Va. He spent several days shaking hands with his numerous friends in the village, and recalling old times.

There is a growing disinclination on the part of the Davidson students to leave their Alma Mater during the summer months. Eight or ten are studying here this summer, and on last Sunday week, one-third of the class which graduated last June was present in the church. The campus never looked more inviting than at present. It is smoothly shaven, and the frequent rains have made it a thing of beauty to every passer-by.

The last touches are being put on the new residence which the college is building for Dr. Smith, and by the close of the week it will be ready for occupancy.

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this; that power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 4 His earnest desire of blessing God. A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is;
2 To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.

6 They search out iniquities; they accomplish a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.
7 But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly shall they be wounded.
8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: all that see them shall flee away.
9 And all men shall fear, and shall declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.
10 The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM 65.

1 David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

At the left of the cut is shown a page of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

"THE LORD'S ANOINTED."

One eminently beautiful trait in David's character was his reverence for God's anointed.

When Saul was so full of hatred to him, and hunted him as a partridge on the mountain, the time came when David had the opportunity to kill his enemy, but he only cut of the skirt of Saul's robe, and he had no sooner done that, than his heart smote him, and why? "God forbid that I should do this thing unto the Lord's anointed." "The Lord forbid that I should stretch forth mine hand against the Lord's anointed, but I pray thee, take the spear that is at his bolster and the cruse of water and let us go."

And when after the death of Saul the young Amalekite came running to bring the news, and told David that he had slain Saul, it filled David's reverent heart with horror, and he said to the Amalekite:

"Wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thy hand to destroy the Lord's anointed?" And David called one of the young men, and he smote him till he died, and David said: "Thy blood be upon thy head for thy mouth hath testified against thee saying: I have slain the Lord's anointed." In his beautiful lament for Saul and Jonathan, he again alludes to Saul as "the anointed of the Lord." Now, is there no practical lesson here for us?

Who in the present day may we regard as the Lord's anointed?

In 2 Cor. 1:20 and 27 we find an allusion to anointing, and it is the anointing of the Holy Ghost, so also in 2 Peter and elsewhere.

Now we all believe that those who enter the ministry are called of God, anointed by the Holy Ghost, set apart as truly as were the Levites for the services of the tabernacle, and the temple, and we know that they were by God's command, reverenced. Now, as then, the minister of God is to be reverenced—not the man himself so much as his office. It was not Saul as Saul, but Saul as God's anointed who David reverenced.

True, these men are of like passions as ourselves. We may see in them some defects of character and of temper as we find in laymen, though, as a rule, they are better than most men about them, but for His sake who hath called them, whose glorious gospel they preach; for His sake whose servants they are, we are to reverence them, to be more careful how we treat them, to be slow to judge them, to be careful how we speak, or how we listen to another speak of them.

But do we reverence them as God's anointed sufficiently? Are we careful as to how we treat them, and how we speak of them? Do we take up any reproach against them? Are we silent when we might defend them? Let every man answer for himself! D.

IMPRESSIONS OF DAVIDSON COLLEGE.

BY PROF. W. S. CURRELL, PH. D., of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

"I want some rambling reminiscences of Davidson College," said the genial editor of the Central to me one afternoon in intermontane Lexington as the shadows were lengthening on the encircling hills and the afterglow was filling the air with a golden haze. "Rambling" I suppose relieves me of all obligations to be logically sequacious and "reminiscences" gives me full liberty to obtrude the Ego. So if I talk with the garrulous incoherence of Mrs. Quickly, change the subject with the inconsequential suddenness of Mrs. Nickleby, and rival the colossal egoism of Carlyle, hostile criticism is disarmed in advance through the injunction laid upon me by the editor aforesaid.

Davidson lies midway between Statesville and Charlotte, and is on the Atlantic Tennessee and Ohio, a railroad so named presumbly because by a sort of lucus a non lucendo, it touches none of these points. As the village is a small one, everything revolves by an irresistible centripetal force around the college. Formerly through what was perhaps an unwise policy on the part of the college Faculty, the village tended to fly off at a tangent but in latter days the college and the village have worked in harmony and every honest effort is make by each to promote the interests of the other. The village church is supported mainly by the college professors and the villagers contribute largely to the comfort and happiness of the students. When I first went to Davidson in 1886, there was very little social life, due largely to the fact that the girls were in the chrysalis stage. They burst from time to time into young womanhood and added life and gayety to the little social circle, every energy of which seemed to be bent in the direction of giving "the boys" a succession of entertainments as varied and as interesting as possible.

LITERARY CLUBS AND SOCIAL LIFE.

Where dancing is inhibited, as at Davidson, the art of attractive conversation is cultivated perforce, and amusements of necessity must largely partake of the intellectual. Hence literary and dramatic clubs flourished at Davidson and were kept alive with all the enthusiam of youth. I remember with great pleasure some of these clubs. One session an enthusiastic band of Seniors formed a Carlyle club whose meeting I had the privilege of attending. One member was so enthusiastic over Carlyle that his diction became rugged and convulsive, and his sentence structure, spasmic.

Another year a Current History club discussed semi-monthly the topics of the day such as the Japan-Chinese war, the abolition of the House of Lords, the German Emperor, and the Money Problem. For four years a Chautauqua circle gave monthly entertainments, devoted mainly to the discussion of some great hero in letters and science. Charming evenings were spent with Homer, Euripides, Benjamin Franklin, Lowell, Poe, Longfellow and Tennyson. Papers, talks, discussions, and anecdotes in which all the members took part, gave a varied interest to each entertainment. I am told that a very successful Mythological club has been conducted by the progressive Professor of Greek, and a historical and literary club is now in full blast under the direction of the accomplished professor of English. In fact I know of no more "clubbable" place for its size than Davidson.

To the greater part of the young people, however, the histrionic club was and is the most attractive social feature. About two or three times during the year the student histrionic clubs with the cordial co-operation of the villagers, give entertainments which would do credit to a much larger place. Though intercollegiate athletics is under the ban of the college authorities, great interest is taken in tennis, in inter-class and inter-State contests among the students, and field day is made a gala occasion. I emphasize the social side of the life at Davidson because the current opinion is, that where colleges are located in hamlets, the head is stuffed but the heart is starved. Such is certainly not the case at Davidson. A pleasant feature of the social recreation is that the professors take an active, sympathetic interest in all of it, and frequently suggest ideas as to the conduct of the various entertainments.

INTIMATE RELATION OF PROFESSOR AND PUPIL.

This leads me to one of the most delightful features of Davidson College and one that I shall ever cherish as amongst the sweetest memories of my life. I refer to the intimate and cordial relations that exist between professor and pupil. In and out of class I believe every well-regulated student felt that his professor was more than a teacher—he was a friend into whose sympathetic ear he could confide his griefs and perplexities, with the assurance that he would find an interested listener. At the close of four years of intimate contact in the class-room and of frequent consultations outside, that teacher and that pupil must be hard-hearted indeed whose souls are not knit together by one of the strongest of earthly ties. I could rarely listen to a valedictory address without a moistened eye and a choking sensation in the throat, for most of the boys, who were to leave college forever, I loved, and all I felt I had moulded more less during the four years gone by.

Every educated Christian man should be a missionary in the cause of Christian culture, a "born propagandist" of "ideas that make for righteousness," for moral as well as for intellectual veracity. If alive to the importance of this fact, the Christian teacher had abundant opportunity at Davidson for the exercise of his powers, both in and out of college. He was frequently called upon to address the Young Men's Christian Association, he was a welcome visitor in the halls of the literary societies where his voice was always heard with pleasure, he was often an honored guest at the student banquets, and a referee in athletic contests. But best of all in the quiet seclusion of his study he had many an opportunity for a heart to heart talk with a student upon the subject that is dearest to the heart, and it would be strange indeed is both professor and student were not bettered thereby.

COL. WILLIAM J. MARTIN.

I have refrained from personalities, but I know I shall be pardoned by all lovers of Davidson, if I speak a few words here abont that noble man of God who went to his rest a little over a year ago. To his rest! Richly earned it was, for no service was too arduous, no sacrifice too great for the college he loved so well, and whose varying fortunes he followed for nearly a quarter of a century. But I pass all of this by and speak here only of Col. Martin's influence over the student body. Rigid in all of his ideas of rectitude and sternly conscientious in the discharge of every function however trivial, his life was an open book on every page of which the word "duty" was written in large and legible characters. The student who had been recreant to his trust or who had swerved from the truth quailed before the piercing glance of that expressive grey eye, which could look you through and through, and many a student emerged from a private interview in his study a wiser, sadder and better man, touched often by the fatherly tenderness that lay deep down in "the old Colonel's" heart and was ever ready to flow for the sincerely penitent. To the young professor, too, green and unsuited in the perilous pathways of pedagogics, he was a wise and sympathetic counsellor, and this professor, now no longer young wishes to take advantage of this his first opportunity, and express his gratitude for many a noble lesson learned at his feet, and more still from the example he set of a life consecrated to high endeavor.

THE DAVIDSON PROFESSOR ABROAD.

But I must call attention to one more feature of Davidson life and bring these rambling impressions to a close. I have said the true teacher is a "born propagandist" of ideas. As Davidson is a strictly Presbytetian college under the control of four Synods and in intimate contact with the Presbyteries of North and of South Carolina, all of the members of the teaching corps from the President down were welcome and honored guests every fall and spring on the floor of these church courts. A choice hour was usually selected for the representative of Davidson College, and he was always heard with respectful attention. He had no diffidence in speaking of the achievements of his college, for the cause of Davidson was dear to the heart of most of the Presbyters, a large number of whom were often graduates of that college. As the Presbyteries, especially those in the country, were largely attended by parents and their sons many a boy had his attention directed to a collegiate education who would otherwise have remained comparatively uneducated. Besides the professors became extensively acquainted with the clientels of the college, and parents thus usually felt sure their sons would have a friend at college during their collegiate course.

The schools, too, were glad to secure the services of the Davidson professors to address them on commencement occasions and in this way the sphere of the professor was broadened and his opportunities for advancing the cause of education were multiplied. In fact at Davidson as well as at the other colleges in North Carolina the professors kept their ideas as the spendthrift keeps his money—for circulation. It is impossible to overestimate the importance of this intimate connection between the school and the college, the college and the patrons. It was not considered undignified for a professor to press the claims of the cause of education and even of his own college upon the public. This was regarded as one of the functions. People all over the State thus became acquainted with the men who were to teach their sons, and the professor, taken for a time from the hermit-like seclusion of his study, learned to know men and acquired "tact by contact."

I have left out much that might be pleasantly said of Davidson. Though now associated with my old Alma Mater, naturally dearer to me than any other Institution could possibly be, I esteem it a privilege to be allowed to say a few good words for a college to which I am so deeply indebted for valuable experience in the noble art of teaching. Growth in the knowledge of this art was vigorously stimulated by an intelligent and vigilant Board of Trustees, who had a firmly-footed conviction that whatever else a teacher might be able to do he ought first of all to be apt to teach. Further there was a generous emulation among the faculty in the acquisition of this difficult art and this emulation was stimulated by a student body who discussed a teacher's methods freely and often gave him valuable hints unknown to themselves.

(Note by editor of the N. C. P. The foregoing interesting article is reprinted from a late issue of the Central Presbyterian. Dr. Currell was professor of English at Davidson from 1886 till 1896, when, to the deep regret of all the friends of Davidson, he accepted an election to a similar chair in the Washington and Lee University of Virginia. His Reminiscences will be read with interest by hundreds of his friends throughout the State.)

POSITIVENESS OF LOYALTY.

Loyalty, or fidelity to a person, an interest, or a cause, is in itself admirable; but much that is done in the name, or under the guise, of loyalty, is far from admirable Loyalty in love or friendship or patriotism or religion, is unselfish and sacred, and is, so far, noble and ennobling. But when one is bitter against those who oppose what he loves and would defend even to the death, he cannot be right in saying that it is his loyalty which makes him bitter. True loyalty keeps the mind fixed on what is deemed worthy of devotion, and nothing that is mean or hateful can find place in a wholly devoted heart. Loyalty to Christ shuts out from the heart everything that is un-Christ-like. So of loyalty to any lesser person or cause; it leaves no room for hostility, even to that which opposes its object. In fighting for that object, there is no thought of hatred against what opposes. Loyaty, like love, is wholly positive; it cannot give itself to enmity even to an enemy. Christ and Stephen could pray for, not against, their murderers. Whoever is loyal to Christ must so far be Christ-like. —Ex.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Mrs. Coventry Patmore will write the biography of her late husband.

Yale College recently conferred the degree of D. D., upon Rev. John Watson, Ian Maclaren.

The stone placed in Irongray churchyard, Scotland, above the tomb of Helen Walker, the girl who served Sir Walter Scott as original for Jeanie Deans, is being chipped to pieces by relic hunters. It was this girl who saved her sister's life by an appeal to the duke of Argyle, and furnished Scott with a heroine for the "Heart of Midlothian."

The meagerness of the estate left by Harriet Beecher Stowe is made apparent. Her twin daughters, who made a home for her on Forest street in this city, so many years, are in danger of being deprived of the historic home.

When Mrs. Stowe made her will some years ago she thought she would leave property enough to amply provide for her daughters, and also for her son, the Rev. Charles E. Stowe, of Simsbury. Her son was to take care of the property in the interest of his sisters. By a codicil she bequeathed her Forest street home to her daughters, but she failed to put her signature to that portion of her last will and testament.

When the estate came to be inventoried, it was found that with stocks, bonds, and all there was not enough in the daughters' share to support them comfortably, or to enable them to keep the old home for many years. It is now learned that their brother has notified them that he is about to sell the house and provide a home for them in Simsbury.

Most of the valuable and famous relics in the house were bequeathed to Isabella Beecher Hooker, Mrs. Stowe's stepsister, who lives in Simsbury.

The residence is in the same block with that of Mark twain.—Hartford Dispatch to Chicago Tribune.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Westminster Church, Charlotte: — We see from the Charlotte Observer that Rev. A. J. Doritee and those interested in the work in South Charlotte have decided that a new church shall in a year or two be built in Dilworth, the beautiful suburb of the city, and shall be called by the very appropriate name, Westminster. Mr. Latta, one of the generous and helpful citizens of Charlotte has offered a site for the church and a liberal donation in money for its erection. This means there soon will be a fourth Presbyterian church in that enterprising city.

Bethesda:—There were three additions on profession at Bethesda on last Sunday, July 11th. Rev. Chas. Holt Dobbs, Jr., is the pastor of this and of Carthage church.

An Interesting Item: — The Centre Building at Barium Springs Orphanage has been enclosed and covered, but owing to lack of funds work has been suspended until money for the purpose can be obtained from friends of the orphans. On the 24th of June in the large dining room, as the first floor was cleared of rubbish, the organ and chairs were carried in, and all the inmates of the home were assembled, to unite in devout thanksgiving to God for His past mercies and to make united supplication for a continuance of His favor, and especially that He would incline the hearts of His people to speed the work of completing the Centre Building, so that it could be occupied before another winter. It will be remembered that Mrs. Reade, of Raleigh, gave two thousand dollars towards this building. On the Monday following the 24th of June, Rev. Dr. Rumple, Chairman of the Board, received a letter from Mrs. Lees, of New York City, written on the 24th of June, enclosing a check for five hundred dollars, for the Centre Building Fund. The work can now be resumed, and if the friends of the orphans throughout the State will make an effort and will send contributions promptly, the building can be completed. Let us all thank God and take courage.

GEO. ALLEN.

Millboro and Windy Cove:—Rev. Wm. H. Groves preached his last sermon to these congregations on last Sunday and will devote his time for the summer months to the work in connection with the Chautauqua by the sea at Hampton, Va., and the Chautauqua of the mountains at Waynesboro, Va. Any church in need of a minister would do well to correspond with Mr. Groves.

A FRIEND.

Durham:—Rev. A. S. Caldwell, of Oxford, has been assisting Rev. C. W. Maxwell in a week's meeting at the Pearl chapel, a mission of the Durham church. There has been a quiet interest and there will be accessions to the church as fruits of the meeting and of Bro. Maxwell's faithful work.

Greensboro First Church:—This church has long felt that parents and children were not worshiping together as of old, and hence after much prayer and consultation between the pastors and church and Sabbath-school officers we decided to change the hours. The first service of the Sabbath will be the preaching, which should commence promptly at ten o'clock and continue one hour only; after a recess of ten minutes the Sabbath-school exercises will be proceeded with for fifty minutes; thus all will be over at half past twelve.

Last Sunday was the first day of the change and it was like clock work; there was neither hitch nor friction. And what did we see? Parents and children sitting together at the church services—a thing most desirable to be attained—the attendance largely increased, and a large number of the congregation remaining for the Sabbath-school services.

The attendance on the school was fifty-four over the previous Sabbath, and an additional Bible Class of seventeen was formed to begin with.

The change is regarded as a decided success by all for, alas, under the old system the parents coming to church would meet the children going home.

Springwood Church:—Has been remodelled, repainted and ceiled and furnished with handsome pulpit chairs. These improvements are largely due to Ruling Elder D. P. Foust. Rev. H. D. Lequeux is pastor of this church.

Alamance Church:—Two members were received into the communion of this church on the first Sabbath of this month. Rev. H. D. Lequeux, pastor.

Graham Street Church, Charlotte:—At a congregational meeting held last Sunday this church called Rev. W. A. Wynne, of Bramwell, West Va.

VIRGINIA.

Newport News:—Thirteen additions at recent communion. Rev. E. T. Wellford, pastor.

Presbytery of Montgomery:—A special meeting of the Presbytery of Montgomery on the 15th inst., at Lynchburg, is called to act upon the resignation of Rev. John Ruff, pastor of Peck's and Montvale churches, Bedford county, who is called to Monterey, Pisgah and Crab Bottom churches in Highland county. Fincastle church, Botetourt county, called last Sabbath, Rev. J. F. Matheson of Bland, C. H. Rev. R. B. Eggleston, of Bedford City has under consideration a call from Portsmouth church.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Spartan Mills—Rev. L. C. Vass, a recent graduate of Columbia Seminary, has taken charge of this church in the town of Spartanburg, Nazareth church, seven miles distant and the church at Whitney, a factory village three miles away. Dr. Watkins recently held a communion service at Whitney, Mr. Vass not having yet been ordained.

FLORIDA.

Plant City:—In a protracted service just closed at this place the Rev. J. G. Anderson, of Tampa, assisted Rev. J. M. Forbis. There were about twenty-five public professions of faith in Christ. About forty persons who had been living a cold or backsliden life renewed their vows of allegiance to the Master.

GENERAL.

The erection of a new ward in connection with the Presbyterian Hospital, in West Philadelphia, has been commenced. The ward is to be known as the Thomas Hoge Memorial Ward, and its erection was made possible by a munificent gift of $25,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth Pleasanton made about a year ago in memory of Rev. Mr. Hoge, who was her grandfather. The work of the ward will be under the direction of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, who will be provided with competent assistants. The new building will be devoted to the special treatment and care of nervous diseases, will be four stories high and built of brick. Mr. Hoge was one of the early Presbyterian ministers of Western Pennsylvania.—Banner.

NOTES OF THE COMMITTEE OF EDUCATION.

The Committee of Education for the Ministry met on July 5th at the call of the chairman. Every member of the Committee was present. It was a sorrowful gathering—the first meeting of the committee since Dr. Richardson's death.

The business before the Committee was 1st. To appoint a committee to draft suitable resolutions expressing its appreciation of the life and work of Dr. Richardson. Drs. E. A. Ramsay and L. M. Woods, Rev. Joseph H. Lumpkin, and Elders G. W. Macrae and John Johnston was appointed on that committee. 2d. To consult together and take some action towards filling Dr. Richardson's place as secretary.

There was a full and free conference covering the whole subject. After which Mr. G. W. Mcrae nominated Rev. Joseph H. Lumpkin, a member of the committee and pastor of the Third church, Memphis, for Secretary. Mr. Lumpkin retired from the committee after stating that he did not know whether it would be right in him to permit his name to remain before the committee, as he was unable to say whether he could accept or not. The election was by ballot and Mr. Lumpkin was unanimously elected. This unanimous call of the committee came as a surprise to him, and he asked for a week to consider the matter. The Committee accordingly adjourned to meet July 12th to hear his decision.

On July 12th, the Committee met, and Mr. Lumpkin said that it was with regret that he felt constrained to give up a pleasant pastorate, but that the unanimous call of the Committee seemed to voice the Master's call to him, and he therefore accepted the call subject to the action of the Presbytery of Memphis.

The Committee rejoices at the decision of Mr. Lumpkin, and congratulates the Church at large that he has consented to accept the secretaryship of Education. Every member of that committee had served with Mr. Lumpkin for a number of years on the Committee of Education, besides knowing him personally, and knowing his work both in his own church and in the courts of the Church. They knew his capacity for executive work, his painstaking accuracy, his energy, his soundness in the faith, and his zeal for the glory of the Master—hence this unanimous election of Mr. Lumpkin as Secretary.

Rev. Joseph H. Lumpkin is just entering the prime of life. In his own Presbytery and Synod where he is well known, he is valued for his scholarship, knowledge of ecclesiastical law, and conservative orthodoxy. The Synod of Memphis recognizing his ability to be thorough and accurate has made him her stated clerk.

He is a graduate of Davidson College, studied theology at Columbia Seminary and at Princeton. Afterwards, he spent some months travelling in Europe. He entered Home Mission work on his return, spent some years in this field, was pastor at Senatobia, Miss., several years, and six years ago was called to the Third church of Memphis, his present pastorate.

Two years ago, still thirsting for knowledge, he obtained permission from his church and Presbytery to spend a year in post graduate work at the Free Church College in Edinburgh, Scotland. This he did, and he returned to his church more thoroughly convinced than ever that the Southern Presbyterian conserves more biblical truth than any church in existence. He is a young, energetic, conservative, yet broadminded, cultured Christian minister with a rare endowment of native executive ability.

The Committee of Education for the Ministry bespeaks for him a warm welcome from the Church at large, and the prayer of God's people for the cause of Education.

MONEY AT FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT.

DEAR EDITOR:—Fifteen dollars now would be worth sixty dollars in ninety days.

We have a canning apparatus with which we can put up two hundred two pound cans of berries per day. These we can sell at six cents per can. We desire to put up ten thousand cans of berries, tomatoes and beans this season. From this we would realize a sale of $600. The fields and woods are full of berries, if not gathered they must fall off and waste. Shall this be the case when we need money?

I wish to gather these berries, can them and place them on the market next fall. It costs scarcely anything to gather these berries. Ten thousand fruit cans would cost about $150. We can use that many, shall we not have them? Six hundred dollars is almost equal to the running expenses of our school for the past session. This is a way to make this school self-supporting. Please send us a check at once.

Yours truly,

This you can do by sending or inducing some worthy boy or girl in your community to attend our institute next session, which opens on the 20th of September, 1897.

COMMONPLACES.

The wisest things are commonplaces. The truest things are commonplaces. The things which the world most needs to hear are commonplaces. Not the one who says the most original thing, but he who says a commonplace thing in such a manner that the world must listen, is the greatest teacher or preacher. Prophetic eloquence is the faculty of making dry bones live. He who can speak to men of the common things of duty or righteousness with such earnestness that they take heed and consider, has had his lips touched with a coal from off the altar upon which glow the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount.

LETTING ONE'S SELF ALONE.

It is well to be thoughtful of little things, but dangerous to be thoughtful of nothing else. Too many people think that self-examination means continually fretting and worrying one's self. About everything they do they question themselves relentlessly, until, in the end, they have no heart to do anything. Summoning themselves into court first to this verse of Scripture and then to that person's judgment, they become utterly worn out. They never let themselves alone. Like other living things which are never let alone, they never grow. Such a life is very dissimilar to the free and hearty and unconscious life of Jesus. It is well for us to be sure that we have a spiritual aim and a righteous purpose in life, and then to map out and follow the great outlines of holy living according to our own divinely given individuality. One owes it neither to God nor himself nor his fellow-men to keep himself forever in the dock to imaginary demands or other people's opinions of every little shortcoming. The mind takes the measure of the things that fill it, and only a small mind can result from constantly regarding microscopic faults in ourselves or any one else.—Sunday School Times.

Christ will give us rest—"to our souls, our innermost life, our immortality; a Sabbath day that spreads over the whole week, and sanctifies every intervening moment; this is the gift of God. When God gives light, it is not a gas jet, nor a candle-flame, nor a corner-lamp, but a light that fills the firmanent with blushing glory. So when God gives peace, it is not an opiate, it is a satisfaction of soul. How does the doctor bring health to the cheek? You look on the reviving child and say, "See how his cheek begins to bloom again; dear little one, what has the doctor done to you? Has he painted that cheek with tender vermilion? Is this enamel?" "No," saith the little one; "the doctor has not touched my cheek." "Then how has he made it bloom?" "By touching my life springs, by touching the blood, by touching the inner reality of things; touching that, this bloom has come." It is so Christ gives rest; not from the outside, not by a readjustment of circumstances, but by purification of soul.—Joseph Parker, D. D.

The covenant is sacred. It is a solemn obligation, and the right-minded man will suffer rather than break it. It has its place in the inner chamber of righteousness. Therefore God always kept prominently before his people his covenant relation to them. His covenant was an everlasting covenant; the heavens might pass, but his covenant could not be broken. It is so now. Our salvation rests not on our righteousness, but on the covenanted mercy of God. The blood of Christ is the seal that he will fulfill every promise made in his grace. He will save every one who trusts in him. He is true to himself, and having loved us when we were sinners, now that we are reconciled in Christ, he will give us an abundant entrance into his kingdom.—Banner.

NATURE AND MAN.

Nature never withdraws her flowers, her music, her joyousness, and her sunlight, from before human cruelty or suffering. She overwhelms man by the contrast between divine beauty and social hideousness. She spares him nothing of her loveliness, neither butterfly nor bird. In the midst of murder, vengeance, barbarism, he must feel himself watched by holy things; he cannot escape the awful reproach of universal nature and the implacable serenity of the sky. The deformity of human laws is forced to exhibit itself naked amid the dazzling rays of eternal beauty. Man breaks and destroys, man lays waste, man kills: but the summer remains summer, the lily remains the lily, the star remains a star.—Great Thoughts.

IF WE ARE FAITHFUL OTHERS ARE HELPED.

There is a lame broom peddler here who has been a blessing to me many times since I came to this city. Both of his legs are stiff, and when he walks he has to take very short steps. I have seen him going along the streets all time of the year and in all kinds of weather, carrying five or six brooms under his arm and a lot of brush brooms over his shoulder. I have often seen him jogging wearily along, and yet with a smile on his face, when I was chafing under my own small burden, and the sight of him has always made me ashamed of myself. I would contrast my lot with his, and think of how much more I had to be thankful for than he, and it would always send me on my way stepping lighter. I would think of the hundreds of discouragements he had to my one; of the dozens and dozens of refusels to where he sold one broom; of the heartaches he endured when I was free from care, and yet he kept on bravely dragging his weary limbs along, so that his loved ones could have bread. I have never told him how much good he has done me, but the next time I see him I shall. God bless him! Some of the world's greatest heroes live and die unknown.—E. P. Brown.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR BUILDING UP CHARACTER.

We are sent into this world to build up characters which will be blessed and useful in that great future for which we are being trained. There is a niche which only we can fill, a crown which only we can wear, music which only we can waken, service which only we can render. God knows what these are, and he is giving us opportunities to prepare for them. Life is our schoolhouse. Its rooms may be bare but they are littered with opportunities of becoming fit for our great inheritance. Knitting needles are cheap and common enough, but on them may be wrought the fairest designs in the richest wools. So the incidents of daily life may be commonplace in the extreme, but on them as the material foundation we may build the unseen everlasting fabric of a noble and beautiful character.—Sarah Smiley.

INTRODUCTORY.

As we follow Paul from place to place we are learning continually of his method of work and that he adapts himself to various people and circumstances in preaching the same dear old gospel truths. We may get additional light on Paul's methods here by reading carefully the two Epistles to the Corinthians. Paul is on his second missionary journey and has now come to its middle and later portions. He makes a stay in Corinth of a year and a half, the only long stay in any one place. Paul had remained probably several weeks in Athens. His success was not as great as at other places, but a church was organized there at a later day and the Pantheon became a Christian temple. From Athens Paul journeyed westward fifty miles to Corinth the city of business men, as Athens had been of the learned. The population was about four hundred thousand very mixed. Situated on the Isthmus it was a great centre of commerce and manufactnre and foremost in the fine arts. Our small fruit the currant, was named from Corinth. Paul probably sought this as a strategic point He entered in a most unobtrusive way. The varied population would scarcely notice his coming.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. Came to Corinth, as quietly and unnoticed as any two strangers may enter a town now. They first sought lodging, then employment and no one would know them as messengers of the Gospel which enfolded the future of the world and the destinies of the race. So now we do not know the best.

Vs. 2. Found a certain Jew, as his habit was to seek the Jews first, as easier of access through the synagogue and the Scriptures and having the covenants and to be challenged upon the truth of their own Scriptures which were fulfilled in Jesus Christ. Aquila.... Priscilla (a diminutive of Prisca, 2 Tim. iv. 19), were Roman names, as Jews after assumed out of Palestine. These two, especially as Priscilla was a woman of marked ability, had a marked influence in the early Church. This husband and wife are always mentioned together and show the power and importance of women in the history of the Church. They have refreshed and fought and corrected many. Priscilla was one of the pioneers of the devoted women workers who have for eighteen hundred years been so blessed and mighty in the cause of Christ. Portus. A small province on the Black Sea. Claudius. The fourth Roman Emperor. To depart from Rome early in A. D. 52. Came unto them, making their house his home, as many ministers have done since to bless the homes that received them.

Vs 3. The same craft....tentmakers, as every Jew was required by rabbinical law to teach his son a trade, or else to bring up a robber as it was believed and taught. These did not wear the goats hair, but makers of tents used by shepherds and travellers. It was a trade lightly esteemed and poorly paid.

Vs. 4. Reasoned, showed from the Scriptures and from facts that Jesus was the Messiah and that the Gospel was true.

Vs. 5. Silas and Timothy who had been left by Paul at Berea, when he was compelled to leave, were come from Macedonia, the heart of Paul was greatly cheered, as Timothy had been to Philippi and brought Paul good news, Phil. iv. 14. Paul was pressed in spirit, R. V. "constrained by the Word." Stimulated to greater activity in preaching the Word.

Vs. 6. Opposed themselves, the Word implies organized, strong, opposition. Shook his raiment, to show as Matt. x. 14, that he was relieved of further responsibility. Your blood, your life eternal or your death. Be upon your heads as you alone are responsible for rejecting the truth.

Vs. 7. He departed thence from the synagogue, not from the city, into a certain man's house named Justus, which he used for place of teaching and worship. One that worshiped God as a proselyte not a born Jew,

Vs. 8. Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, however, became a Christian. So much was gained. Many of the idolatrous inhabitants of Corinth hearing believed. And were baptized, thus public professing their faith in Christ.

Vs. 9. In the night a form most probably appeared to the Apostle when he heard the voice bidding him be of good courage. Be not afraid, for fears were around him, not only for himself, but for the cause.

Vs 10. For I am with thee as He had promised, Matt. xxviii. 20. I have much people in this city So Paul could not be harmed until his work was done.

Vs. 11. A year and six months, the period of his stay at Corinth. The first two Epistles Paul wrote being the first and second Thessalonians were written at this time. A vain attack was made by the Jews upon Paul and he was brought before the governor Gallio, a cultivated and polished scholar, popular, and even beloved.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

We notice Paul's methods of work:

1. He entered in a most unobtrusive way.
2. He made friends of good people.
3. He supported himself by daily labor.
4. On the Sabbath he went to worship.
5. He was weak and depressed in spirit being sick.
6. The Lord strengthened him with constant nearness.
7. He made special vision and address to Paul.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Aug. 1st, 1897.

OUR DAILY TASKS.

Text for the week:

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world. James 1:27.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Willing work. Neh. 4:1-6.
Tuesday, Work with God. Hag. 2:1-9
Wednesday, My Father's business. Luke 2:41-52.
Thursday, Quiet work. 2 Thess. 3:6-18.
Friday, Hard work. Prov. 6:6-11.
Saturday, Work rewarded. 2 Tim. 6:1-8.
Sunday, Topic. Putting religion into our daily tasks. 1 Kings 7:13, 14; Acts 18:1-4; Mark 6:1-3.

Suggestions:

Meet life's duties as they arise, and deal with them one by one, letting the whole strength go to each.

Resist temptations to sin and strength will come with the exercise. Resist the devil and he will flee from you.

Ask for the wisdom of Him who giveth liberally and upbraideth not, and it will be given you.

Surrender your will to God's will that you may be made willing to do His will.

Try constantly to live as seeing Him who is invisible, and do not be discouraged by failures, real or seeming.

Notes:

The duty of putting religion into our daily tasks is so universally acknowledged by all who regard religion with any degree of respect, that the motto before us is narrowed to the question of how this shall be done. Our text for the week generalizes it to include conduct and character. Conduct involving, mainly, unselfish beneficence as the outcome or result of which holiness of spirit is the sure and sufficient foundation. But how are the character and the conduct to be exemplified in daily life and to what end? Answering the last first. The God-designed end and aim of human life is the glory of God. Man's good comes into this or flows from it inevitably. No special rule for practical application can be given to suit all classes, conditions and circumstances. Gifts differ and temperaments and powers of application. There must be a willing mind and a zeal not without sanctified knowledge and wisdom, but according to them. Immensity of harm is often done by the indiscretions or grievous blunders of persons whose intentions are the best, but whose wisdom is most sadly at fault. There must be as God may require work, not only energetic, according to the injunction, work while it is called to-day, whatsoever ye do do it heartily as to the Lord, but work in quietness without unnecessary display and with entire absence of all selfish ostentation.

Religion may be, indeed, oftener perhaps than otherwise is, required to be exhibited in the grades of patience and humility, in cheerful resignation to God's afflictive providence, or his dealing in chastening in other ways. But in whatsoever station or condition of life, in the family circle, at school, in business, at church, in any department or station of life, secular or what is called religious, duty calls to so live and to so act that men may take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus and have learned of Him. The infallible Guide and Teacher is the Holy Spirit, as His is the power that enables even to the desire to put religion into the daily life.

WHITE. At her home near Concord, N. C., June 29th, 1897, Mrs. Margaret Harris White, wife of Mr. Walter P. White. For over thirty years she was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. Her end was peace. She leaves a husband and four children who greatly miss her, but their loss is her gain.

McARTHUR At her home in Jonesboro, N. C., July 4th, 1897, Mrs. Fannie J. McArthur fell asleep in Jesus in the sixty-seventh year of her age.

Mrs. McArthur was a consistent member of Jonesboro Presbyterian church. She was a true Christian lady with few, if any superiors. Her life is hid with Christ in God.

"O friends of mortal years
The trusted and the true,
Ye are watching still in the valley of tears.
But I wait to welcome you."

PASTOR.

FASNACH. At his home in Raleigh, N. C., on Sabbath afternoon, May 23d, 1897, Edward Fasnach, in the 68th year of his age, fell asleep in Christ.

Long years ago, he left his birth place, Geneva, Switzerland, bound for New Orleans, La. The civil war then progressing in America, turned him from his course, and so he landed at Norfolk. Here, and afterwards at Henderson N. C., he resided for many years, coming from the latter place to Raleigh. Establishing himself in business as a jeweler in this city, here he lived for a quarter of a century, beloved by his friends and honored by all.

As a man of affairs, he was diligent and conscientiously exact. As a citizen, he was loyal to the principles of civil and religious liberty and intelligently alive to the progress of events municipal, national and international. He was a friend that could be trusted; a Christian, pure, punctual, very reverent and very simply devout; a Presbyterian who read his church paper and kept pace with the works of his church. He suffered with fortitude. He spoke of leaving the world with composure and courage. He lived, a quiet, courteous Christian gentleman; he died, to receive the kingdom of God as a little child. He leaves in loneliness here his other self, to await the Master's call; the memory of a happy union to comfort her "until the day break and the shadows flee away."

McNEILL At his residence, near Red Springs, Robeson county, N. C., March 10th, 1897, Neill McNeill, aged 80 years, 1 month and 17 days. A useful, sincere, Christian life has closed. In early life he connected himself with St. Paul's church, under the pastorate of Rev. J. P. McPherson and for many years was a faithful attendant at public worship and the Sabbath-school; there the best of his manhood days were spent, but later in life, his duties called him to another place of business, and old age, with its unavoidable hindrances, compelled him to attend less at church; yet his love for the Bible and sacred songs, which he so much loved, and read and sang, almost daily, never diminished, but seemed to increase with his declining years. One could scarcely name a chapter and (paragraph) verse in any book in the Bible, but he would readily repeat the verse; seldom could be found a man of his years, with a brighter, clearer, conception of all the public affairs of his country; although of a modest, unobtrusive disposition, yet his influence was felt and appreciated to that extent, by his fellowmen that three times he represented his county in the Legislature, serving always as he thought best for the people. Immediately after the war, he rode on horseback from his home in Robeson county to Raleigh, a distance of seventy-five miles, to take oath under Gov. Holden, to be enabled to reorganize and establish a provisional, home government in the county; for several years he held various offices in the county, and during these years, as well as afterwards, his charitable deeds are still remembered by many; truth, integrity and justice were deeply rooted in his nature, and nothing could so utterly destroy his confidence as to discover a want of these virtues in one he trusted In his home-life he was a kind, impartial father, and to the stranger and traveller his hospitalities were ever extended with an unlimited hand; to the needy no refusal was ever made; to the erring no unkind word was ever spoken. A wife and ten children survive him; two are dead, one died in childhood and one sleeps in Maryland, a victim of the late war. In his home he will be sadly missed, not only as a kind parent, but also as a counsellor and instructor. It was his desire that he might be buried at St. Paul's church, near his beloved friend and neighbor, the late Duncan Campbell, and there his body sleeps awaiting a glorious resurrection.

One less at home!
The home circle broken—a dear face
Missed day by day from its accustomed place,
But cleansed and saved and perfected by grace:
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
One voice of welcome hushed and ever more
One farewell word spoken; on the shore,
Where parting comes not, one soul landed more—
One more in heaven!

In Memoriam.

BRYAN. At her home, near Jonesboro, N. C., June 21st, 1897, Mrs. Catherine Bryan fell asleep in Jesus in the eighty-fourth year of her age.

In 1835 she was married to Mr. Newton R. Bryan. To them were born eleven children, four sons and seven daughters, eight of whom survive to mourn the loss of a noble, good and true mother. Mrs. Bryan was adorned with those admirable traits of character and qualities of mind which fitted her for the responsible duties of the long and useful life which God permitted her to live. She ever ministered to the comfort and happiness of her numerous family and the many friends who loved her. She did life's work well and has left the mother's impress of gentleness, firmness and fidelity to duty, on the lives of all her children and many friends.

For long years Mrs. Bryan was a consistent, earnest and faithful member of Buffalo church. She loved the Word of God, she loved the Church of God, she loved its sweet communions and precious services and was zealous for the prosperity of Zion.

It was the writer's privilege to know her only during the last three years of her declining life. She endured her afflictions patiently—never murmuring. In all her afflictions, she recognized with humble submission the wisdom and goodness of God. Even in her afflictions she considered herself more wonderfully blessed of God than all others. But this is not strange, for she had a blessed assurance of heaven. She often told me that she had no doubts about her salvation. The last words I remember that she said to me were these: "After death I have no fears." In her greatest afflictions, she showed the consecrating power of divine love and her face shone with the light and sweetness of the religion of Jesus.

Then why should your tears run down
And your hearts be sorely riven,
For another gem in the Saviour's crown,
And another soul in heaven?

FOR THE FAMILY.

WHERE'S MOTHER?

Bursting in from school or play,
This is what the children say,
Trooping, crowding, big and small,
On the threshold, in the hall—
Joining in the constant cry,
Ever as the days go by,
"Where's mother?"

From the weary bed of pain
This same query comes again;
From the boy with sparkling eyes,
Bearing home his earliest prize;
From the bronzed and bearded son,
Perils past and honors won:
"Where's mother?"

Burdened with a lonely task,
One day we may vainly ask
For the comfort of her face,
For the rest of her embrace:
Let us love her while we may,
Well for us that we can say:
"Where's mother?"

Mother with untiring hands
At the post of duty stands;
Patient seeking not her own,
Anxious for the good alone
Of her children as they cry,
Ever as the days go by:
"Where's mother?"

CHILDREN HAPPY.

THE NASHVILLE EXPOSITION WAS A REAL FAIRY LAND TO THEM.

A successful conclusion to a day of unalloyed pleasure to thousands of children and their adult friends was prevented by a heavy rain storm on the 10th inst., between 4 and 5 o'clock, and the continued rain for several hours interfered with the carrying into effect of the mighty programme which had been especially prepared to give pleasure to the several thousand children who had delighted an audience in the auditorium. The programme was casried out most successfully. Thousands of children thronged the grounds. They were everywhere. They came early and intended to stay late—until the last rocket had burst and the last bomb exploded. The oriental parade with the gorgeous costumes and the odd decorations captured the young people, and they were supremely happy.

The exposition grounds, the buildings, the divertissements were theirs; they were in supreme control and were happy.

At 4 o'clock the auditorium was jammed with an audience that fully appreciated one of the most charming events ever witnessed. A chorus of 2,500 young voices, assisted by the Innes Band, and directed by Innes in person, gave a concert which will not soon be forgotten by those who were present. It was unique, pleasing, captivating, grand; and Innes, who trained the chorus, prepared special music for the young singer and all the young children made a hit, a decided hit, and this performance is admitted to have been the greatest event in the history of the exposition. It is probable that the carnival will be repeated.

A LONDON FIRM'S PHILANTHROPY.

A large London firm has secured for the entire season a commodious and well-furnished detached house at Waton-on-the-Naze, where every one of its hundred of factory hands and warehouse staff will be accommodated, in batches of thirty at a time, with a fortnight's free board and lodging, in addition to receiving a present of three weeks' wages. Moreover, on Jnne 21st and 22d the works were closed, and to each of the workers was presented three days' pay.—Picayune.

An American academy in Rome was incorporated under the laws of New York last week. It will be formed on the plan of the French academy in Rome, nnd a certain number of painters, sculptors and architects selected by competitive examinations in the different branches will be set there for the purpose of studying the arts. The French academy is under the controlling faculty of the French government, but the American academy, which was incorporated yesterday, will be controlled by its co-operators and trustees. The new academy will not only have a fund of its own, but it will have the use or several other funds now in existence through which students may be sent abroad to study.

The first factory for making pins was established in New York in 1812, and in the same year the first rolling mill was put into operation in Pittsburg.

Out Into the Darkness.

What mother would turn her young daughter out alone unprotected into the stormy night? Yet many loving mothers allow their daughters, who are just coming into the time of womanhood, to proceed without proper care and advice all unprotected and alone into the perils of this critical period.

Young women at this time often suffer from irregularity and weakness which may afterwards develop into dangerous disease and fill their whole lives with wretchedness.

It is a mother's duty not to pass over such matters in silence, but to promote her daughter's womanly health and regularity by every reasonable means.

These delicate ailments are easily overcome in their early stages by judicious self-treatment without any need of the obnoxious examinations which doctors uniformly insist upon. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for all diseases of the feminine organism.

It restores perfect health and regularity to the special functions, and vital vigor to the nerve-centres. It is the only medicine of its kind devised for this one purpose by an educated, experienced physician.

During nearly 30 years as chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., Dr. Pierce has acquired an enviable reputation. His medicines are everywhere recognized as standard remedies. His "Golden Medical Discovery" alternated with the "Favorite Prescription" constitutes a thorough and scientific course of treatment for weak and impoverished conditions of the blood.

A headache is a symptom of constipation. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, promptly and permanently. They do not gripe. Druggists sell them.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A LITTLE CHILD'S HYMN.

Thou that once, on mother's knee,
Wert a little one like me,
When I wake or go to bed
Lay thy hands about my head;
Let me feel thee very near,
Jesus Christ, our Saviour dear,

Be beside me in the light,
Close by me through all the night;
Make me gentle, kind, and true,
Do what mother bids me do;
Help and cheer me when I fret,
And forgive when I forget.

Once wert thou in cradle laid,
Baby bright in manger-shade,
With oxen and the cows,
And the lambs outside the house:
Now thou art above the sky;
Canst thou hear a baby cry?

Thou art nearer when we pray,
Since thou art so far away;
Thou my little hymn wilt hear,
Jesus Christ, our Saviour dear,
Thou that once, on mother's knee,
Wert a little one like me.

THE FIRST WRONG BUTTON.

"Dear me," said little Janet, "I buttoned just one button wrong, and that makes all the rest go wrong," and she tugged and fretted as if the poor botton were at fault for her trouble. "Patience, patience, my dear," said mamma. "The next time look out for the first wrong button, then you'll keep all the rest right. And," added mamma, "look out for the first wrong deed of any kind; another and another is sure to follow."

Janet remembered how one day, not long ago, she struck baby Alice. That was the first wrong deed. Then she denied having done it. That was another. Then she wss unhappy and cross all day because she had told a lie. What a long list of buttons fastened wrong just because the first one was wrong!—The Picture World.

WHAT THE GOLDFISH WANTED.

"Oh dear, said Katy and Charley, crying over their globe of goldfish, "my fish are sick! They won't dart about. I believe they will die."

"Perhaps the water is not fresh," said Jane.

"Yes, it is fresh," said the children.

"See, here," I said, and took a little cup and dipped out some water, and poured it back, holding the cup high.

I did this several times, and, lo! the fishes began to dart about as well as ever.

"They were choking for fresh air," said I, "as you would soon choke in a box or small closet."

"Fishes don't breathe air, they breathe water," said Jane, confident that she was right.

"They breathe air," I said; "but it is air that is held in water and which they take or sift out of the water by means of their fine gills."

Then I explained the meaning to Katy and Charley. I said:

"When I poured the water back into the globe, air went down with it, in little bubbles, and so the water had air in it, again. The fishes had used up the air in the water, and were faint and choksd. When the air-bubbles were in the water, the gills of the fish began to sift air out; they were comfortable.

"When you have any living creature in water," I told the children, who were listening attentively, "you must not only put in fresh water for them, but put air in the water by pouring and repouring, so that you tangle up air in the water. In great aquariums they have water running into the tanks from spigots all the time.

"You breathe air, taking it into your lungs; you should fill your lungs well often, and be careful to keep in clean, pure air, night and day. Fishes sift air out of water with their gills. Insects breathe, not by lungs or gills, but by little coils wrapped all around their bodies."—Child's Hour.

A PICNIC AT THE SHORE.

Charlie was a poor boy who lived in a narrow, dark street in Boston, where a great many other people lived.

He never saw the beautiful blue sky and the bright green grass. He never picked big bunches of yellow dandelions and sweet little violets. The only birds he saw were pigeons, and sparrows, and Dick, the kindergarten canary.

Yes, Charlie went to a kindergarten, and the very nicest kind of a kindergarten, too. Miss Helen had a few poor little children come to her beautiful home every day, and there in a large, bright room, they had such good times!

One morning, Miss Helen asked the children in the kindergarten if they had ever been to the seashore, and had ever seen the great ocean. Not one of the children had ever been there, and they did not know what the ocean was. When Miss Helen told them that she meant a great deal of water, Charlie said, "Oh, I know; we have a beautiful ocean on our street, in the gutter, when it rains. We wade in the water and sail boasts on it, and have the best time!"

Fannie said: "Miss Helen, I have seen the ocean in the Public Garden."

But Miss Helen said, "The ocean is very much larger and more beautiful than Charlie's gutter, or even the pond in the Public Garden, and next week we will all go to the seashore and have a picnic."

And the very next week they did go to the seashore. I wish you could have been with them.

The children had never had such times before. The ocean was so large and beautiful; the waves were so high, and they made so much noise when they broke on the sand. Then there was so much sand, nice, clean, white sand, and the children built in it great forts, and hills, and gardens.

They dug deep, deep wells, and the water came right up from the bottom and filled them, but the water was very salt; then the sand would fall in around the sides and fill them all up.

The children would draw pictures in the damp sand, and then they would watch the waves come up and wash the pictures away.

They would gather the sea moss, and press the little brown bubbles until they would burst with a pop."

The shells on the shore were very beautiful, large, white ones, so smooth and bright inside, pretty little pink ones, and little brown ones with the queer, slow snail inside.

Charlie thought the big, soft, white jellyfish very funny, but he liked best of all the lively starfishes. They looked just like stars, with five brown points, and they had hundreds of tiny little feet all over them, so they could walk wherever they wished.

After a picnic dinner on the sand, the children took a long row in a boat; they sang many songs, and told long stories of the beautiful things they had seen. Then Miss Helen showed them the white caps the waves have to wear, and said, "We, too, must put on our caps and say 'good-by' to the dear old ocean, for the sun has gone, and we must hurry home."—The Child's Hour.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: I have seen so many nice little letters in your paper I thought I would write one too. I enjoy reading the children's page very much. I was eleven years old the 7th of July. I have five brothers and two sisters and I am the baby. My father and mother died when I was not quite two years old, my dear aunt came to stay with us. We live one mile from Union church. I go to Sunday-school as often as I can, my teacher is Cousin Crissie McLean and Mr. Rowan is our superintendent. I recited the Shorter Catechism when I was eight years old and received a nice Bible. I take the Children's Missionary, I love to read it very much. Rev. M. N. McIver preaches for us. He staid with us Saturday night; we enjoyed his visit very much and I hope he will see this in print.

Your unknown friend,

A NEGLECTED GIFT.

We do not sing enough, either in our homes or in the house of God. The tongue that is singing will not be scolding or slandering, or complaining or uttering nonsense. And in the house of God it is sheer robbery to seal the mouths of Christ's redeemed followers and to relegate the sacred joy of praise to the voice of half a dozen hired performers. Choirs have their use; it is their abuse that works spiritual mischief. —Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

The person who reads, understands and follows the precepts of the Spirit as revealed by the apostles, is wiser and better than the person who does not. And the person who can intelligently appropriate the promises of God to himself is certainly in possession of a peace which the world cannot give. If there is a man who follows the teaching of the Spirit in all things, that man is perfect as a Christian. And the Church which follows the Spirit in all of his teachings, is a perfect church.

A considerable number of German towns and villages have for some time subjected their bibulous inhabitants to the regulations of a modified prohibition law. This not only restricts the time for the sale of all kinds of liquor and the hours of public restaurants and places of amusement, but exercises a sort of censorship over their visitors Persons who neglect their families on account of drinking, or who have been repeatedly brought before the magistrate as "drunk and disorderly," are denied the privilege of procuring alcoholic beverages. A "drunkards' list," published periodically, exhibits their names and occupations, and copies of it are sent to local innkeepers and liquor dealers, who are liable to heavy fines if they sell liquor to those mentioned in the list, which is placed on the wall of the restaurants and hotels.

SAY SOES.

None but a strong soul can hold the tongue in tight rein. An uncontrolled tongue is a certain sign of weakness of character.—Golden Rule.

Elderberries are said to be almost a specific for dropsy.

It is reported from France that the fresh juice of the poppy plant applied to a recent bee sting gives immediate relief and prevents inflammation.

"I presume," said the talkative man to his seat-mate in the railway train, "from your manner and conversation, that you have family ties."

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton; "I's'pose you might call 'em that. I buy 'em for myself, but my wife and the girls all wear 'em whenever they feel like it."—Washington Star.

THINGS USEFUL.

Apricot Cottage Pudding.—Stir stewed apricots into a batter made of one-half cup of sugar, three tablespoonfuls melted butter, one beaten egg, one cup milk, one pint flour, and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in a loaf and serve with hard sauce.

To utilize the bread, make German fritters. Take three eggs, well beaten, one pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one salt-spoonful of cinnamon. Cut slices of bread in squares or oblong pieces, soak in the mixture until soft, and fry a golden brown in butter. Serve with butter and maple syrup.

A nice luncheon is made thus: Grate one-fourth of a pound of good cheese and put it into a saucepan, with one ounce of butter and half a cup of cream. Place the pan over the fire in another pan of boiling water, and stir until the mixture is of the consistency of a creamy custard. Season it with salt, paprika, and a few drops of Worcestershire sauce. Chop a small cucumber very fine and add it, or a teaspoonful of chopped capers may be used instead. Meanwhile prepare squares of buttered toast and lay them upon a hot dish. As soon as the chopped pickle has been stirred into the mixture turn it upon the toast and serve at once.

WHO IS HE?

Two thousand years! yet onward roll
the restless wheels of time,
Across the hoary hills of earth with thunderings sublime;
Like wind-swept sand 'gainst Sin'i's crags, unresting have they flown,
Since meekly rode the crownless king rejected by His own.
Who is he? cried the millions come up to the temple's feast:
Who is he? gentile strangers asked of pharisee and priest.

We know not whence he is: some carpenter of Galilee,
Some weeping Nazarene who claims our future king to be
Sits there and weeps while people shout hosannah to his name.
Our king shall come of David's line and not unknown to fame:
Jerusalem shall be the Queen of all the Orient world,
Her banner float above the flags of all the nations furled.

Who is he, there in Pilate's hall friendless among his foes?
Who is he, climbing Calvary's hill beaten with many blows?
Who is he, nailed upon the cross, forgiving e'en in death;
Opening the door of heaven to the faintest call of faith?
On trembling tongues, on pallid lips sharp wailed the awful quest,
While fainting earth grew sick to feel the cross-weight on her breast.

O Son of Man! the angels cried appalled to see the cross.
O Son of God! the frighted world shrieked, shuddering at her loss.
Those arms outstretched 'tween earth and sky reached to the Father's throne,
And the redeemed sent up a shout, Our God brings back His Own!
O rending veil of temple doomed! O blessed open graves!
Our dead, shall rise and follow Him beyond Death's awesome waves.

Ada Augusta Gott.

Probably the most of the difficulties of trying to live the Christian life arise from attempting to half live it.—Drummond.

JOHN McLEAN.

Occasion has been had, heretofore, to bring before our readers Big Rockfish church and we now present her in connection with another one who was born under her shadow and received his religious training in her fold. John McLean was born July 14th, 1851, in Cumberland county, in the section mentioned above and in the immediate neighborhood of the McDonald and McFadyen families. His first Sunday-school training was under the supervision of Mr. John McDonald. His teacher, the only one during the whole term of his Sabbath school training, was the venerable ex-Sheriff McNeill. The Shorter Catechism in the days of his youth was among the sturdy Scotch Presbyterians, regarded next to the Scriptures themselves, as embodying the truth of God and the children were taught to treasure it up in their hearts and minds so that it might strengthen them in their Christian life and service. Mr. McLean with two brothers in the same class memorized the Catechism perfectly and recited it to Rev. John M. Sherwood, shortly before his death. About the year '67, Rev. Dr. Angus McDonald organized a Y. M. C. A. at Big Rockfish, and of this the subject of our sketch has been an active member. At the age of sixteen, under the ministry of Rev. J. M. Sherwood he united with the church, on the very day that the aged servant of Christ, Mr. John McDonald, to whom he felt he owed so much, was laid to rest. It is not surprising that this solemn circumstance made a lasting impression upon him. Leaving his home and home work in 1879, he went to South Carolina and settling in Kershaw county, soon became identified with the interests of the people, secular and religious. In the Pine Tree Sunday-school he served as teacher of a Bible Class of young men and as Assistant Superintendent of the school. Here he superintended two mission schools, one of which was organized through his efforts. He attended the Kershaw annual conventions and at the last meeting was made chairman. He returned to his native State in March 1889, and settled at Red Springs. He has been here ardently identified from that day to this with the church work.

In June '89, he was elected along with Mr. John A. McKay, ruling elder, of the Red Springs church, then organized, and of which he was a charter member. Rev. J. M. Clark was the pastor of the church. The Sabbath-school was organized and soon was in vigorous operation. In this work Mr. McLean found congenial exercise for his qualifications for work and he, in various position, of superintendent, clerk and treasurer has tried to serve the Master faithfully.

As clerk of the session he has from the organization of the church had the satisfaction of having his records annually pass the Presbytery with full approval.

Mr. McLean has always been recognized as ready to serve in any capacity in which work is to be done for the cause of the kingdom, holding to the principle to do with his might whatsoever the hands find to do. He has been a zealous friend and helper to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN, believing it to be doing faithfully for the Synod and the cause of Christ, the work that has been laid upon it.

Time is never more misspent than while we declaim against the want of it; all our actions are then tinctured with peevishness; the yoke of life is certainly the least oppressive when we carry it with good humor, and in the shades of rural retirement.—Zimmerman.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

If knowledge were measured by how much one knows of other people's business, the world would be filled with Solomons.—Cumberland Presbyterian.

* * *

It is when great truths have struck great men that great movements have started forth. Every truth of whatever size has breezes for mental sails whenever they are unfurled.—Tilden.

* * *

Many Christians are not getting great gains for themselves or for the Master, because they are fishing in shallow waters. "Launch out into the deep!" is the Lord's ringing command.—Golden Rule.

* * *

I hope we shall educate the people until a soul's inheritance as an immortal being, with the universe of God at his feet, shall count for more in the thought of his heart than all the gold and all the glory of the world.—J. H. Vincent.

* * *

Each evening as you lie down to rest let God's angels close the door of your heart on thoughts of purity and peace. The soul that has never lived face to face with eternity is a vulgar soul. The life that has never learned the high law of holiness is a ruined and wasted life.—F. W. Farrar.

* * *

As a father in a garden stoops down to kiss a child, the shadow of his body falls upon it. So many of the dark misfortunes of our life are not God going away from us, but our Heavenly Father stooping down to give us the kiss of his infinite and everlasting love.—Talmage.

* * *

The man of grit excites admiration. He has staying qualities. He is neither a shirk nor a coward. He neither wavers nor deserts. He can be relied on. He has faith, energy and persistence. The Christian should possess his tenacity of purpose and of action. He should be no dodger of duty, however irksome or unpleasant. Grace means pertinacity, courage, adherence and accomplishment.—The Presbyterian.

CHRIST OUR LIFE.

In the third chapter of his letter to the Colosians the Apostle Paul uses this title of Christ and bases upon it the hope that "when He shall appear then shall ye also appear with Him in glory." The whole context of verses three to five may be more freely rendered. For ye died to this world, and your resurrection and eternal life, is hidden, i. e. is at present concealed, with Christ in God, with Christ who is in the bosom of the Father. When Christ who is our life, the essence and impersonation of our life, is manifested, then shall ye also be manifested with Him in glory. We now are dead, but our true and real life will appear in its spiritual strength, in heavenly beauty, in its likeness to Christ.

The first fact found in this passage is that Christians are dead with Christ. That is more than the truth that Christ died for sinners and that all who believe in Him have in His death their death to the penalty of sin; which is like saying that we are saved in the sense of being justified from all that from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses, freely by His grace, in the death of Christ as the propitiation for our sins. It is further true that by faith we are so identified with Christ on the cross that we died with Him, and, as our privilege now and possession in progressive sanctification, we are dead to the power of sin. This is affected through Christ our life.

So we are saved by Christ's life in victory over sin and deliverance from its dominion. "Sin shall not have dominion over us." "For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life. Here Christ is our life, not only as its source and pattern, but as its power working in us. Henceforth we live, yet not we, but Christ liveth in us. As the branch cannot bear fruit except it abide in the vine, no more can we except we abide in Christ as our life, and as the life of the vine passes into the branch so, being vitally united to Christ, His life passes over into the believer. Separate, severed from Christ we can do nothing. Abiding in Christ, the life of Christ is lived in the believer and he is saved by the life of Christ from the power, as by His death from the penalty of sin.

The apostle passes by necessary inference to a wonderful statement, that when Christ who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with Him in glory. There are two schools of interpretation as to this appearing of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ. One school holds that Christ will appear at the end of this dispensation during which they hold that the world will be converted and all will call Christ Lord. The other holds that the world is not to be converted in this age or dispensation, but that Christ may come at any moment to receive His saints and to appear with them in glory. The majority of present day theological teachers and scholars, hold this first view. An increasing number are now holding the second view. Whichever view we may hold we agree on this text's teaching that when Christ does appear His saints shall appear with Him in glory.

"Beloved now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be. But we know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." Whatever the glory of Christ shall be at His coming and whenever that coming may be we shall share it and appear with Him. That is we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is; a hope that cheers us unspeakably.

This glorious hope revives,
Our courage by the way,
While each in expectation lives
And longs to see the day.

This hope is precious beyond all calculation. As we look at ourselves and our poor attainments here we are often much depressed and discouraged. But when we think of this prospect we may well lift up our head and rejoice, with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

Even so come Lord Jesus.

LESS OF THE theory of sanctification, and more of the genuine article, is what the times demand. Pulpit, press and platform are full of "the second blessing," "the higher life," "perfectionism," Holy Ghostmen," "the infilling of the Spirit," and other forms of special goodness, but the Church and the world are calling for men and women whose words, spirit and deeds attest a regenerated soul and a Christ life.

This is from a contemporary of whom we would hardly have expected it. Perhaps there is no ill animus in it; we shall try to think there is not; if not the epithets chosen and the whole tone of the writing do the writer injustice. We would like it better if it were not so much in line with the slur ever on the lips of those on whom the claims of religion sit most lightly. "Less preaching and more practice" they say "is what we need." A half-truth which on that very account is doubly grievous error. If this stigma on preaching is justifiable then our whole system of theological education and training should be abandoned, and our whole evangelical system is at fault. In very truth we need more and better preaching as well as more and better practice, for the preaching of Gospel truth and the inculcation of duty founded upon the Word, is the God-chosen way to induce and maintain good moral and religious practice.

Just so it is true that at this time, and at all times, we need to keep before our own minds and hearts, and to lay strongly upon the minds and hearts of others, the teaching of God's Word in regard to the operation of the Holy Spirit upon the human soul. What reasonable objection can there be to this? It is by this means that progress in holy living is to be acquired. Surely we have not too much of the infilling of the Holy Spirit, and how are we to get it except through seeking to the Spirit, Himself. What we really must have if we will constantly advance in the Christian life (this we believe is sanctification) is more of the Holy Spirit residing in us as a living force. It is a "higher life" than most of us have been living, or are living now, but what shall we say of the Christian who does not desire to live on a higher plane of spiritual life?

We must not be misunderstood. We do not believe in "perfectionism," neither do those—of Presbyterian faith, most surely—who are contending for the living on a higher plane of spiritual life—ridiculed by the opponents as "the higher life." Those who aim at higher spiritual life are really the most conscious of their own shortcomings and of their amazing distance from perfection. The epithet "Holy Ghost men"—it seems to us—is perilously near disrespect to the Holy Spirit. It certainly does not sound well on the lips of Christians, as applied to those who are conscientiously aiming to regulate their lives by the teaching and under the guidance of God the Holy Spirit.

As to the "second blessing." It is true some who use the phrase found upon it very extravagant and unjustifiable theories, but it is not, properly understood, a very serious bugbear. It does not in any way countervail Scriptural teaching, and why should any object to a second blessing, or a third, or a fourth? Are we full and have need of nothing? Are we fully capable of rendering all needed service without further infusion of the Holy Spirit? Certainly not, for more of that is what we need, the pure "genuine article."

Let us away with all that is not genuine—all the extravagances—all the errors. And let us have more both of the theory and the practice of sanctification, through the infilling of the soul by the Holy Spirit and His gracious outworking in the Christian life.

IT IS GRATIFYING to know that the funds necessary to pay the expenses of Dr. Chester's trip of visitation to missions in the East has been arranged for. We thoroughly believe that the appropriation would prove funds well-expended even if it had been necessary to get the means from the mission treasury; still it is far better as it is, for some persons were greatly troubled at the draft that might be made upon mission funds. The Church has not failed to recognize that Dr. Chester's administration has been most wise and most successful—which is saying that the special fitness of our secretary has been guided and directed and specially blessed by the Holy Spirit. His visit will be the means of giving him closer and fuller acquaintance with the missionaries, and enable to personal conferences which, with opportunities for personal insight and detailed and extended observation, cannot fail to advance the cause our people have so much at heart.

THE FOLLOWING letter from Dr. Campbell, pastor of the First church, Asheville, to Rev. Dr. P. L. Groome, and published by permission, is all the endorsement needed of the Southern Biblical Assembly:

DEAR BRO.:—Convinced by personal observation of the good work done by the Southern Biblical Assembly in stimulating those attending its sessions to a more earnest and systematic study of the Scriptures. I am glad to learn that you have been put into the field to make known more widely the excellent opportunities for Bible study offered to the public in the exercises of the Assembly.

I heartily endorse the institution and commend it to the attention and interest of all who love the Word of God.

Yours fraternally,
R. F. CAMPBELL.

The meeting will be held in First church, Asheville, August 4th-August 18th, inclusive.

Persons holding the $2 tickets of the Assembly will get railroad return tickets for one fare, reduced rates for board and the printed proceedings of the entire meeting free.

LAST WEEK we barely announced the finding of some 4,000 papyri by Mr. Flinders Petrie. The following cabled from London to the New York Sun is interesting in this connection:

Professor Petrie's winter's explorations in Egypt have been wonderfully fruitful. The bulk of his collection is in two groups, separated by a gap of more than thirty centuries, the later documents being an enormous mass of papyri from the Roman city of Behnesa, west of the Nile, about 100 miles south of Cairo, and the earlier a great variety of objects which throw a flood of light upon the habits of a people, evidently in a high state of civilization, who occupied lower Egypt centuries before Abraham and almost as far back at the date assigned by Archbishop Usher to the creation of the world.

The papyri comprise 4,000 documents. They were not found in a secret chamber or a cave, but were mixed up with the soil. Evidently they represented the clearing out of a library, whether by the hands of some reformer or a barbarian who hated knowledge. The rolls represent a wide range of literature, history, law and ethics. Besides there are a number of earlier Christian documents among them, logia and anecdotes which were current in the churches at a very early date, and in some cases may have been consulted by the authors of the four gospels.

The contents of this library probably range from the first to the sixth century. It has furnished to the literary archæologist at least as many papyri as have hitherto existed in the whole of Europe. The discoverer expects that ten to twenty years will be occupied before the papyri are fully deciphered.

These announcements are not to be taken as literally true until confirmed. Nevertheless they may be regarded as likely to prove in the main correct. As to the value of the discoveries, nothing can be positively known till their origin and other circumstances connected with them are reliably traced. The finding of what purports to be words or sayings of Christ not published in the Scriptures, or heretofore elsewhere, was announced some weeks ago. These sayings consist of detached sentences preceded by the words Jesus saith: As a collection they date, it is supposed, from about the year 90 of the Christian era, but they do not bear reasonable evidence of being the utterances of Christ. They are not in correspondence either in style or in wisdom with the Scripture truths—and indeed some are decidedly at variance with them. Eminent scholars and scientists, Christian and other, will scrutinize and criticise these documents as they appear and from the crucible there may be sure the truth as pure gold will emerge.

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: [2] if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken [3] once; twice have I heard this; that [4] power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for [5] thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 4 His manner of blessing God.
A Psalm of David, [6] when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: [7] my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and [8] thirsty land, [9] where no water is;
2 To see [9] thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary, [10] when I beheld thy power and glory.
3 Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.
4 Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.
5 My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:
6 When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the [11] watches of the night.
7 Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
8 My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
9 But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
10 They shall fall by the power of the sword: they shall be a portion for foxes.
11 But the king shall rejoice in God; every one that sweareth by him shall glory: but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM 64.

1 David prayeth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

1 Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer: preserve my life from fear of the enemy.
2 Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:
3 Who whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bow to shoot their arrow, even bitter words:
4 That they may shoot in secret at the perfect: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.
5 They encourage themselves in an evil matter: they commune of laying snares privily; they say, Who shall see them?
6 They search out iniquities; [2] they accomplish [2] a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.
7 But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly [3] shall they be wounded.
8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: [4] all that see them shall flee away.
9 And all men shall fear, and shall [5] declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.
10 The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM 65.

1 David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

1 Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed.
2 O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come.
3 Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.
4 Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.
5 By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea:
6 Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being girded with power:
7 Which stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people.
8 They also that dwell in the uttermost parts are afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.
9 Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it, thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.
10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly: thou settlest the furrows thereof: thou makest it soft with showers: thou blessest the springing thereof.
11 Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness.
12 They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills rejoice on every side.
13 The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

At length we find ourselves with copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

LETTER FROM BRAZIL.*

ARAGUARY, BRAZIL, June 10th, 1897.

Next week we will break up housekeeping for four months, and most of the time I will be traveling; but it will be somewhat different from your trip. Mrs. M. and baby, will go on from Synod to Lavras, to stay while I am in the interior. They have improved very much in the last month. So much so, that I took a trip of a week to the city of Catalao (Cat-a-lung) about fifty-five miles from here. From the map, of the Southern Brazil mission in the May Missionary, you will see that this will be a very important place when the two roads are completed there.

The large Paranahiba river is the the dividing line between this and the State of Goyaz and it makes it very difficult to reach Catalao during the rainy season. We hope, by the time this railroad gets there, that we can leave this church in the hands of a native pastor, and move there to try and evangelize the large State of Goyaz.

Several months ago, one of our country members told me that a man who lived near Catalao, stopped at his house, and of his own accord told him of his studying the Bible in the home of his father-in-law, and that the father-in-law was trying to observe its teachings. After hearing this, it made me more anxious to cross the river and preach the Gospel to those men and their neighbors. But the member had forgotten the names, and we had to go trusting in Divine guidance for even the name.

Soon after reaching the city we commenced inquiring, and the next day the son-in-law happened to be in town, and came to see us. He talked very encouragingly, and asked us to visit his father-in-law who lived twenty miles on our road home. We did so and had a long talk with the old man. He was afraid of us at first, but before we left he expressed a desire "to know more of our doctrines" and we invited him to come here to attend our services and examine the Bible more closely, to see if it was not his duty to make a public profession of his Saviour. We left some tracts for him to examine, and with the prayer that he may soon be brought to the clear light of God's love.

The people of Catalao were very kind and courteous, and many attended our services in the courthouse. They eagerly accepted of the tracts we carried, and all of the Bibles and New Testaments were sold.

One man of influence attended all of our services, and the last one, Sunday night, he brought his wife. I preached on the text Rev. 22: 8, the admonition of the angel to "worship God;" and then proved that any other worship would be contrary to the will of God and dangerous to the sinner. This man came up after the service and said that the sermon was just what he wanted his wife to hear. It must have had a good effect on her, because the next day she bought a Bible.

It is hard to judge by the first appearances as to the effect of a visit, but I feel encouraged, and hope to be able in the future to visit this place regularly; at least twice a year.

We had a meeting of the Building Committee the other day, and decided to buy a different house, for our services, from the one I wrote you about. It was due to several reasons: first, the house that we bought is much cheaper and belonged to one of the deacons who had gotten into debt. By buying his house he is relieved of a debt that was pressing him and pays all the money that he had in his hands of the church and had used in building houses; at the same time we have a much smaller debt to pay and a house that will be ready in a month for worship and for the school. The second reason is that the owner of the house we wanted, was in debt, and could not give us time to finish paving for it. Our plan now is to finish paying for the house we have, and continue raising money, and in a couple of years, build our church. If we can build without selling the house, we can turn this house into the manse for the pastor that is to take charge of this church. Next Sunday we will take a special collection to repair our house and when I return from Synod the middle of July, I hope to find them worshipping in their own, and not in a hired house.

The session made out their report for Presbytery, this week, and it was much better than I had hoped. After counting up we find that a majority of the families have family worship. The collections for the past year amounted to 1,500 milreis, or between $250 and $300 The membership has almost doubled and the attendance on service more than doubled. I am sorry that I can't take the reports from the other churches, but it would be impossible to get them without a visit to the churches. My next letter will be about the meetings of Presbytery and Synod. Synod will meet the 1st of July in Sao Paulo instead of Campinas. The yellow fever has been so bad in Campinas, that the pastor of the church felt that they could not entertain the members. He had to take his family away and some of the members died. Hoping that you will find all the people well upon your return, and that the work has advanced, but that the workers missed you a great deal.

I am yours very sincerely,

CHARLES B. MORTON.

CAN A PASTOR DO EVANGELISTIC WORK?

Sometimes he can. In proof of this statement I herewith send the PRESBYTERIAN a page of my note book. Having made the acquaintance of a gentleman, of excellent character, connected with a large saw mill interest at Muscogee, a town twenty miles by rail from Pensacola, I learned he was of Presbyterian ancestry and was favorably disposed towards the Presbyterian Church.

Having also learned that other members of his family lived at the same place and were inclined towards our Church. I made an appointment to preach there on the first Thursday night of June. This appointment I filled and had the pleasure of preaching to forty or fifty persons, a fair representation of the few white people who live in this saw-mill town. On Friday following I drove out into the country about a mile and paid a visit to the father of the gentleman above referred to. I found him a very interesting character. One of the oldest men in the county, being in his eighty-second year, and drawing a modest pension for services rendered the territory of Florida in the Seminole war. His name, Allen McKinnon, betrays his Scotch antecedents. And perhaps Dr. H G. Hill, or some of his Scotch friends of Maxton or Fayetteville, will recognize his kindred when I give a few facts of his family history. His father was Robert McKinnon and his mother a McCaskill who came from the highlands of Scotland and settled near Fayetteville, N. C. Later on they removed to Kershaw county, South Carolina, and finally emigrated to Florida in its colonial days. The father having no Presbyterian church near him united with the Methodist church, but the mother retained her connection with the Presbyterian Church so long as she lived. Their son Allen, was baptized in his infancy by a Methodist minister and has lived among the Methodists and Baptists all his life and far removed from any Presbyterian church, but could not get his consent to join any but the Presbyterian church. During my visit I had a full conference with him, and by authority from our session, representing the only Presbyterian church in the county, I received him into our church. On the first Thursday of July I paid a second visit to Muscogee and preached on Thursday night, and on the next day at the home of Allen McKinnon and in the presence of this venerable patriarch, I examined, received and baptized his three adult children—Alexander McKinnon, Robert McKinnon and Sarah McKinnon. These are all worthy children of a truthful, honest, upright father. These facts will help to answer two questions, 1st. Can a pastor do evangelistic work? 2d. Why do some churches report no additions from year to year?

A LETTER TO THE CHURCHES FROM DR. CHESTER.

DEAR FRIENDS:—By the kind providence of God I am to be permitted to visit our missions in the East. The General Assembly so instructed the Executive Committee, provided the necessary arrangements could be made; and by the kind consent of Dr. R. C. Reed, our present chairman, Dr. J. H. McNeilly, our former chairman, and Mr. W.H. Raymond, chairman of our auditing committee, to become responsible for the conduct of the business of the office during my absence, the committee were able to make an arrangement by which it was believed that the work could be efficiently conducted. Certain friends, who believe that such a visit will be a means of advancing the cause, have provided funds sufficient to cover all the expense of it. The way being thus providentially opened, I have arranged to sail from San Francisco on August 5th, in company with our first party of outgoing missionaries, consisting of Mrs. and Miss Nettie DuBose, Rev. and Mrs. James E. Bear, Dr. L. L. Moore and Miss Mattie B. Ingold.

Being accustomed to watch, with absorbing interest, the progress of the work from day to day, as indicated by the office correspondence, it is with regret that I leave this department of it behind me for a season. In doing so, I would express the hope that the number of letters received at the office may not be at all diminished on account of my absence. All letters, except those intended for our Treasurer, Mr. Erskine Reed, may be addressed to "The Presbyterian Foreign Mission Rooms, Box 457, Nashville, Tenn." Those relating to important business will receive courteous and prompt attention from one of the gentlemen constituting the committee of direction, named above. Those relating to merely routine matters will be attended to by some member of the office force.

And now, as I will not be here to say it at the time, I desire to say a word before leaving concerning our October collection. It was demonstrated last October what our Church can do when it is awakened to the necessity of making a special effort. You may rest assured that the same urgency will be in the situation this year, for the utmost that can possibly be done. The same missionaries, with others whom the Lord has called into the field, will be dependent on you for the necessaries of life. The same work, with other work which the Lord has laid at our door, will be dependent on you for being maintained. And there will be the same dearth of funds in our treasury as always exists at the close of the summer months. Some handsome legacies which you have read of as being left us recently, will not be available in time to meet the needs of the work in the fall, and only partially, if at all, during the present fiscal year.

May I not carry to our faithful workers at the front the assurance that during the coming October your efforts in behalf of the cause of Foreign Missions will lack none of the zeal and earnestness and self-sacrifice that were manifested, with such a blessed result, a year ago?

If the Lord will, I hope to accomplish my mission and return some time before the close of the year, and will meanwhile try to give you the benefit, as opportunity allows, of the things concerning work that I may be permitted to see and hear.

Fraternally yours,

S. H. CHESTER.

Patient, hopeful waiting is hard work when it is the only work possible to us in an emergency. But patient waiting is, in its time, the highest duty of a faithful soul.—H. Clay Trumbull.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

One of the brightest pictures of my childhood days, which still stands out dear and sweet in memory's hall, is the hour of family prayers, when the dear father and mother called the children and servants—and the strangers, when present in the home—together morning and evening around the family altar.

A familiar hymn was sung to a familiar tune, the children and servants joining in singing to God's praise. A portion of Scripture was read, and, when necessary, explained, so that the youngest child or most ignorant servant might comprehend its teachings. Then all reverently knelt while the dear father, as the priest of the household, led in prayer and praise and thanksgiving, imploring the presence and blessing of God on all present. Particular mention was made at the children and servants in these petitions.

A few sentences of these prayers come floating back to me through the years that are past, and they soothe and calm my spirit in the hour of toil and trial like a sweet message from the skies. Were they not recorded on high, and may they not still breathe a benediction on the living? I certainly think they do.

This was the daily petition, as it was the devout wish of our dear father's heart: "O Lord, guide and guard our dear children as they walk the slippery paths of youth; incline their hearts to seek thee, to choose Wisdom's way, and to realize that all his paths are peace."

This prayer has been graciously answered, for all the little ones who then knelt at this sacred altar were brought in early life to choose the God of their parents to be their God. Not only the children, but the grandchildren, are walking in wisdom's ways. Who can estimate the value of the family altar where the fathers and mothers, with their children, bow morning and evening in devout prayer and praise before Jehovah's throne?

It is heart-rending to think that there are those all about us who do not know the meaning of "the family altar." There are homes where the voice of prayer and praise is never heard. The father and mother are never seen by their children to kneel and seek a blessing for themselves or for their children. Fathers are so much absorbed in their business, and mothers in their pleasure and their social obligations, that they have no place in all their thoughts for God, and no time to train their children for his love and service. How I pity those who have no precious memories of pious parents and the hallowed association of the family altar!—M. M. D., in Herald and Presbyter.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Jean Ingelow, the distinguished poet and novelist, died in London on the 20th inst., in her seventy-seventh year.

John D. Rockefeller has presented Vassar College with a library of 2,700 books, which were purchased in Germany.

John Howard Bryant, a brother of the poet, William Cullen Bryant, who lives in Princeton, Illinois, is himself a poet. On his ninetieth birthday, July 22d, a reunion of the family will be held at his home.

A bronze statue is to be erected to the memory of Benjamin Franklin on the very spot where he sent up his kite to "wrest the lightning from the skies." The statue is a gift to the city of Philadelphia by Mr. Justus C. Strawbridge, and its execution has been intrusted to Mr. John J. Boyle, the well-known sculptor.

Kaiser Wilhem of Germany has given another proof of his versatility in the recent production of a drama, in which the progress of Germany forms the central theme. The play is entitled "Der Deutsche Lanct Michael," and is an adaptation of the allegorical tableaux presented, last year, under his supervision, and arranged by him. Kaiser Wilhelm has contributed to art and literature before, but along different lines. It is somewhat surprising to find a ruler entering this field, but the Kaiser is not only a capable ruler, but has shown himself to be a man of diversified talents in many directions.

MAGAZINES.

Little Men and Women for July is before us. The little folks will find ever so much of interest on its pages. Vechten Wring, Publisher, 150 Nessau St. New York. $1 a year.

BOOKS.

Our table shows several pamphlets and small books which call for special mention, separately, rather for the subjects treated than for the size or importance of the publications:

"Murdered Millions" is the title of a paper pamphlet manilla card-cover of ninety-six pages with an introduction by Rev. Dr Theodore L. Cuyler. This is the fifth edition. It is published in paper at 15 cents or 100 copies for $10, and cloth 30 cents, or 50 for $10.

The author is Geo. D. Downkontt, M. D., author and proprietor of The Double Cross and Medical Missionary Record in their twelfth year of publication. Dr. Downkontt has devoted his time to preparing medical missionaries, giving information and stirring up the people in the interest of Medical Missions. This pamphlet gives heartrending revelations of the cruelties practiced among half civilized, or wild and barbarous people, and shows the need of medical missionaries and the great good already done by this class of workers. Christ is shown in His gracious character as the Great Physician and from that point of view the need and value of treating the diseases of the body in seeking to save the soul are plainly shown. Dr Downkontt's office is 121 E. 45th Street, New York city.

The Fourth Annual Report of The Open Air Worker's Association of America brings our thought back from the condition of the heathen to that of the vast numbers of the poor in the slums of our cities who are churchless and Christless, the many on our streets and in our cities who can, but will not, attend churches and can be caught and taught and pointed to Christ by street preaching, and the multitudes in the country villages and fields during certain crop seasons, and in manufactories and mines who can be reached by open air preaching. This report is a manual for beginners in this kind of work and is illustrated. If any of our readers are interested in this class of work the secretary, Miss E V. Prentice, 123 Amity St. Brooklyn, N. Y., will send a copy of this Report and Manual. It would be but just to enclose a stamp for postage, but the Association does not ask for it. This work is growing in interest and importance.

The meaning of prayer is personal contact and communion with God. Private prayer is the way to reach God's heart and get God's best gifts for the world, for the Church, for self. The Christian must have contact with men, but the measure of good in his contact with men depends on the intimacy, fullness, strength and receptivity of his contact with God.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. R. L. McNair, from Rockville, Md., to Black Mountain, N. C., temporarily.

Rev. A. Walker White, from Corpus Christi, Texas, to Statesville, N. C., until September 1st.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Interesting notes from Red Springs crowded out this week.

Swannanoa Church:—Has received a blessing. Rev. R. P. Smith, General Evangelist of Mecklenburg Presbytery, came recently and preached eight days. It was a very busy season with the farmers, and often rain interrupted, but the services went on and the interest increased. No extra nor novel methods were used; the Word was preached plainly and earnestly. Eight persons professed faith in Christ and were received as communing members. Several "non-church goers" attended the services regularly. The church is revived and encouraged for the future.

Carthage:—There were eight additions to our church here on last Sabbath, making seventeen that have been added to the two churches in this field since April. The manse at this place is nearly completed and will be quite a nice and convenient home for the pastor. Everything is moving along nicely and we are much encouraged in our work. Chas. Holt Dobbs, Jr., is the pastor.

Gibson's Station:—The Presbyterians at Gibson's Station have been organized into a church, only a short time, but under the efficient leadership of Rev. W. B. Arrowood are moving on nicely and have let out the contract for a church building.

Concord Church, Iredell County:—At a recent congregational meeting it was decided to build a new church and steps are being taken to that end.

Raleigh:—The Sunday-school of the First church, Raleigh, upon being informed of the kind donation of Mrs. Reade for the completion of the Centre building at Barium Springs raised by collection $15.70 towards it. Only $400 is now needed to finish the building.

VIRGINIA.

Martinsville:—Rev. Jerome P. Robertson, pastor. At recent communion the names of ten persons were announced as having been received within the previous three months.

Cumberland:—Messrs. Thornton Holman and David Stuart have been ordained and installed deacons in this church here.

Special Meeting:—A special meeting of the Presbytery of Montgomery is to be held at Lynchburg, August 2d at 2 p. m., to receive the resignation of Rev. R. B. Eggleston, pastor at Bedford City, and if way be clear, to dismiss him to Norfolk Presbytery to accept a call of Portsmouth church.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Hopewell Church, Pee Dee Presbytery:—Mr. S. Scott has been elected a ruling elder in this church. The congregation have unanimously voted to give their pastor, Rev. J. W. McClure, a month's vacation which he will spend with his aged mother in Kentucky.

Missionary "Farewell Service":—An interesting service was held at the First Presbyterian church in Rock Hill, S. C., on the night of July 13th. By the aid of this congregation Miss Mattie B. Ingold has been able to fit herself thoroughly for work in the foreign field as a medical missionary. She expects to sail from San Francisco on the 5th of August with a party of outgoing missionaries. A farewell service was held to bid her Godspeed and every congregation in town was represented at the large assemblage on the above mentioned evening. The pastor, Rev. Alexander Sprunt, was assisted by Rev. Messrs. Thornwell, Neville, Jones and McLure of the Presbyterian church, and by Rev. Messrs. Zimmerman, Roberson and Rogers of the Methodist, Baptist and Associate Reformed Presbyterian churches respectively. After three other addresses and that of the pastor, a responsive was read from the outgoing missionary and she was commended to God in prayer. The Gospel hymn "God be with you till we meet again," was sung and the formal "goodby," was read.

Dr. Ingold goes to Korea, and is to be supported by this church.

ALABAMA.

North Alabama Presbytery:—At a called meeting of North Alabama Presbytery on July 20th, Mr. C. B. Ratchford was received from Bethel Presbytery and licensed to preach. He takes charge of Hartselle group of churches. Messrs. Joseph Dunglinson and Robert Matthews of the Talladega church (the latter from Synod's Orphans' Home) were taken under the care of Presbytery as candidates for the ministry.

W. I. SINNOTT,
Stated Clerk.

TEXAS.

Corpus Christi:—On Sunday, July 11th, two members were received into the First Presbyterian church on profession of faith, and three children were baptized. The pastor, Rev. A. Walker White, was granted a two months leave of absence on account of the serious sickness of his wife. His address until September 1st will be Statesville, N. C.

GENERAL.

A new station has been formed at Cheung Hai, by the workers, Rev. and Mrs. Dodd, Dr. and Mrs. Denman and two children, who went out from Cheung Mai. This is looked upon by the Lao Mission as an initial step to the far north. The work in the Laos is prospering.

Rev. Peter Haverman, the oldest Catholic priest in the United States died on the 23d at his home in Levy, New York. He was born in Holland in 1806.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Prof. Vinson's rapid improvement has amazed and delighted his friends. He is now able to walk about, has an excellent appetite, and hopes to be entirely well in a week or two, is gaining strength and flesh daily, and finds, to his surprise, that his eyes, which have given him trouble for years, are considerably stronger than before.

Most of the other professors have scattered for the summer. Dr. Harrison and his family are at Waynesville, N. C. Dr. Shearer and Mrs. Shearer are spending a month in Tennessee visiting old friends, and and attending the Monteagle Chautauqua. The Dr. is expected back on the 27th, and will attend the sessions of the Biblical Assembly at Asheville. Dr. Martin is spending his honey-moon in the Blowing Rock cottage, keeping house for the summer. Dr. Harding and family are spending the summer at Davidson, so with Prof. Vinson and Dr. Smith. The latter leaves in a few days for a visit to Greensboro. Dr Grey also has been one of the numerous stay-at-homes this summer. In fact, Davidson bids fair to become quite a summer resort, with its abundant shade, accessible library and reading-room, and its unlimited fruit and vegetables.

The educational contest is being waged over old Mecklenburg, and everywhere else in the State, and picnics are being held in every township to discuss and advance the cause of local taxation. Dr. Smith addressed a large mass-meeting at Huntersville on the 22d in advocacy of the new law.

The King's Daughters gave on last Thursday evening a most enjoyable entertainment in the old chapel. Nearly all the actors were little tots, who had been trained with much skill and success. The proceeds were devoted to repainting the parsonage.

Mrs. Martin and Miss Mary left last week for Asheville, where they will spend the remainder of the heated term. Miss Lucy Martin will visit friends at Wilmington during the month of August.

HOME MISSIONS OF FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

At the spring meeting of Fayetteville Presbytery the two departments of its local missions were combined. This action combined also the funds of both, so that there is now but one purse for Presbyterial Home Missions.

The former sources of revenue remain unchanged for the present, and it is to be borne in mind that combining the departments did not lessen either work or expense. The February and August collections for Presbyterial Home Missions, and the pledges of congregations for Presbyterial Evangelistic Missions are all required still. The work is growing and expenses increasing, so that contributions must be liberal, or the missions will be seriously embarrassed. This is our Lord's work, let us co-operate with Him heartily. Let the August collections be as liberal as possible. May there not be instalments also on the pledges given at Presbytery for Evangelistic Missions? There is pressing need of money now. The faithful workers in the field are worthy of their hire, which is long due, but the treasury is almost empty. Please forward all contributions to the undersigned.

Rev. HUGH CRAIG, Treasurer,
Rowland, N. C.

NOTICE.

The visitation committees of Fayetteville Presbytery will please bear in mind the importance of the faithful performance of their duties. There being five Sabbaths in August would it not be wise to appoint the week before the fifth Sabbath for visitation. How pleasant and profitable it would be, both to churches and ministers to employ this very propitious season for that much needed and sadly neglected duty.

M. N. McIVER,
Agt. Visitation for Fayetteville Presbytery.

A TEACHER WANTED FOR THE GIRLS' SCHOOL AT RANGCHOW.

The girls' school at Hangchow is greatly in need of an experienced teacher in order to relieve the present superintendent, Miss Ella Davidson, whose first term of service will expire during this year, and whose condition of health requires that she have vacation and rest.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee held to-day, July 13th, it was announced that a friend had contributed the amount necessary to pay the salary of such a teacher for a year, and the Secretary was instructed to issue this call for some one to volunteer for the work. Good health, consecration to the work and proven ability in teaching are the special qualifications required. If one possessing these qualifications will respond to this appeal she will be sent out as soon as she can make the necessary preparations to go.

He held the position of Tutor in Latin of the University of N. C. for one year. He was prepared for College at the Horner School, of Oxford, N. C.

John R. Carr, of Durham, N. C., was announced at the Commencement at the University, the best man in Sophomore Class of '97. He was prepared at the Horner School of Oxford, N. C.

Darius Eatman and Burton Craig graduated magna cum laude in the class of '97 of the University. They have been leaders of their class for four years. Both were prepared at the Horner School, Oxford, N. C.

Cadet Neil D. Emerson At Horner's.

The Oxford Ledger of yesterday, in referring to the closing exercises at Horner's school, pays the following deserved compliment to a Wilmington boy: Messenger.

"All the declaimers and essayists did splendidly as is always the case with the Horner cadets, but conspicuously meritorious was the declamation of Cadet Neil D. Emerson, of Wilmington, N. C. His subject was the 'Dream of Clarence,' and this young man spoke with a beauty, earnestness and eloquence that electrified all present, eliciting a storm of well deserved applause. His rare gifts will assuredly win for him future fame on the arena of eloquence if he will cultivate his native gifts in that direction. He was awarded the declaimer's medal and was fortunate as the recipient of many beautiful flowers."

The William Bingham School, formerly the Presbyterian High School, of Mebane, N. C., begins its work under most advantageous circumstances. The location, the name, the high grade of work previously and the Christian culture, have placed this school among the first in the State and the present principal, Preston Lewis Gray, of Washington and Lee University, and his assistants will carry the work on to the benefit of its patrons and friends.

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions met in the Secretary's office July 15th at 9.00 a. m.

On motion of Maj. Hardie it was resolved that the Committee be divided into four sub-committees, one of which shall have in charge work in China, one the work in Japan and Korea, one the work in South America and Mexico, and one the work in Africa; to whom the Secretary may from time to time refer such matters as require special consideration.

Letters were read from Rev. H. S. Allyn and Rev. S. R. Gammon, describing the tour they had recently taken visiting many places hitherto unvisited by a missionary, where they found many people who had in some way obtained copies of the Scriptures, by reading which they had become interested, and were ready to receive the Gospel. Several were baptized, and many others expressed a desire for baptism, who were not thought to have been as yet sufficiently instructed. Dr. Allyn's letter stated that while these people had been neglected by the Church hitherto, they had been sought and reached by spiritualists and other errorists.

Mr. Gammon's letter contained another urgent request for some one to be sent to assist in the work at the Lavras school.

A letter from Rev. J. W. Davis announced rapid progress in the building of the Soochow hospital. He was expecting to go to Swatow in the south of China, to attend the meeting of the Committee on the revision of the Gospels, during the months of July and August.

A letter from Rev. A. Sydenstricker reported that he had recently had about twenty applications for admission to the Church. Some had been received, and others had been deferred for further instruction. The announcement was made that Rev. Henry M. Woods was at Johns-Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he had recently undergone a surgical operation for appendicitis. It was stated that the operation had been so successfully performed that he was hoping to be able to return to China in time for the mission meeting in September.

The Secretary was instructed to issue a call for an additional female teacher for the girls school at Hangchow, who will be sent out as soon as a suitable one can be found, the funds for her support having been specially contributed.

An invitation was received to the wedding of Rev. W. McS. Buchanan and Miss Mary Emma Wilson, which was to have taken place at Tokio, Japan, on June 23rd.

A letter from Rev. Eugene Bell of June 10th stated that all our mission were well at that date; that Mr. Reynolds had gone to Chun-Ju, and that the permission of the authorities had been given for the erection of a house, and the residence of our missionaries at Na Ju. Miss Mattie B. Ingold, M. D. will sail on the "China" August 5th, as a reinforcement to this mission.

Dr. L. L. Moore and Miss Nettie DuBose will sail on the same vessel as new missionaries to China. Mrs. DuBose and Rev. J. E. Bear and family will return to their fields by the same vessel.

Letters were read from Miss Dysart and Rev. A. T. Graybill, presenting encouraging reports of our Mexican work.

The church at Rock Hill, S. C., announced through its pastor, Rev. Alexander Sprunt, D. D., that it would undertake the support of Miss Mattie B. Ingold, in Korea. The church has already fully provided for her personal and medical outfit.

Miss Sophie Wright, of Nashville, was appointed as a missionary to Africa, to be sent out when the way is clear.

Miss Grace Thomas, who has served us so long and faithfully and efficiently, in charge of our leaflet department, retired from the work at this meeting. The committee adopted resolutions expressing their appreciation of her faithful service. Mr. James Kennedy, of this city was, appointed to fill her place.

It was announced that more than sufficient funds to cover the expenses of the Secretary's proposed visit to China and Japan, had been contributed to that purpose. He will sail with the party of outgoing missionaries from San Francisco August 5th, and the committee of direction, consisting of the Chairman, R. C. Reed, D. D., J. H. McNeilly, D. D., and Mr. W. H. Raymond will take charge of the office during his absence.

A letter was received from the Treasurer of the General Assembly's Board of Trustees announcing legacies to the amount of $1,400 to our work, left by Miss M. E. Harman: and a letter from the executor of the estate announced the legacy of Miss Mary J. Baldwin, of Staunton, Va., of $10,000. Some part of this legacy will be realized within the present year, but as it will require considerable time for the settlement of the estate, it is probable that the greater part of it will not be available for this year's work.

The committee adopted the following resolutions with reference to the death of Miss Baldwin:

"In the death of Miss Mary Julia Baldwin, which occurred at Staunton, Va., July 1st, 1897, the cause of Foreign Missions has sustained the loss of a friend whose gifts were large and continuous, whose interest in the world's evangelization was profound and inspiring, and whose efforts were untiring in behalf of all that makes for the glory of the Redeemer's cause. Miss Baldwin was a rare woman, whose faith and consecration, as well as her intellectual gifts and scholarly attainments lifted her to a lofty usefulness; and whose personal influence was so great that she reproduced in the lives of others the high ideals and noble virtues of her own life and character. As a committee we would record the high esteem in which we hold the faithful services of this devoted woman, whose last will and testament only gives fresh evidence of her love for the cause we represent. For ourselves, and in the name of our missionaries, we would express loving and grateful appreciation of the many and substantial kindnesses shown, by Miss Balwin, to the missionaries and their children. In company with thousands who have felt the blessing of her life, we have sorrow that her personal service on earth is ended, and are comforted with the sure conviction that, to her, death was but triumphant entrance upon a great and endless reward. As a testimonial of our esteem, a page of our minutes is hereby set apart to her memory."

S. H. CHESTER,
Secretaty.

A BLIND MAN WHO COULD SEE.

I have never known but one man who was born blind. Although a member of another denomination, he was often at our prayer meetings, where he frequently took part. One New Year's eve he arose and told us of his little, boy, who, a few days before, had come to him, and, backing up to him, measured up to a certain button on his vest, and asked: "Papa, will I ever be as big as you are?"

His father said: "Why, I suppose so; you are growing all the time."

In a few hours the little fellow came back, and measured again, and seemed disappointed that he could not see that he had grown any. His father assured him that although he could not see it, he was growing, and that if he would be regular in his habits—eating and drinking and sleeping, as a boy should—that in ten years he might be not only as large, but a good deal larger. He went on to say: "It is so in our Christian lives. Sometimes we spend too much time in measuring, and not enough in fulfilling the conditions of growth. The eating of one meal, or two, or their omission, will make little difference in a child's growth. But for him to be governed by impulse, and to eat what and when he feels like it, and to drink what and when his appetite craves it, and to go to bed and get up when his inclination prompts him to do so, would make him a man with no strength of character or constitution."

It is so in the Christian life. We may not be much affected by one attendance or non-attendance upon the regular service of God's house or by one coming or not coming to the communion table, but to be governed in these things by impulse, by feeling, will make of us weak, unhappy Christians. It is by a regular, habitual, persistent use of the means of grace that we grow. Even then we cannot see our growth by too frequent measurements. But we may be assured that, by a confident, cheerful, hopeful use of God's house, His Word and prayer, when we look back, after awhile, we will see that now we have a brighter hope and a stronger faith than then, and that all along the way we have had a growing confidence in God—Rev. E. P. Keach.

THE SICK OF THE PALSY.

In comparison with Christ the people who gathered around him seem very thoughtless and childish and blind. On one occasion, in Capernaum, as he was teaching in a house there came four men bearing one sick. Such a crowd surrounded Jesus that those who bore the sick could not get near, in the ordinary way, so they went to the roof, and, making an opening, let the poor man down into the midst before Jesus. He was a physical wreck, helpless, possibly even speechless. He was a paralytic. The sadness of his condition had led these four friends to bring him to Jesus, that he might restore the poor, afflicted body to health and strength. But Jesus saw what the others didn't see. He saw the man's soul crippled by sin. "Thy sins be forgiven thee," he said. He healed the soul. That was the part of the man worth saving. Then as an entirely secondary matter, he healed the man's body. And we wake with a start, to find that we have been standing with the crowd, pitying the afflicted body, with never a thought for the crippled soul.

I wonder if you see what a difference there is between the attitude of Christ himself and that of those who brought the man to Christ. Suppose I should be caught in some machinery, and have my coat torn and my arm badly mangled, and should go to a physician, expecting him to mend my coat. He, of course, would never see my torn sleeve, except to thrust it back as he attended to my arm. Why? Because my sleeve is valueless in comparison to my arm. So Jesus values the soul in comparison with the body.—Rev. H. A. Grubbs.

GOING THROUGH THE FORM.

The call of duty is not conditioned upon the state or circumstances in which it may find us. It is sometimes said that when we have reached the point where we can only "go through the form," we are no longer called to do anything. But it is just at this point that duty often makes its largest demands upon us. Probably few of us ever did our duty so well as when we went through the form because it was the best we could do. There are times when asking a question is like making a formal call, and the depressed teacher wonders if it is worth while to ask, when he is conscious that it would be a relief to know that the pupil's mind was "not at home." But a formal call often means high courage, often turns out better than was expected, and, at the least, serves to keep open communication for a better day. The call of duty is always a call to do the best we can with whatever strength we may have.—Sunday School Times.

The spirit of anarchism is in the air. It pervades the home, the municipality, the State, the Church. True liberty is being confounded with unbounded license, and democratic government with the reign of communistic principles. Christians, of all men, should evince the profoundest respect and obedience to all lawfully constituted authority. To do otherwise is to betray the cause of Christ. It takes neither grace nor wisdom to institute a stubborn revolt against lawful authority in any relation of life; but it is a mark of both to be law-loving and law-abiding at all times and in all places. The highest liberty is to be found in the most cheerful obedience to wholesome law and authority. — Free Methodist.

INTRODUCTORY.

The immediate connection between this lesson and the last is external rather than internal. The last lesson was taken from a letter written at Corinth while Paul was there laboring. This is taken from a letter written to Corinth five years later. It throws light upon the history of the Church of Corinth and it brings to the front again a question which was troublesome among all the Gentile churches. The especial application here is temperance in view of our duty to fellow Christians. Turning back to Lesson V. of this quarter we may review our knowledge of Corinth and of the Church founded there. "The Church at Corinth seems to have been the largest, as it certainly was the most troublesome that the apostle gathered; and both for the same reason. Corinth was a commercial city. The restless, active temperament of the people bore fruit in parties within the Church, disorders in the lives of its members and other evils." Sunday School Times. "The Church of Corinth was a little band in a city of 400,000, a gem in a flowing sewer of iniquity. The early training, the former habits, the surrounding influences of a city which even 'in the Gentile world was famous—infamous—for dishonesty, debauchery and drunkenness made it difficult to live the true Christian life." Peloubet.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. Things offered unto idols Those portions of animals offered in sacrifice, which were not laid on the altar and belonged partly to the priests, were sometimes eaten in private feasts, or sold in the markets. Thus a Christian might innocently eat of such meats or buy it in the markets. This would raise the question whether it was right for the followers of Christ to partake of food so offered to idols. Similar questions arise in our modern manners and customs. We all have knowledge, as to the nature of idols and idol worship. Knowledge puffeth up. If merely mental it makes us conceited, proud. This is the beginning of a parenthesis running through the third verse. Charity, brotherly love, edifieth, builds up. Knowledge controlled by the heart held in humility builds up the character and enlarges sympathies and increases helpfulness and consideration for others. "It enlarges, and ennobles and transfigures the soul in which it dwells, and thus, by building each part of the church, builds up the whole." Peloubet's Notes.

Vs. 2. Think that he knoweth anything. That without love he knoweth anything in its completeness and in its relations and obligations. He knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know, for its blessing and joy to himself and benefit to others.

Vs. 3. If any man love God. We would expect the inference to be true knowledge, but the apostle is turning from the human and practical to the divine and blessed thought, the same is known of Him.

Vs. 4. As concerning therefore: the apostle in a parenthesis having laid down the principle involved. We know that an idol is nothing in the world. Has no life, and represents no real existence, is only material of wood or stone or metal "carved by art or man's device."

Vs. 5. Called gods. And that is all in the false religions of superstition and invention of men.

Vs. 6. There is but one God. Science has come to this truth recently, so that what was argued fifty years ago is now no longer a question. The Father. The first person in the Trinity—the Creator of all—from whose will and purpose and for whose glory in Jesus Christ by the Holy Spirit, all things are and were created One Lord, Jesus Christ by whom we and all things were made. If we were alone in the world having knowledge with love there would be no difficulty.

Vs 7. Howbeit. We are not alone and cannot act as if alone, for there is not in every man that knowledge about meat offered to idols. With conscience of the idol. Through ignorance believing that it was or represented a living personality.

Vs. 8. Meat commendeth us not to God. He does not judge us on that basis, but as to our character or moral condition in relation to Him as Lord of all. God does not judge us by the mere act of eating, but whether we consider and how we affect others. He holds us responsible to the extent of our knowledge and with a demand for our love, that we should eat or not eat with reference to the salvation of others. Being weak is defiled. By yielding to what it believes to be wrong.

Vs. 9. Take heed. To this which is important and for which God will hold us accountable. Lest this liberty, or freedom to eat such things, become a stumbling block, over which weaker ones may fall into sin.

Vs. 10. Sit at meat in the idol's temple. At some social feast which you think harmless.

Vs. 11. Shall the weak brother perish. As he who sins against his conscience is on the road to destruction.

Vs. 12. Ye sin against Christ. As He identifies Himself with His people.

Vs. 13. Meat. Means food in general. Make my brother to offend. Cause him to stumble and fall into sin. I will eat no meat of any kind.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. Love which is charity seeking the best interest of others is the spring and test of our duty to our fellow men.

2. God is love. By loving we partake of God's nature, and know Him and He knows us.

3. The mighty power of this love will move us to deny ourselves anything that we may save others. If we have not this love we are nothing.

BIBLE COMFORT.

Text for the week:

Now our Lord Jesus Christ, Himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work. 2 Thess. 16, 17.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Sorrow's Benefit, Eccl. 7: 1-6.

Tuesday, God Is Gracious, Ps, 103: 1-22.

Wednesday, God Helps, Ps. 146: 1-8.

Thursday, Comfort Ye. Isa. 40: 1-8.

Friday, The Comfort of the Scriptures, Rom. 15: 1-6.

Saturday, The Comforter, John 14: 15-20.

Sunday, The Comfort that comes from the Bible, Isa. 12: 1-6.

Suggestions:

God's Word is a treasury of comfort; the Holy Spirit is the Revealer and Dispenser of it.

Pleasure is vivid, but shadowy and fleeting, comfort is less sprightly, but solid and enduring.

No sorrows are so great that God's comforts cannot relieve them; no days so dark that the comforts of God cannot brighten and glorify them.

Notes:

Comfort may be defined as a state or condition of contentment, in freedom from pain of body or disquietude of mind. Anything then that relieves pain or distress is comforting. But comfort is as surely administered when strength is imparted to bear the ills of life of whatever kind or nature these may be. This doubtless was primarily the meaning of the word. It is used in the Bible mainly, almost exclusively in this sense, as we read of the comfort of hope—strength to bear from the encouragement which is given to hope for a bright outcome in the future. So we read of the comfort of love—the strength to bear from a sense of the love of God animating our souls—God's love to us, that is, and our love to God.

The same special idea of strengthening seems to be conveyed in the title designating the Holy Spirit; The Comforter. The disciples were to be left in direst straits, overcome with trouble and knowing not where to look for support in their sad estate. The Gracious Saviour, foreseeing all, said: "I will pray the Father, and He will give you another Comforter"—another Who will impart the needed strength and who will support you through all your troubles. The comfort of the Holy Ghost, would seem to be the calm and restful strength which absolute repose on God alone can give, and which is so necessary to the bearing the burdens and faithfully performing the various duties of life.

There are degrees of comfort. We read of "Good Comfort"—a term our Saviour was wont to use freely to those who came to Him in distress—and we read of strong consolation to those who have fled for refuge to the hope set for them in the Gospel.

This brings consideration of the basis of comfort. Bible comforts are revealed everywhere in the Scriptures, to treat every case of trouble and trial and to give all needed relief—ordinarily by imparting supporting strength. Comfort administered by man depends upon the confidence we have in the ability or the sincerity of him who promises. The comforts of the Scriptures, so ever-ready and ever applicable, are always adequate and never failing. They are founded upon the promises of God—promises which are yea and amen in Christ Jesus.

Wherefore let us comfort ourselves with these comforts of God; blessing Him, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them who are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

K. McDONALD.

CURRIE.—At his home near Union church, N. C., on July 8th, W. A. Currie, aged twenty-nine years. He was one who was never known to turn a heedless ear to the piteous call of the needy. He was a consecrated member of Union church, faithful to the Sabbath-school and always liberal in his prompt response to every call made by the church. He was a sincere friend and his sincerity won many friends who are now sorely bereaved. He left a wife and dear little boy who have the sympathy of a large circle of friends. The merchants of Carthage closed their stores and the greater part of the people of the town left their several places of business to attend the funeral at Union church. This act of sympathy on the part of Carthage draws closer the strong ties that bind Union and Carthage. May the Father of the fatherless and Judge of the widow supply grace sufficient to sustain them in this sad bereavement.

Tribute of Respect.

ALFORD.—The members of the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of Ashpole Presbyterian church hereby desire to express their sense of the loss sustained by the death of their beloved sister Mrs. Sarah Aiford. From her unselfish and kindly disposition, Mrs. Alford had the sincere regard and confidence of all the members and was justly esteemed for her worth in the Society. For several years she had been unable, from age and its infirmities to take an active part in the work of the Society, but her sympathy and interest did not fail, and her liberal support was continued to the last. Though mourning the loss of one so truly helpful, the Society bows in submission to the will of God, and rests in the hope that their loss has been her gain.

The Society directs that this tribute of regard be forwarded to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN for publication, and also that a copy be sent to the relatives of the deceased, and also copied in the records of the Society.

Tribute of Respect.

McGIRT.—The angel of death has again entered "The Ladies' Missionary Society" of Ashpole church, and removed from our midst, a true and faithful member, Mrs. Mary C. McGirt. She had been a member of our Society since its organization and during all this time was ever ready to perform the duties entrusted to her, and entered zealously into the work of the Society and advancement of the missionary cause. While we grieve that a valued friend and helper has been removed, we rejoice that all is well with her. Therefore be it Resolved 1st. That in the death of Mrs. McGirt we sustain a great loss, not only in our Society, but by the sick and afflicted around, at whose beds she was a constant and welcome visitor, carrying comforts for the body as well as the mind. She will be sadly missed.

FOR THE FAMILY.

A SABBATH MORNING PRAYER.

Grant me, O gracious Lord ! to-day
A blessing when I tread
The dear old pathway to thy house,
Wherein thine own are fed,
Where from the finest of the wheat
Is made the children's bread.

Grant me, O Spirit all divine !
The sweet indwelling grace
That for the reverent waiting soul
Pervades the hallowed place—
The place where God himself reveals
The brightness of His face.

Grant me, O thou Most High ! to know
The comfort thou dost send
To those who leave their cares with Thee,
Thou strong and steadfast Friend ;
In the rich fulness of Thy peace
Bid my long conflicts end.

Grant me, Lord ! in Thy fair house
To learn Thy holy will,
And, learning it, to lay mine own
Before Thee, and be still,
So finding joy unspeakable
Mine inmost soul to thrill.

Grant me a blessing in Thy house
O gracious Lord this day,
Go with me evermore, dear Lord,
And ever with me stay,
And shed the light of heaven upon
My upward-climbing way.

THE BURIAL OF AGASSIZ.

The funeral services in the college chapel were over. Statesmen, scholars and scientists had there assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to the most eminent and advanced naturalist of the time, and one of the most honored men that ever made a home in America.

The simple but sublime words of the Scriptures, that give promise of immortality and of the resurrection, had been read over the body of the dead, as it lay on the steps of the altar hidden in evergreens and flowers. The requiem of Cherubini had been chanted by the college students, and now the funeral procession was slowly approaching Mount Auburn —the great naturalist's final resting-place.

It was a mild afternoon on the 18th of December—a day out of season—and warm as when the springtime is melting into summer, or when the changing summer begins to golden the corn-lands of fall. We had ridden to the cemetery while the funeral procession was forming, and now stood by the grave. It was carpeted with evergreen and strewn with flowers.

It is said that the great naturalist loved flowers. His house in Cambridge seemed full of them. They were to him nature's apostles, eloquent with celestial truth, gentle teachers of the mysteries of the all-embracing love of God. He was accustomed to speak of the sublime and beautiful in nature as the "thoughts of God," and in the flowers which he had found beside the streams of every land, he had delighted to read a Gospel written by a beneficient Hand.

"Let me be buried in the simplest possible manner." said Cuvier, Agassiz's early teacher and friend. Agassiz himself made a similar request, which his friends desired scrupulously to fulfil. And so, though no societies, glittering with insignia, were to encircle his grave, and no funeral dirges were to float above it, his friends had resolved to bury him in flowers.

His grave was made on the summit of the rising ground in the cemetery. The delicate carpet of evergreens which had been spread over the lot, completely hid the earth from view. The silent resting place in which he was to lie was fragrant with white japonicas, and cushioned with flowers.

In the centre of the lot stood a large stone cross. Christian men of all nations had looked to Agassiz as the defender of their faith, and the emblem seemed sublime in its significance as it stood in the winter sunlight above that open grave.

It was draped with ivy and delicate evergreens, and wreathed with japonicas, azalias, carnations and other varieties of flowers. It looked like a grand Easter picture, and presented a scene well worthy of the pen of the poet and pencil of the artist.

In the chapel we had seen the crowded audience hushed in reverent awe, as the venerable chaplain had read those sublime words of Hebrew poetry which suggest the grandeur of the moral mission of the naturalist and geologist, "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from eternity to eternity thou art God," and as we saw the arms of the cross holding its fragrant floral tributes over the grave, we could but feel how glorious to the student of nature are the hopes of the Christian faith.—Companion.

Nature's Detectives.

When a crime is committed, no matter in what corner of the earth the criminal tries to hide, he knows that probably somewhere or other on the look-out is a detective waiting to lay his hand on him.

When any disease attacks mankind and hides itself in the human system, no matter how obscure or complicated the disease may be, Nature among her great force of detective remedies has one that will eventually hunt down and arrest that particular disease.

Lung and bronchial diseases are among the most baffling complaints which doctors have to deal with; because it isn't the lungs or bronchial tubes alone which are affected, but every corner of the system furnishes a lurking place for these elusive maladies.

They change and reappear and dodge about the system under numberless disguises. They are almost always complicated with liver or stomach troubles, nervousness, neuralgia, or "general debility."

The best detective remedy which Nature has provided to search out and arrest these perplexing ailments is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It lays an arresting hand directly upon the poisonous, paralyzing elements hiding in the liver and digestive organs.

It gives the blood-making glands power to manufacture an abundant supply of pure, red, highly vitalized blood which reinforces the lungs with healthy tissue; feeds the nerve-centres with power, and builds up solid muscular flesh and active energy.

For weak lungs, spitting of blood, shortness of breath, nasal catarrh, bronchitis, severe coughs, asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest cough it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

THE LITTLE GENTLEMAN.

What makes the little gentleman ?
Not station, high or low,
Not manners, nor a sunny smile
On cheeks where roses glow.
A goodly outside charms the sight ;
But tell me, if you can,
What is it that at once proclaims
The little gentleman ?

It surely cannot be the dress,
Nor is it wit or birth ;
These never represented yet
The soul's undying worth.
Nor is it fair or courtly speech ;
Not since the world began
Has this announced to any one
The little gentleman.

What is it then, my rosy lad,—
Politeness, gentle words ?
These are as natural to some
As singing is to birds.
But there is something greater far
In God's eternal plan,
By which the heart may always know
The little gentleman.

Respect and reverence for age :
A truthful loyalty
To mother, father, and to friends,
No matter what may be ;
The heart's ideal fixed on high,
Beyond all earthly ban ;
The courage to do right,—these make
The little gentleman !

JACK'S BOOMERANG.

Aunt Flora was making some walnut creams that last afternoon in March. She had to crack the nuts very carefully to them out whole, and some halves of shells were not broken at all. Jack's sharp eyes discovered them in the coal hod.

"O, goody !" cried he, "they'll be just the thing to fool Teddy with tomorrow, Aunt Flo. I'll stick 'em together and he'll think they're regular walnuts."

"I wouldn't," said Aunt Flora. "He is such a little boy, and he will be so disappointed, I wouldn't, Jack."

But Jack would. He picked out shells enough to make three walnuts; then he got the glue bottle and stuck them together so carefully you wouldn't have known they were ever cracked.

"Don't they look just good enough to eat?" laughed he. "Now, when they get dry I'll put them in a paper bag, and give them to Teddy in the morning."

Then he ran out to his play, whistling; and he played so long and hard that he did'nt think of the walnuts again until he came home from school next day at noon.

Aunt Flora had put them away for him, however. She told him where to find them.

"On the second shelf of the dining room closet, in a paper bag," said she.

Jack's face had a sober look. He thought Aunt Flora did'nt like his joke.

"May be I hadn't best fool Teddy," said he. "Guess I'll take 'em out and fool Johnny Wilson. I haven't been fooled to-day, Aunt Flo."

But Aunt Flora did not answer, and when Jack got to the dinning room he found Teddy there. It did seem too good a chance to be lost. Jack took the bag of walnuts from the closet shelf.

"Hello, Teddy !" he said, "have some nuts ?"

"O, yes !" cried Teddy, running to get the tack hammer. He liked walnuts almost better than anything else. "You're the best boy, Jack," he said.

At which Jack looked sober again. I think he felt a little bit ashamed. After all, it wasn't the best of fun to fool a little five year old boy, and his own brother, too. But he gave Teddy the bag.

In less than two seconds down came the hammer on the first walnut. It cracked very easily, indeed, and it had the funniest kernel you ever saw in a nut —a bright new dime! It didn't take long to crack the other two, you may be sure; and there were thirty cents—enough to buy two whole pounds of walnuts.

"O ! O !" cried Teddy, astonished beyond measure. "Are they mine ? Where did 'em come from ?"

Jack's face was red as a rose. He was almost ready to feel cross about it; but, looking up, he saw Aunt Flora smiling in the doorway, and laughed instead, a little sheepishly.

"I guess I'm like the story you told about the man that threw the boomerang, Aunt Flo, and it came back and hit him," said he. "But I'm glad of it, just the same.—Youth's Companion.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I was appointed by the president of our society to write to your good paper. We have two societies in our church. "The Ladies' Aid Society," and "The Children's Aid Society. We are all devoted to our president, and always look forward to our meetings with great pleasure. We are also very fond of our dear pastor, Rev. R. Z. Johnston. I live in a small town in western Carolina, which I think is a beautiful place. We have had a great many Wilmington people spending the summer here, at different times. Our church is quite near my home, and is an exceedingly pretty one. I had a delightful visit to one of mother's dear friends, who lives in your city. We have had your paper in our household ever since my mother was a little child, and we could not get along without it. With many good wishes, I am

Your little friend,
KATHERINE B. HOKE.
Lincolnton, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—As you have been so kind as to publish my other letter I will write again. I was sorry to see only one letter in the last paper. I hope the time will come when the whole page will be filled. I spent last week with my grandma and enjoyed myself very much riding horseback and wading in the creek. I was glad to see our former pastor, Mr. McIlwain's picture in the PRESBYTERIAN. I am going to keep the paper as I think it looks very much like him. As I cannot think of anything else I will close by asking a question.

Your little friend,
VIRGINIA ROBINSON.
Lowell, N. C.

Editor N.C. Presbyterian:—We are three little boys, first cousins. We have two pets, a dog and a goat. We have good jolly times every day. It has rained nearly all day to-day and we haven't been out of the house much of the day. We have a rat box setting, but have'nt caught anything in it yet. We don't go to school now. It is vacation now for us all. We are enjoying ourselves eating watermelons now.

Your little friends,
BESSIE JANE MCGOOGAN,
BENJAMEN FRANK MCMILLAN,
ROSCOE DRAKE MCMILLAN.
Cromartie, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little girl nearly nine years oid. I have recited the Child's Catechism perfectly to my Sunday-school superintendent, Mr. J. P. Paisley. He gave me a Testament and Mr. Converse sent me a certificate. I have a paint box that my cousin, Shepherd Russell, sent me for a Christmas present. Grandpa Stanfield was a preacher and he used to write for your paper. We live with grandma at his old home. Our house is in a grove by a public road, and we have a big shady yard to play in. I have one sister older than I am and one brother younger than I am. He was very sick last spring. He was sick about a month. He talks about cows and horses, and hogs all the time. We go to Red House Sunday-school whenever we can. My teacher is Miss Mary Smith. Rev. P. C. Morton is our pastor.

Your little friend,
MAMIE E. LANSDELL.
Semora, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian:—There are such few girls and boys writing to your paper I will try to drop you a few lines. I like to read the other letters and I hope that the other boys and girls like to read mine. We little girls ought to be thankful to the dear editor for his kindness in publishing our little letters. I went with papa to see grandma the other day and she was quite sick, but is much better now. I will close by asking a question.

Your little friend,
E. MYRTLE WILKINSON.

THINGS USEFUL.

Nothing has a worse effect on the complexion than standing over a hot fire. To avoid this effect rub a bit of cold cream over the face before going near the fire. This protects the face from the heat and dirt. When done working over the fire wipe off the cream with a soft flannel cloth.

Bananas a la Creme.—Take six plump, thoroughly ripe bananas, lay them in a refrigerator until they are ice cold. Just a few minutes before dinner peel the bananas, split each one in halves lengthways, lay them in a deep, oblong glass dish. Squeeze over the bananas the juice of two large oranges. Stand the dish in the refrigerator while you prepare the cream. Put a pint of rich cream in a bowl. Add to it two heaping tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a half a salt-spoonful of fine salt. Crush a dozen large, ripe strawberries and strain their juice into the cream. Whip the cream till it is stiff, and pour it over the bananas. Keep the dish in the refrigerator till ready to serve. Then ornament the top of the cream, which will be a delicate shade of pink, with a few slices of banana, alternated with strawberries cut in two.

THE ABIDING ONE.

Some hearts are like a quiet village street,
Few and well known the passers to and fro;
Some like a busy city's market place,
And countless forms and faces come and go.

Into my life unnumbered steps have trod'
Though brief that life, and nearing now its close:
At first the forms of phantasies and dreams,
And then the varied tread of friends and foes,

Coming and going—ah! there lay the pang,
That when my heart had blossomed and unlocked
Its wealth to greet the loved familiar step,
Lo! it was gone and only echoes mocked

My listening ear. But O; there came one step,
So soft and slow, which said, "I pass not by,
But stay with thee forever, if thou wilt,
Amid this constant instability."

Then in His eyes I saw the love I craved—
Love past my craving—love that died for me.
He took my hand, and in its gentle strength
I learned the joy of leaning utterly.

Still do the countless footsteps come and go;
Still with a sigh the echoes die away;
But One abides and fills the solitude
With music and with beauty, night and day.

—The Christian.

Cling fast to the Hand that is leading you, though it be in darkness, though it be in deep waters—you know whom you have believed. Yield not for a single moment to misgivings about future storms. Infinite love, joined to infinite skill, shall pilot the way through every strait and temptation.—J. Alexander.

REV. AND MRS. WILLIAM McCLURY JUNKIN.

Two brothers, Pennsylvanians by birth and Scotch-Irish by descent, Doctors of Divinity, the one Dr. George Junkin, founder of Lafayette College and up to the warpresident of Washington College, now Washington and Lee University. While in the latter position one of his daughters became the wife of Prof. Jackson, known in history as "Stonewall." One other daughter was that sweet singer in Israel, Mrs. Margaret J. Preston. It was natural that his namesake, son of Dr. David X. Junkin, should come to Washington College and board in the family of his uncle. George G. Junkin, Jr., after his graduation, taught school and later practiced law at Christiansburg, Va. He enlisted on the side of the Confederacy and was lieutenant and A. A. G., on Gen. Jackson's staff. His brother William was a paymaster in the Union army. He married Miss Bettie Montague, a daughter of a ruling elder in the Christiansburg church. After the war he was lawyer and judge and trustee of Washington and Lee University. Of these seven sons and five daughters, the eldest son is one of our missionaries to Korea. William McClury Junkin was born Dec. 13th, 1865. At the age of thirteen he was sent to Oxford Academy, Floyd C. H., Va., a modest little school in charge of two of God's elect servants, Rev. and Mrs. Jno. K. Harris. Here the religious influences were very strong, and when at the age of seventeen he entered Washington and Lee, it was with the feeling that the Christian life was the only life. Leaving college on account of a threatened eye trouble, he spent one year at engineering and two in teaching. It was while leading the wild free life in the engineer corps that he and his two tent-mates became anxious about their souls and gave them to God. The camp was in Wise county, Va., among some primitive, but earnest Methodist Christians. To be sure of a seat at the Sunday-school two rocks and a rail had to be carried in.

While teaching at Centerville, W. Va., and boarding in the family of Rev. J. M. Bittinger, Rev. C. M. Howard, evangelist, held a revival service, and while working in his meetings the longing to preach the Gospel came. The school children under Mr. Junkin's care all came into the church at this time, and the being used at once increased the longing to be used, always for God in saving souls.

Returning to Washington and Lee to complete his education, two providential "accidents" happened to the young student for the ministry. Two young men, Forman and Wilder, came to talk missions. Blain and White (of China), Thompson (of Brazil), and Junkin of Korea, went into hear what they had to say—and none of them were ever able to answer the question, "What reason can you give to God, why you should not 'go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature?'"

The other event was the renewal of the acquaintance of a young lady whose father and mother were staunch Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, and whom he had seen frequently during his first College days. Miss Mary Leyburn's father had th reputation of being an honest railroad and building contractor, and was a deacon in the Lexington church. His father was Dr. Alfred Leyburn. His wife, Miss Margaret Kerr, of North Carolina. This too, is a family of preachers by alliance and practice. Dr. Jno. Leyburn, of Baltimore, and Dr. George Leyburn once missionary to Greece are her great uncles. Of the living children of Edward and Margaret Leyburn, the one son is preaching at Falling Waters church, W. Va., one daughter is the wife of Rev. C. D. Gilkerson, of Beverly, W. Va., and Mrs. Mary Leyburn Junkin is the one with whom this sketch is designed to acquaint our readers. Her preparation for mission work was student life at Ann Smith Academy, Lexington; and teaching in private and public schools at Lexington, Buena Vista and in Cumberland county, Va. She also took an art course at Miss Baldwin's.

Sailing for Korea in '92 they made their home in various quarters in an out of Seoul, where two years and over were spent on the language. In '94 in company with Dr. Drew, Mr. Junkin began work at Kun San, Chella Province, moving his family down in the spring of '96. In this two years of work in and around Kun San, the visible results are a small congregation ranging from twenty-five to forty, with two baptized Christians, a Sunday-school superintended by one of them, with average attendance of twenty. They contribute from ninety cents to a dollar every Sabbath to be used in the work of the church.

These two missionaries are supported, one by the First church of Norfolk, Va., and the other by the Lexington church.

In giving these sketches from time to time of our representatives on the mission field, we trust that our readers will be put in a more personal, praying touch with them, and thus take part in assuring the success of their work.

Prayer is not overcoming God's reluctance, it is laying hold of His highest willingness. — Archbishop French.

OVERULINRG.

In the Sunday School Times for July 17th, and the notes for the lesson of August 8th, Dr. Wayland gives the following comment on Acts xviii. 2, about Paul finding in Corinth Aquila and Priscilla who had been banished from Rome. They were tentmakers and worked together. "There is, I think, beautiful illustration of an overruling Divine Providence. I am sure we may consider such instances specimens of God's way of working now for those set on His service. Coming, a stranger to this Corinth, and on such a mission, Paul would, first of all, need congenial lodging place. Much dependent on such things was the sensitive Apostle. Well, even the Emperor Claudius is concerned in opening such a place for Paul. He does not know he is thus concerned; he does not mean to be, but still he is. God overrules his decrees about the Jews in Rome, and those who become among the Apostle's best and most helpful friends have a door ajar for him at Corinth. I think this very beautiful. To me it seems a kind of lens through which can be descried God's ways. We are of more value than the lilies. God will take care of us. He holds even Emperors in His grasp. Let us trust in His providence."

Thus God brought together those who were born far apart, and made them fellow helpers to the truth. Asia and Europe, Jew and Gentile, land and sea are made tributary to the great purpose of God to give His gospel to a lost and ruined world. So God is continually working. Every one of us has experience of God's overrulings in our personal training and the supply of our wants and in giving us opportunity to serve Him. It is all very precious and we should take Him to mark such experiences with thought and trust, with devotion and gratitude.

The July number of The Missionary, which all of our people should take, has several paragraphs, giving references to such overrulings in the life of one of His servants in whom all North Carolina Presbyterians should be especially interested. Rev. Daniel Lindley, a native of Pennsylvania was prepared for the ministry at Hampden-Sidney, married in Richmond, Va., and was pastor in the First Presbyterian chuch, Charlotte, N. C., where his ministry was greatly blessed. In 1834, the same year in which Dr. J. Leighton Wilson sailed for West Africa, Mr. Lindley left his prosperous pastorate in Charlotte and travelled to South Africa. He and his young wife travelled a thousand miles by ox-wagons towards what is now the Transvaal Republic. By distinct overrulings Mr. Lindley became God's instrument in leading to Christ the now famous Paul Kruger, president of the Transvaal Republic. God sent Mr. Lindley from this country to that to train as a Christian "one of the strong rulers of the earth, the Cromwell of South Africa." Thus America and Africa were brought together in God's Providence. For further particulars that are very interesting read the Missionary for July.

This reminds us of the work in South Africa, under the dear servant of God, Rev. Andrew Murray at Wellington Cape Colony, whose one school the Huguenot Seminary has sent missionaries by the hundreds far northward into Africa. The grandfather of Andrew Murray was not willing for his son to be a missionary among the heathen, but gave permission for him to go to the settlement of Hollanders in South Africa, one of whose daughters he married. They were Dutch in language and in religious connection with the Dutch Reformed Dutch, and Rev. Andrew Murray was educated and writes in the Dutch language. Still this colony was not Dutch in blood and lineage. They were descendants of Huguenots, French Protestants, the very people of France who fled from the country and took refuge in Holland after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. They adopted the Dutch language and Church and sent colonies to South Africa that in this generation are doing the grandest work of missions in the world. This is greatly furthered by overrulings which sent teachers from America to aid them. This story is stronger than fiction. In the family of Andrew Murray the persecuted Scotch became allied to the persecuted Huguenots by overrulings little short of miracles. The seminary at Wellington has brought together to these two named divisions, trained daughters from the home of the Puritans in New England and the famous school of Mary Lyons at Mt. Holyoke. Thus God brought to fruition His purpose for South Africa, by overrulings that span centuries, control colonies and commerce and combine countries of Europe, America and Africa.

IT IS A THING not as uncommon as it ought to be for Presbyterians to deplore the simplicity of Presbyterian forms, and to express themselves as thinking that not only is there no harm in ritualistic forms and practices, but that they certainly have great drawing power and, thus placing more persons under the hearing of the Gospel message may do incalculable good. Among those who think thus, the idea prevails too, that those accustomed to service of a more elaborate kind so rejoice in it that they can hardly have too much of it. The following extract from correspondence of the Southern Churchman may serve to correct some erroneous views on the subject and to show the objectionable tendency of worship where other than necessary forms are used:

"It is not that I esteem a few candles and crosses and colored cloths in themselves of such fatal consequence, but I object to them and to kindred innovations because, as far as my experience goes, their tendency is to monopolize the thought and care of those who affect them so as to stunt if not destroy "the peaceable fruits of righteousness." This may not be so everywhere, but that it is so in some places the testimony of my own senses will not permit me to doubt, I have seen this thing grow until it becomes a mountain of deceivableness, casting into the insidious shade the vineyard which should bring forth fruit an hundred fold. How are we profited if we become so absorbed in the manner of the hearing of the word that we forget to be doers of it? Had my experience been different, had the new functions and forms to which I have referred been followed by a warmer spirituality, a greater zeal and a steady growth in the Church, my conclusions as to their expediency might be very different; but it is heart-breaking to see the temple of the Lord shunned by those who ought to fill it and the dwindling congregation transformed, as it were, into an assembly of human icicles.

THE FOLLOWING from the Baltimore Sun, on the responsibility of innkeepers for bicycles, will interest many of our readers:

A new point in bicycle law, according to the Hotel Register, has recently been decided in England, to the effect that innkeepers are responsible for the loss of wheels stolen from their premises. It was urged during the trial that as a bicycle did not, like a horse, consume provender, and so bring profit to the landlord, it did not come within the law making innkeepers liable in such cases. In reply it was pointed out that when a similar question was once raised regarding carriages, Lord Coleridge had said it was absurd to say that an inn-keeper might receive a guest, but refuse to receive his carriage. It had, moreover, been held that a bicycle was a carriage within the meaning of the local government act of 1888. The plaintiff was accordingly awarded £21 compensation. The case involves a point that is interesting both to hotelkeepers and cyclists, and that will, doubtless, be raised sooner or later in this country as well as elsewhere.

THINGS ARE taking on a more hopeful hue. Times are certainly improving in regard to business matters. At least this is the feeling that is beginning to possess the people, and when we can bring ourselves to believe that times are better, the hope will soon be realized. Nothing so much tends to financial dullness as despondency. Let us brace up and go heartily to work, putting out our full strength and trusting in God for an outcome of prosperity.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

TO THE PRESBYTERIES CONTROLLING DAVIDSON COLLEGE.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The Board of Trustees of Davidson College, at the close of another scholastic year, with deep gratitude, acknowledge God's goodness in preserving the life and health of the faculty and students, and for His other many and rich blessings bestowed upon us and the college over which we have the oversight.

In presenting this, our annual greeting, to the controlling Presbyteries, it is well to give a brief statement of the work done by us, and the results accomplished during the session just closed:

1. One hundred and fifty-four students have been enrolled during the year, and it is a great pleasure to report to you that a more exemplary, orderly, and studious body of young men are seldom gathered on a college campus. Application to their studies, and to the conscientious discharge of all college duties, has been a marked feature in the work of the year; hence the college year has closed under peculiarly pleasant circumstances and relations between faculty and students.

2. The health of the community has been unusually good; in fact, there has been no epidemic or prevailing sickness among the students, for which we feel profoundly grateful to Almighty God.

3. It is a fact especially worthy of note, that the intercourse between the faculty and the student body has been unusually pleasant and mutually profitable, even to an extent never before observed at the college. This should give us much encouragement for the future.

4. In the representation of the college we find that there are enrolled students from seven different States and from two foreign lands—Brazil and Persia—showing that the name and influence of the college are slowly, but surely, extending and widening.

5. Among the students we rejoice to report that a large majority—all but sixteen out of one hundred and fifty-four—are church members; and there are thirty-two candidates for the ministry. These facts, in part, account for the excellent moral tone which pervades the college atmosphere.

6. The college is gradually extending her influence, and becoming better known to the general public, but more especially to the people of our own faith. This is largely due to the efforts of our honored President, Dr. J. B. Shearer, and Professor Henry Louis Smith in visiting our churches, towns and cities, and lecturing and working for the college.

7. The Board of Trustees of the college recognize that the college needs more money and a larger patronage—money to better equip the institution and to strengthen and broaden the course of study—students that the good results of sound Christian education may extend to the furthest borders of our Southern Christian Church. In view of these things the Board has seriously and carefully considered the advisability of placing a financial agent in the field to increase our endowment fund, and to present the advantages of the college before our whole people, and the Executive Committee has been authorized to carry this into effect as soon as the way be clear.

8. The year 1897 has been one of great privilege and blessing to Davidson College, in that she has enjoyed the good fortune of having as her guest for a day that distinguished body of men, the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church. This idea, conceived by one of our oldest and most honored trustees, and seconded so completely by President Shearer and the members of the faculty, has resulted in great good to our beloved college, and has advertised our work from Washington to Mexico.

9. Finally, brethren, we commend the college and all its interests to your cordial sympathy, and the prayers of our churches and Presbyteries, earnestly asking for your patronage and support, feeling confident that Davidson College offers the services of a faculty who are as able and as skillful educators as can be found in any college in the land, and that the moral, social and religious advantages of the college are equal to those of any other. We ask for your help and for your prayers.

By order of the Board of Trustees.

At the present time we are offering a copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the following terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

"Our Premium Bible" contains absolutely nothing that tends to discredit the plain Scripture narrative of "Jonah and the whale."

The more a man knows of God the deeper will be the sense of his own littleness, and of his entire dependence on the Almighty.

There is something lacking in the religion of the young person who shines in society, and is a success in business, but who is not felt in the life of the Church.—Golden Rule.

NOTES FROM RED SPRINGS.

Red Springs, N. C.,
July 22d, 8.30 p. m.

The sixth annual Elders' and Deacons' Institute of Fayetteville Presbytery was opened promptly according to the program. Rev. Arthur J. Smith, now of Savannah, Ga., who helped to make the first Institute held here so interesting and attractive by his words, songs and preaching, was on hand to do the same for this meeting. He has with him a full supply of music books which are loaned by the publishers, through Mr. Smith, to be used in meetings conducted by him. The book (sacred songs No. 1) has a selection from Gospel Hymns of some of the best pieces, and from other books with many new selections of tunes and words. An excellent piano from the seminary is being used, with Mrs. Willerbe Hall of Fayetteville as performer, while Mrs. J. M. Clark, of Texas, uses skillfully the organ. At the proper time Dr. Daniel, of Raleigh, was introduced as the first speaker. He had chosen for his subject God's Covenant with the Believer. The conditions of the Christian covenant made with Abraham has never been changed. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is the one condition of Christianity. The services closed with the doxology and benediction.

Friday Morning.

At 11 o'clock Dr. Daniel discussed the Immortality of the Soul from John 14 : 14, "If a man die shall he live again." In the afternoon Rev. A. J. McKelway spoke on the World's Preparation for the Coming of Christ, showing that the way was prepared and when prepared then He came, and just so will His second coming be. Much sweet music was dispersed before and after this address.

At night Dr. Daniel after expressing the great pleasure he had had in attending the Institute, and regretting that he could not stay longer from his people, preached a forceful sermon from the book of Esther. 6 ; 1.

Saturday Morning.

Dr. Hill gave a practical address on the Form of Church Government. It was timely and well taken in by the people.

Rev. P. H. Hoge, D. D., followed in an elaborate discussion on The Reformation. The causes and fortunes of the Reformation were well set forth. In the afternoon Rev. J. M. Wicker, of the Presbytery of Philadelphia, preached an able sermon from Acts 2 : 4, on The Power of the Holy Spirit, showing how much this power is needed in the pulpit, in church members and in the world to-day.

At night President E. A. Alderman, of Chapel Hill, delivered an interesting address on Our Colleges and Seminaries. Many false impressions concerning the University and its work as an educator were cleared up, and the many hearers fell in love with President Alderman and the system of education which he so freely and fearlessly advocates. He is a grand man in a grand work. The State does not or can not force the study of the Bible at the University but offers it. President Alderman said truly when he remarked that it was better to sacrifice money to make men than to sacrifice boys to make money.

Sunday Morning, 25th.

The weather is now warm, the heat oppressive, but the crowd double and triple that of the previous days. The song services were heartily entered into by an increased number of voices. Rev. J. M. Clark conducted a short service, making a pointed talk from a selected portion of Scripture.

After other songs and prayer a recess of five minutes was taken. Dr. Hoge then commenced service by the use of the doxology, and requested as many as would, young and old, to follow him in repeating the Lord's Prayer. By this time the Tabernacle was crowded to its utmost capacity. Dr. Hoge read the 19th Psalm. Rev. D. W. Fox led in prayer. The chairman then reminded the people that there was some expense connected with the Institute, and that it was more blessed to give than to receive. A good collection was taken. Dr. Hoge then gave an excellent sermon from Jeremiah 16 : 16.

The afternoon was spent in many beautiful songs and solos and in prayers, preparatory to the exhortation or sermon to the young by Rev. A. J. Smith. The 19th chapter of Judges, latter clause of the 17th verse was his text: "Whither goest thou." Mr. Smith is a very impressive and effective speaker and many eyes were bedimmed with tears as he pointed out the awfulness of going the wrong way. He urged a right about face, and a move onward and upward. It is only the dead fish said he that go down the stream. The live fish go up and over the falls, with energy and vim.

At night, after the usual song service, Dr. Hoge preached from John 3 : 1, 2. Dr. Hoge like Dr. Daniel, has been much in service since his arrival, but does not lose his attractiveness as a speaker and preacher. To-day the largest crowd that ever assembled in and around the Tabernacle was present. It was almost filled with ladies. Many men stood around to hear and learn.

The coming of Dr. Moore is looked forward to with high expectations. The program has somewhat been laid aside, and the speakers taken as they come, and they come as they can. So far all has worked well, and the exercise has been of a high order.

WHAT THE "MAINE LAW" HAS DONE FOR MAINE.

Hon. Neal Dow, originator of the "Maine Liquor Law"—now 94 years old—writes to the Golden Rule :

"When I was young, and, indeed, when I was still in early manhood, the condition of things in Maine was very bad. This bad condition was all resulting from the free and general use of rum amongst almost all our people; it was taken systematically, like their breakfast, dinner, and supper.

There were thirty-five distilleries in the State, ten of which and two breweries were in Portland. At the same time great quantities of rum were imported from the West Indies, which came to us by ship-loads—great cargoes every year. All this liquor was for home use.

Consequently, Maine was by far the poorest State in the Union. Evidence of poverty was plainly seen all over the State. Our people were industrious, but the results of industry were spent in drink, while their houses were poorly supplied with the comforts of life. The use of liquor was almost universal in all classes of society, especially among the working people. The need of strong drink was considered so proper and necessary for them that the public bells were rung at eleven o'clock and four o'clock of every day to call the people to the pail of rum

Now there is nothing of all that in the State; liquors are no longer used by our people where gangs of men are at work; there is nothing seen among them which indicates the use of alcoholic drinks.

There were no railroads in those days in Maine, all transportation on the land was by horses and oxen; all goods of whatever kind taken to country traders and others, were carried inland in that way. The big cart-load of goods of whatever kind was sure to be adorned by hogsheads and barrels of West India rum, or of the products of our own distilleries. Now our distilleries and breweries are gone—not one of them remaining in the State; and the West India rum found here is in small quantities—smuggled into the State, and, if not seized and confiscated according to law, it is sold on the sly in violation of law.

In the old rum time, plain indications were seen everywhere of poverty and decay—dilapidated houses, barns, and fences; old hats and rags in the windows; clapboards and shingles off the houses; fences down on the farms; the cattle in the fields and the hogs in the gardens. Such was a fair picture of Maine in the old rum time. In those days the State was poor and miserable beyond the power of accurate description of it; rum made it so.

Now the grog-shop is prohibited, the liquor trade is almost entirely driven out, and Maine is one of the most prosperous States in the Union.

CHRISTIANITY'S PROGRESS IN JAPAN.

The tendency of some admiring but uncritical writers on Japan has been to glorify Buddhism, with its negations and dogma of impersonality. In contrast, the best native thinkers are steadily taking the opposite view. In the International Journal of Ethics for January, Tokiwo Yokoi, in a strong and spirited article on "The Ethical and Political Problems of New Japan," shows the failure of modern Buddhism to hold the heart or lead the intellect of the nation. He demonstrates also the utter collapse of Confucianism as a system of ethics. He lays special stress on that root idea of the Gospel of Jesus, personality, which Buddhism ignores, as vital to the development of New Japan. He pictures vividly the present battle-ground in Japan: "The conflict is not between one native system and another foreign system, but between two distinct world-views, which are fighting for mastery, so to speak, within the mind of the nation. For the Christian churches of Japan are now no longer a sort of foreign settlement in the midst of an unsympathetic community. They have become naturalized, and the ideas they represent have powerful supporters in the new literature of the country. Thus the conflict rages between Buddhistic pantheism on the one hand and Christian theism on the other." Mr. Yokoi is the son of that pre-church Christian in Japan who was assassinated in 1869 for proposing the toleration of the religion of Europe, and this article in the Journal of Ethics is, like that in The Far East of October 20th, a powerful plea for the victory in Japan of the distinctively Christian principle of culture and life.—Sunday School Times.

HATE EVIL.

Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, that great and good lover of boys, used to say, "Commend me to boys who love God and hate the devil."

The devil is the boy's worst enemy. He keeps a sharp look-out for the boys. There is nothing too mean for him to do to win them, and then, when he gets them into trouble he always sneaks away and leaves them. Not a bit of help or comfort does he them.

'What did you do it for ?" he whispers. "You might have known better !"

Now the boy who has found out who and what the devil is, ought to hate him—it's his duty. He can afford to hate this enemy of all that is good and true with his whole heart. Hate the devil and fight him boys; but be sure and use the Lord's weapons!—John Ruskin.

THE PEACE OF GOD.

His peace "passeth all understanding," Phil. iv. 7. It cannot be put into words. It must be felt to be understood. The thing most like it is the gladsomeness of a child in its father's home, where wealth and love and wise nurture combine to supply all its needs; but even that falls short of the glorious reality. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him but God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit." "We have the mind of Christ." And (bringing out the deep meaning of the Greek) we may say this peace will sentinel our hearts and minds, going to and fro like a sentry before a palace, to keep off the intruders that would break in upon the sacred inclosure. Oh that we might be ever protected by a guardianship so benign and watchful and invulnerable to attack !—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

THE LOFTIER SPIRIT.

A young woman, whose life was full of lofty ambitions, found herself occupied day after day with disagreeable household tasks. As the future seemed to shut down hopelessly around these homely duties, the girl grew complaining and bitter. One day her father, who was the village doctor, said to her, "Do you see those vials ? They are cheap, worthless things in themselves, but in one I put a deadly poison, in another a sweet perfume, in another a healing medicine. Nobody cares for the vials themselves, but for what they carry. So with our duties, insignificant and worthless in themselves; but the patience or anger or high thinking or bitterness which we put in them, that is the important thing, the immortal thing." A celebrated Frenchman said, "Perfection consists not in doing extraordinary things, but in doing ordinary things with an extraordinary spirit."—Silver Cross.

Faith is the means of entering into the rest of God. Rest—not fretfulness from want of success, no fearfulness concerning the opinion of men or the contingencies of the future, no uneasiness as to outward circumstances, no distress whether health be present or absent, whether temporal resources are scanty or abundant! Such rest as this, true heart rest, comes from conformity to the character of Christ, and from this alone. The spirit of Jesus includes it. It has no affinity with idleness.—Exchange.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The popular writer Dr. Smiles has recovered so completely from the serious accident with which he met a year ago, as to have been able to prepare another work for publication, which will be similar in character to the "Self-help" series that has made him famous.

The bronze statue of Harriet Beecher Stowe, which will soon be erected in Hartford, Connecticut, will be twelve feet high, and will represent Mrs. Stowe seated with a suppliant figure of Uncle Tom stretching forth a pair of brawny arms, from which hang broken shackles. The statue is the work of W. Clark Noble.

A second paper by Elizabeth Robins Pennell, in the series on "London at Play," will appear in the August number of The Century. It is entitled "On Margate's Sands," and is a description of life at the popular English watering-place. Joseph Pennell has furnished a number of characteristic illustrations.

The origin of the familiar phrases "straw bail" and "a man of straw" is a most curious one. It dates back two hundred years, when the practice of entering worthless bail, was common. The exact methods have not been transmitted to posterity, but in several old English works is to be found reference to them. In one of these—Fielding's "Life of Jonathan Wild," the thief-catcher—we read that Jonathan's aunt married a man "who was famous for so friendly a disposition that be was bail for above a hundred persons in one year. He had also the remarkable honor of walking in Westminster Hall with a straw in his shoe." It seems that at one time when English lawyers wished to procure witnesses with elastic consciences or men who would go bail for their clients, they went into Westminster Hall into which the principal courts of law opened, and there would quickly recognize the men they wanted by glancing at their shoes, from which protruded a straw or two, thus indicating their calling. Becaus of this trade-mark, so to speak, these professional witnesses or bail-goers became known as "men of straw" or ones who were willing, for a consideration, to enter "straw bail. — Philadelphia Ledger.

BOOKS.

C. M. R. C. These letters mean. Cross Bearers Missionary Reading Circle, a plan to become better informed in the persons, principles and progress involved in the effort of all churches to carry the Gospel to all the world. The annual report of the Missouri Missionary Association as Auxiliary to the C. M. R. C. presents the plan of a three years course of systematic reading and study on Missions in All Lands. The C. M. R. C. was established in 1890, and is incorporated according to the laws of Missouri. Rev. Z. M. Williams, Secretary, Gallatin, Mo., will give any desired information.

Many admirers of the late lamented and greatly beloved Professor Henry Drummond and others who are interested in him will be glad to learn that Fleming H. Revell Co., of New York have issued in a volume edition at 25 cents a collection of three addresses, delivered by Professor Drummond at the Students' Conference, Northfield, 1893, with a tender tribute of personal affection by Mr. Moody as introduction. The title is, "A Life for A Life," and covers several other addresses in the best style and spirit of this gifted teacher and earnest Christian.

We had greatly enjoyed the discriminating article of Mr. Moody in a recent number of The Reecrd of Christian Work and were impressed with the wise caution and care of the writer. The introduction here is that article brought into a proper place that will enable all to appreciate the Christian character of Professor Drummond and to take account of and avoid the wrong views held by him, and to condemn as the wise must his errors which have so marred his writings.

Lectures on Prophecy. This goodly volume of 320 pages, cloth bound, is published by Fleming H. Revell Co., New York, at the low price of one dollar and twenty five cents. The author is Rev. B. H. Charles, D. D., of our Church in Clayton, Mo. The work is composed of sixteen chapters called lectures, concerning the Prophecy, the Jews and the Pre-millenial Coming of Christ. These are subjects of vast importance and Dr. Charles treats them carefully and Scriptually. He believes that the Scriptures are the only infallible rule of faith and practice to be studied, not only for the knowledge of our duty, but for the formation and foundation of what we should believe as to the future as well as of the past. He believes as we all should, that it is our duty to study prophecy in its proportion of truth. In this work he gives a valuable aid and contribution to this study.

M. D. McNEILL.

Godwin Sabbath-School:—The Sabbath-school at Godwin (branch of Bluff Sabbath-school) receded from the regular order of exercises July the 25th, to celebrate Children's Day. Quite a number of sacred poems, interspersed with songs were recited by the scholars to the pleasure of their friends and neighbors who composed the large audience assembled in their hall. Rev. J. S. Black, of Red Springs was present and added greatly to the success of the exercises, in a well considered address, delivered in his vigorous style. Subject: "Ditching." A collection was taken for Foreign Missions. After recess the class gave us a song service which was well executed. This was followed by a poem, "The Unseen Battlefield," next came "A Call for Volunteers," poem. The class then sang that grand rallying song, "Lo! The Banner of the King."

Notwithstanding, the speaker kept us cutting ditches nearly a half hour, with the temperature above 90 degrees, this was the most pleasant occasion in the history of this Sabbath-school.

"PARTICEPS."

Godwin, July 27th.

Durham Church:—The Durham church received six members at the Pearl chapel last week and also raised the money to build a chapel at Erwin Mill. Mr. Geo. W. Watts, Superintendent of the Sabbath has returned with his family in safety from his trip to the Orient. The congregation celebrated the return by a delightful social reception in the Sabbath-school room.

Eno:—Eno church is one of the oldest in the State. It was organized in 1755. Some years ago the sanctuary was destroyed by fire. The death of the pastor (Rev. W. F. Wilhelm) in 1893, left the little flock without fold or shepherd. During these four years they have held together in spirit, refusing to be disbanded and still hoping to be able to build and renew their youth. By appointment of Presbytery, Rev. W. F. McCorkle and Rev. C. W. Maxwell will hold a meeting with this congregation the first ten days in August. The prayers of God's people are asked in behalf of this church, that the Holy Spirit may guide the people, opening the lips of His servants and inspiring the people with holy zeal to arise as one man to build again this wasted place in Zion.

Westminster Sunday School, Charlotte:—The attendance at the Sunday-school at Westminster church, Dilworth, increases steadily. Last Sunday there were seventy-seven scholars present, a gain over the Sunday previous of ten. Mr. Dorritee is so much encouraged that he is going to work at once and petition Presbytery for an organization. —Charlotte Observer.

VIRGINIA.

Piedmont:—Messrs. C. T. McGuffin and C. B. Jamison have recently been installed elders and Messrs. W. E. Price, R. A. Barnhart, C. J. Renick and J. M. Wilson, deacons.

Waynesboro, Tombeckbee Presbytery:—Rev. Dr. W. D. Morton recently organized a church here with thirty-five members.

Scranton:—The Presbyterian church here was struck by lightning in a recent storm and considerably damaged.

LOUISIANA.

First Italian Church New Orleans:—We are pleased to learn, and to inform our readers, that the new building for this church is well on the way toward completion, and that it is expected to be ready for use by the time Dr. Palmer returns home. As the "Brotherhood" of the First church has had so much to do with the life of this mission among the Italians of this city, it is desired that Dr. Palmer shall be present when the new house is opened for worship, and perform that service which no one else can so well and so appropriately render. The church is located at the corner of Howard and Clio Streets.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

TEXAS.

First Church, Fort Worth:—The following officers were recently elected, ordained and installed: Elders, R. R. Keith, J. C. Scott, H. P. Eakle, James Montgomery, J. B. Davis and W. L. Logan; Deacons, J. F. Prosser, W. F. Simmons, C. H. Platter and S. J. Law rence.

The session has forbidden the use of the name of the church, by its various societies, for the purpose of raising funds for the support of the church or the payment of its debts. No money is now raised for the use of the church, except by the voluntary contributions of the members of the congregation. A floating debt of $800 that has remained unpaid for several years was liquidated last week, and the usual collections are about twice what they have been. On July the 18th, seven persons were added to the roll of communicants.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

TENNESSEE.

Bethesda:—At a recent meeting conducted by Rev. J. D. Hill, of Trenton, eight were received into the Presbyterian church. This church is being served by Mr. J. D. Wilson during his vacation.

Rev. Henry Alexander White, D. D., and wife are spending a month at Warm Springs, Va. He preached at that place July 25th and at the Hot Springs August 1st, for the pastor, Rev. Wm. C. White.

Rev. A. D. McClure will not be able to attend the Conference at Taccoa, Ga. He has, however, sent on to Rev. Dr. Walden, Chairman of the Committe, his paper upon the subject assigned him.

Rev. R. W. Wilson, of Mount Pleasant, Tenn., is shortly to take charge of the "Harding Memorial Orphanage," at Nashville.

Rev. E. L. Siler, of Durant and Lexington churches, Mississippi, has a vacation of six weeks, and has gone with his family to Monteagle, Tenn.

Rev. M. C. Hutton, of Georgetown, Texas, has leave of absence for two months, and is at Dallas, under treatment for his throat.

Rev. Dr. James Woodrow has gone to St. Petersbug upon invitation of the Czar of Russia to attend the Congress of noted geologists to be held on the 28th inst. The Columbia State says:

After the congress is over the geologists will go in a body to the Volga. They will divide into three parties, one going west into Asia, another south and the third, of which Dr. Woodrow will be a member, will sail down the Volga to the Caspian sea. Thence they will go across the Caucasian mountains into Asia. The party expect to reach Mt. Ararat at its most eastern point. Coming back they will go into the Crimea and thence to Constantinople by steamer across the Black Sea. From Constantinople they will proceed to Athens and spend a short time at the Grecian capital. From Athens they will proceed by steamer across the Mediterranean sea to Sicily. Here they will have the opportunity to visit and make geological investigations at the famous volcano, Mt. Aetna. Leaving the Mediterranean they will very likely sail for Scotland, in which country they will remain a while before disbanding and starting for their several homes. The trip will cover thousands and thousands of miles of travelling and is a grand one. There is no one to whom it would prove more enjoyable than Dr. Woodrow. It will afford him opportunities for scientific research, which possibly the world may have in permanent form before many more years roll by.

NOTES FROM JAPAN.

EDITOR N. C. PRESBYTERIAN:—From the note in your personal column some time ago, I think my friends may get the idea that I am teaching English extensively, but such is not the case. I teach my Japanese teacher and Mr. Hope's teacher, once a week, a reading and spelling lesson in English, in order to hold my passport in the interior. It is in this that we use the Webster's spelling-book, which they have had before.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Rev. Walter S. Buchanan of our mission and Miss Mary Wilson of the Northern Methodist mission, in Tokyo, on June 23d.

This is the fourth addition our Southern Presbyterian mission has received within a year by marriage. Mrs. Bear and Mrs. Haden in China, and Mrs. Grinnan and the above in Japan. Mission meeting in Kobe July 7th, takes us all away from our loved work and study, to which we will not return until after the summer vacation.

A nnmber of us anticipate much pleasure in spending part of the summer at Karnezana a place in the mountains north of Yokohama. The council of missions is to meet there and Mr. Robt. E. Speer is expected to be present. Those of your readers who have followed him in his trip around the world, or who have ever heard him speak, know what a privilege this will be. To many student volunteers who have reached the field, a sight of his strong, fine face, will bring back the glorious days of the Detroit Volunteer Convention. I thought him then, and I still think him, the most gifted young man I have ever known. His spiritual power is wonderful. Mr. Hope is secretary of the Council and is hard at work on his report of the year's work of the Presbyterian and Reformed missions in Japan. I think there are six different bodies united in the Council. I close with a question which I want my friends to think about until they hear from me again on the subject:

How many young people in North Carolina observe the "morning watch" of prayer for missions?

With best wishes,

Yours in the work,

CLAUDE LACY GRIER.

THE LORD'S SHUT-INS.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

Just why the loving Master confines some of His choicest and best in rooms of suffering, and cripples others of them in body or in purse, we cannot always tell. One thing is very clear, and that is, that He does not mean to cripple their usefulness. To speak for Christ or to work for Christ is often easy and pleasant; but to bear for Christ either pain, or poverty, or confinement with courageous patience is more eloquent than many a pulpit discourse. No portion of Paul's wonderful career was productive of more solid results than the years of his imprisonment at Rome. He styled himself an "ambassador in chains," and he preached the kingdom of God to those about him until there were many converts in "Cæsar's household." He wrote seventeen out of his undisputed epistles while he was the prison chaplain under the eye of Nero's jailers—one of these was the letter to Philip, which is the epistle of gratitude for divine mercies and of exultant joy under sharp afflictions.

If the cages of birds are sometimes covered up in order to make them sing, the old hero was caged to furnish to the world one of its most melodious epics of sublime faith in Jesus. Satan afterwards clapped John Bunyan into prison, and lo, out of the windows of the Bedford jail floated the transcendent allegory of the Pilgrim's Progress.

The service of Jesus Christ is not limited by any stress of circumstances. A sick chamber has often been made a chosen spot for glorifying God. The celebrated Halyburton of Scotland welcomed scores of visitors to that room in St. Andrew's, where they stood around his bedside and listened to words that seemed to be inspired by a glimpse of heaven from the land of Beulah. None of his previous sermons equalled his discoursings from that bed of suffering. "This is the best pulpit," said he, "that I was ever in. I am laid on this bed for this very end, that I may commend my Lord." He called it a shaking hands with the King of Terrors. After a night of agonizing pain, he said to his wife, "Jesus came to me in the third watch of the night, walking upon the waters: and He said to me, I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, and I have the keys of death. He stilled the tempest in my soul, and there is a sweet calm. I have ripened fast under the bright sun of righteousness, and have had brave showers. Now I am thinking of the pleasant spot of earth that I will soon get to lie on; I will get my little Georgie in my hand, and we will be a group of bonnie dust." After his voice had failed him in the last moments, he continued to clap his hands in triumph.

It is not only by such joyful testimonies to the sustaining power of divine grace, or by cheerful patience, that the prisoners of Jesus Christ have reached and are reaching His precious Gospel. There are many ways of doing good open to invalids. During the years that the wife of Charles H. Spurgeon was confined to her room, she conceived the plan of providing commentaries and useful books for poor ministers, and village preachers. She told me that over one hundred thousand such volumes had been secured in response to her appeals. When I visited her last summer in the beautiful old home at "Westwood," I found that she was cheering the lonely hours of her widowhood by continuing this labor of love. Some of Charlotte Elliot's sweetest hymns, in England, and some of the best productions of Mrs. Paull in our land, have been written during periods of confinement in the chamber of an invalid. A large-hearted lady, shut in from her former activities out-of-doors, spends much of her time in folding and addressing little leaflets of awakening or of consoling truth to those who may be profited by them. In many a house there is a room whose silent influence is felt all over the dwelling.

The other members of the family come in there to enquire after the sick sufferer, to bring some choice fruit or pleasant gift, to read aloud, or watch with her through the lonesome night. From that room steals forth an influence that makes every one gentler and tenderer and more unselfish. Perhaps this may be one of the reasons why God permits some of his children to suffer; they not only grow purer by the chastening, but become evangelists of blessing, to others. Paul in his prison prompted many besides Onesiphorus to deeds of sympathy for him, and he evoked such gifts of kindness from his spiritual children at Philippi that he writes to them that their love "hath blossomed out afresh." That is the literal rendering of the message sent by the old, sunny-souled prisoner of Jesus Christ. The Master takes great delight in many of His shut-ins. They are weaving bright coronals for themselves to be worn in that land in which none shall say, "I am sick," and neither shall there be any more pain. Good friends, it matters little where we are so long as our inner life is hid with Christ, and we keep luminous with the joy of His presence.—Canada Presbyterian.

WHITE LEAD is like a great many other articles offered for sale; some good, some bad. (See list of the brands which are genuine, or good.) They are made by the "old Dutch" process of slow corrosion. Avoid getting the other sort by making sure of the brand.

FREE By using National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, any desired shade is readily obtained. Pamphlet giving valuable information and card showing samples of colors free; also cards showing pictures of twelve houses of different designs painted in various styles or combinations of shades forwarded upon application to those intending to paint.

National Lead Co., 1 Broadway, New York.

What is the Best Paint? This is the question the thrifty house owner is constantly asking. Paint is used to protect from decay incident to exposure to the elements, as well as to beautify and renew. The old dingy house so uninviting, almost repulsive, can, by the application of a new surface of paint, be changed into an attraction and delight. Paint is not very expensive when you get the best, but the labor of applying it is costly. What, then, is the best paint for wear? What will best preserve from decay and remain unaffected by exposure?

Paint is or should be composed of pure linseed oil mixed with certain dry powders or mineral substances called pigments, which experience has shown are best adapted to this purpose. Paint is applied in a liquid state, and after exposure to the air becomes hard, or, in common parlance, is said to dry. If the dry powder or pigment was applied alone it would soon rub off. If it was mixed with water the water would dry out and the powder would come off, to the disgust of every one.

What is wanted is a binder which will not only harden and dry, but which will embrace the powder or pigment so it cannot be removed. This binding material must be insoluble and practically unaffected by water, else the paint would be washed off the building with the first rain. Pure linseed oil is the best material known. It fulfils the requisite conditions of a binder, or vehicle for paint, though poppy seed oil is sometimes used with advantage on inside work. Linseed oil is made by expression from the mature seeds of the flax plant, which also furnishes our finest linens. When it dries it does not dissipate into the air like water, alcohol, or even coal oil. It does not evaporate at all, but absorbs oxygen from the air, thereby forming a tough, leathery substance which envelopes the pigment and holds it to the surface, and if dried under proper conditions it forms an elastic waterproof coating, adapting itself to the changes of temperature.

Pure linseed oil alone should be used; no coal oil should be mixed with it, as is often done to cheapen, for coal oil has no binding properties, and eventually evaporates, leaving the pigment with nothing to hold it to the surface. No animal or other vegetable oils should be used, for they do not dry, and the surface will not become hard and durable. No rosin oil, a frequent adulterant, should be used, for this makes the paint dry and brittle, thus easily chipping or cracking off.

What shall be combined with pure linseed oil to make the Best Paint? The experience of many centuries points to pure white lead. This substance has the faculty of mixing most readily with linseed oil. It assists the oil to dry by combining with it. The oil is rendered waterproof, and the resulting dry film for a long time remains elastic, so that it adapts itself readily to expansion and contraction of the surface, without a tendency to scale off. Unless there is moisture present, either on the surface or absorbed in the wood, when the paint is applied, pure white lead paint well rubbed in will stay where it is put. If the surface is wet the oil is repelled from it, and a good job cannot be expected. If there is water or sap in the lumber the heat of the sun, or of the building, will draw or drive it to the surface, and blistering will follow. When these blisters are pierced the water will often run out. See, then, that the surface is all right before you paint. If very old and dry the oil may be absorbed before it can set or dry, and the pigment left as a dry powder, so that in the first coat plenty of oil should be used, not only to act as a binder, but to allow for possible absorption.

There are additional reasons why pure white lead is the best pigment. Among others, it has greater opacity than any other substance, therefore hiding the surface better; consequently fewer coats are required. We have said that the cost of paint is not very great, but it is the labor of applying that is expensive. Therefore, when you can cover as well with two coats of white lead paint as with three or four coats of other paint, it follows that the lead paint is the cheapest by far. Any substance that is added to white lead, except for the purpose of coloring, diminishes in some way the value of the paint. Zinc is sometimes used. Now zinc is very inferior in covering to white lead, and besides, in drying it forms with the linseed oil a very hard, unelastic surface, which is apt to crack and scale off. When repainting becomes necessary, the surface is such that it will not readily hold the new coat, so that the entire lot of old paint has to be burned off, a very expensive operation, if a first-class job is wanted.

The substance most commouly added to white lead is barytes, and it is added simply because it is cheap, and to make weight. Barytes is a powdered rock, which is found largely in Virginia, Missouri, and other parts of the country. It is not opaque—one of the first requisites in a paint material—and has no action in the oil, and if ground or mixed with oil alone it will neither cover nor hide the under surface, nor form an elastic waterproof binder with the linseed oil, which we have heretofore described. The great attraction barytes has for paint manufacturers is its cheapness, and because it can be and is readily palmed off on the consumer and property-owner as pure white lead.

The only protection the buyer has is to insist on having pure white lead, bearing the guaranty of some reputable maker, whose brand he can rely upon. The adulteration of pure white lead by zinc, barytes, and other substances, is a most common one. If such mixtures were sold under labels honestly stating what they were, and the consumer and property owner bought them as such, no objection could be made: but they are often sold as pure white lead, though chemical analyzes repeatedly made show that they contain none, or, at best, but a small percentage of white lead. If not sold directly as pure, some misleading trade mark is added; such as "Star White Lead, St. Louis," etc., etc., the intention being to deceive and induce the buyer to think he is getting a pure article.

Within the last fifteen or twenty-five years a large demand has been created for what are known as Ready Mixed Paints, or paint prepared with oil and drier ready for use, which appeals to the user as a great convenience. Some makes of these appear to give fair satisfaction, but the very general complaint as to their want of durability has caused the whole class to fall somewhat into disrepute. The cause for this is not hard to find. We have previously shown that the base of the best paint for general use should be pure white lead and pure linseed oil. Now white lead in its nature is so heavy an article, so dense are its particles (it is this that gives it its great value as a covering pigment) that it cannot be held in suspension for any length of time in pure linseed oil. As a matter of fact, most ready mixed paints contain but little white lead, other and cheaper substances, inferior as pigments, being substituted therefor, and in order to enable the paint to dry quickly various driers containing turpentine and benzine are introduced. The effect of these is to thin the oil and render it less capable of holding the various pigments in suspension. To counteract the tendency to settle the oil is treated to make it thicker, alkalies and water which form soap or emulsions with the oil being frequently used. It is not difficult, then, to see why such paints so often prove disappointing to the user; nor does the expense stop here, because if he desires to repaint with a pure article and secure the best results the old coats must first be entirely removed.

The moral of all this is, the best is the cheapest in the long run. Better results are obtained, greater durability and satisfaction, besides at the present time the best is actually the cheapest. Any one desiring to use paint can buy absolutely Pure White Lead, under the guaranty of a responsible manufacturer, Pure Linseed Oil, equally guaranteed, and pure colors, and can mix them himself ready to use at a not greater cost per gallon than inferior articles, which do not cover nearly so much or so well.

Why, then, not always buy the best, the very best?—J. A. S., in Independent.

INTRODUCTORY.

To understand this lesson it will be well to study again the Lesson III, as the story of the founding of the Church in Thessalonica, and then to read the two Epistles written to that Church from Corinth. This Epistle was written not long after Paul's arrival at Corinth, and soon after Silas and Timothy joined him, bringing news from Thessalonica. It is probably the first in chronological order of the writings of Paul that remain to us. Paul had been driven from Thessalonica by persecution before he finished the work he hoped to do there. He desired to return, but was unable to do so and sent Timothy to strengthen them. A few months later he wrote this letter. He gives the Church much praise. He finds in them all the good he can, commends and encourages it.

In the part chosen for the present lesson there is a double theme. One part refers to the way of living the heavenly life on earth. The other, which harmonizes with it is the coming of the Lord. This is especially mentioned and made the motive of Christian life in every one of the chapters of this Epistle. It it here referred to as a motive and an ideal, helping and urging to live the heavenly life here and to be prepared to live it forever with the Lord. The Lord is coming in person.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 9. Brotherly love, love for Christian brethren, in unity of feeling and work, desire and labor for the best, regard for the feelings of others, charitable judgment of faults, and allowance for difference of opinion and views, sympathy for afflicted ones and help for the needy. Love seeks the real welfare of all men, especially of brethren. The new heart given affords this and the Holy Spirit promotes it.

Vs. 10. Ye do it: not only toward your own church, but also toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia. Increase (abound) more and more. "That which does not grow is dead. The more active love is, the more it seeks its task to enlarge; for, inventive, as it is, it is ever discovering new objects for its activity."—Godet.

Vs. 11. Study to be quiet. Literally, "Be ambitious to be quiet," not restless for notoriety, nor desirous of great things, not busybodies or disturbers of the peace. Do your own business. See to it that the duty of each day is well done. "The daily life of toil does not rob us of the Christian life, it really puts it within our reach."

Vs. 12. Honesty: meeting just obligations to fellowmen, paying honest debts, thus honorably to "adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour" in dealing with others, and by industry and honesty may have lack of nothing.

Vs. 13 Them which are asleep, as Christians are "asleep in Jesus." Their bodies are unconscious and decay to dust like to unconscious sleep, to be awakened at Christ's coming. They are united to Christ and the Spirit watches over them. The spirits of believers "being absent from the body are present with the Lord."

Vs. 14. Will God bring with Him : not from the grave for (vs 17,) Christ comes to meet them in the first resurrection. This vs 14 shows the promise that in Christ's second coming as King to sit on the throne of David, God will bring these risen ones with Him. He first comes for them Jno. xiv. 3. Then comes with them Matt. xvi. 27, and v. 17 here.

Vs. 15. By the word of the Lord. By a direct communication as if this were important truth and might not appear probable. We which are alive, shows that Paul thought it possible that he would be alive and certain that some of the Christians then or thereafter of the great body of Christian brethren would certainly be alive at the coming of the Lord. Prevent is old English for precede or come in advance of. Them which are asleep, the dead in Christ as we speak.

Vs. 16. The Lord Himself shall descend. All Christians hold that, but differ as to antecedents, time and conditions of His coming. Shall rise first; before others who are dead out of Christ. This is called in Revelation "the first resurrection."

Vs. 17. Them. Closely after the Christians alive at the time shall be changed, 1 Cor. xv. 51, and caught up with the first resurrection with Christ. The word "caught" in the origin implies a sudden irresistible force like "snatched up." Paul uses the word of his rapture in the third heavens, 2 Cor. xii. 2, 4.

Vs. 18. Comfort one another. In the certainty of the coming of the Lord, of the triumph of His cause, the accomplishment of His purposes, the fulfillment of His promises, the gathering to Christ of the members of His body, the Church which He sent, the Holy Spirit to gather out of all nations. It carries with it the assurance that we lose nothing, but gain all by giving up all for Christ, "that we may know Him and the power of His resurrection."

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The subject suggests the use of the doctrine of the second personal coming of Christ in this Epistle in each chapter as bearing upon working for Christ.

1. The Thessalonians turned from idols to wait for the coming of Christ.

2. They would be the apostle's joy and cause of rejoicing to them.

3. They should abound in love toward one another. N. B. He exhorted: Comfort one another and prayed that they be preserved blameless.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Aug. 15th, 1897.

STUMBLING BLOCKS.

Text for the week:

See that ye walk circumspectly. Eph. 5:15.

Daily Readings:

Monday, An old law, Lev. 19:9-18.
Tuesday, Evil condemned. Isaiah 57:14-21.
Wednesday, A punishment. Jer. 6:16-21.
Thursday, A command. Romans 14:13-23.
Friday, No stumbling. 1 John 2:1-11.
Saturday, Pride. Jer. 50:25-32
Sunday, Topic. Stumbling-blocks. Matt. 18:1-14, (A temperance topic.)

Suggestions:

(1) No one who never drinks at all can become a drunkard.

(2) Every one who drinks even very moderately may become a drunkard.

(3) Even one who drinks persistently, though at first it may be moderately, will become a drunkard. Every jail, every penitentiary, every lunatic asylum, every cemetery, tells eloquently of drunkards who began with moderate drinking.

(4) No one puts a stumbling block in his brother's way by practicing total abstinence.

(5) Every one who contends for moderate drinking may be causing scores to stumble and fall to their eternal ruin.

(6) In the light of above facts, if your boy asks if it is safe to drink moderately, what will you tell him?

Notes:

If never a line had been written or a word had been directly said to impress the duty of avoiding that which might cause others to sin, the very principle of unselfishness even to personal sacrifice which is the very base of Christianity would commend it. But our Lord, and His apostles speaking by the Holy Ghost, do not leave this duty to hang upon any inference however clear and strong. Even in lesser matters we are required to remember that no man liveth to himself or dieth to himself. So fearful is sin that no one can permit his brother to sin, when he can by reaching forward prevent it without imperiling his own soul; how much more should he avoid placing in his way that which would, at least might, cause him to so offend God.

A stumbling block is anything that causes another to fall away from Christian rectitude; anything which leads others into a course that prevents the entering upon or pursuing the Christian walk. On every hand we find these fearful cripplers or deterrents. The parent or the child, the husband or the wife, the influential person in society, or in business or in other relations may be answerable thus for the wellbeing of human souls.

The injury done is often in inverse proportion to the general good character, or sound judgment of the person who errs. Thus a minister of the Gospel deservedly of great influence because of his general saintly character, may by a single lapse from sound teaching implant most ruinous error, or a singularly wise and virtuous citizen may by a divergence unto some line of wrong practice ruin many souls, whom one of less austere morals could not turn aside.

A young lady may in sheerest thoughtlessness place the wine-cup in the hands of one who shall thereby stumble and irrecoverably fall. A minister may in his anxiety to prove that our Saviour did not disapprove of moderate drinking, contravene the law of Christian charity, and send scores of young men or women to fill drunkard's graves.

And so it is by mere thoughtlessness, we may fail, not only to speak the good word when occasion requires, or by unwise or inopportune speech may divert from the serious thought which would lead to heavenly ways; thus by a single act to us indifferent or hardly worth considering we may destroy one for whom Christ died.

CENTENNIAL OF BUFFALO CHURCH,

TO BE CELEBRATED AT BUFFALO

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY,

AUG. 12TH AND 13TH.

One hundred years have passed away since the Scotch settlers on the waters of the Buffalo became an organized church. The history of Buffalo church has been an illustrious and fruitful one. As "a tree planted by the rivers of water," she has brought forth her fruit in her season. Buffalo is pre-eminently the "mother of churches." From this parent church have sprung, wholly or in part, Jonesboro, Pocket, White Hill, Sanford, St. Andrews and Salem churches. These are justly proud of their descent, and will gladly join their venerable mother in celebrating an event so eminently worthy of perpetual remembrance.

The fact that they or their parents went up to Buffalo to worship and to bury their dead for so many years attracts them to the spot, not only to garland the graves of the dead, but also to hear the same old Gospel preached in the old home, and rejoice in such a grand re-union after a century of blessing and blessedness.

Here the young who have grown old and gray and lonely in the world will meet beneath venerable trees the faces of early companions that bear the same marks of time. Their sympathetic interest in the "olden time" and love for the ways that are gone will sweeten their converse "one with another," while the vacant seats may whisper a note of warning, and the whole service brighten the hope of a greater reunion beyond.

FOR THE FAMILY.

LOVE COMFORTLESS.

The child is in the night and rain
On whom no tenderest wind might blow,
And out alone in a hurricane.
Ah, no,
The child is safe in Paradise!

The snow is on his gentle head,
His little feet are in the snow,
O, very cold is his small bed!
Ah, no,
Lift up your heart, lift up your eyes!

Over the fields and out of sight,
Beside the lonely river's flow,
Lieth the child this bitter night.
Ah, no,
The child sleeps under God's own eyes!

What wandering lamb cries sore distressed,
Whilst I with fire and comfort go?
O, let me warm him in my breast!
Ah, no,
'Tis warm in God's lit nurseries!

—Littell's Living Age.

SOME RARE EDITIONS OF THE WORKS OF ROBERT BURNS.

Not long ago, when new material for the Henley Edition of Burns was being sought at home and abroad, a certain modest Scotchman, living in the United States, had an original manuscript lithographed and sent to the publishers. In making acknowledgement of his courtesy on page 406 of the third volume, recently published, they write him down as Mr. W. R. Smith, of Cincinnati, O. There can be no reasonable doubt that a Mr. W. R Smith does reside in Cincinnati, O. Perhaps several of them. But the Mr. W. R. Smith who possesses an original Burns manuscript resides, and for forty-three years has resided in Washington City as Superintendent of the Botanical Gardens. At present, furthermore, he is President of the Society of American Florists, and for over a generation he has been widely known in this country as the friend of many distinguished men. He has always been at home to them in his little red brick cottage, which nestles well hidden just under the white majesty of the Capitol and at peace in the green plant-world of its own.

The treasure of this house, as it is the pride of his heart, has long been his Burns collection, which fills a small room apart from his general library. How interesting this collection is may be inferred from his own statement that it contains two hundred separate dated editions of Burns out of the six hundred editions which he says have been published throughout the world. To this treasure-house of his beloved poet he expects to add other volumes, to be obtained from the Mitchell Library of Glasgow, which leads all others in Burnsiana. The affection with which he still plans for the further enrichment of his hoard is a passion that began in youth. The first shillings he ever earned, he says, were captured at a village school examination. In the dreadful presence of the dominie and the minister the class had been called up to recite, member by member, stanza in turn, Gray's Elegy. They soon stuck. "You go on with it, Duz," commanded the domino. Go on with it he did: and two shillings were laid in his palm for this feat of memory; whereupon he took to his heels and spent his prize for his first volume of "Bobbie."

Among his rare editions he reckons one published a Alexandris, Va., in 1813, during the war with England. Only two copies of this, he says, are known to be in existence. Another is the first American edition. Another is the second American edition, to which belonged the Washington copy now owned by Representative Cabell of Illinois, and held to be priceless. As to the final disposition of his Burns library, he thought at one time of sending it to a Masonic institution in Kentucky, owing to his friendship for the late Senator Beck of that State, another rugged Scotchman whose portrait hangs on the library wall. He has since thought of leaving it to Princeton College, out of regard for the late President McCosh. But his preference is to have it housed at last in Washington, in a room that he would like Mr. Andrew Carnegie to build for it there instead of the one the millionaire is understood to have offered to build in Pittsburg. It would be a pity ever to have the collection removed from Washington, where it is so often visited. When Craibe Angus wanted the loan of it last year for the Burns celebration at Glasgow, Mr. Smith declined to send it, being loath to disappoint his American visitors. In this connection he quoted with some feeling a remark once made by a niece of Burns: "A Scotchman always begins by finding fault with my uncle; but the Americans—they never find fault with him." A Scotchman must come to this country, insisted Mr. Smith, to find out what it means to love the poet of Scotland.—From "Chronicle and Comment" in The Bookman.

Young Lochinvar who, according to the story, ran away with his bride, did not love her one particle more devotedly than a thousand honest husbands of the present day love their wives.

No novelist could invent a story of truer manly devotion than the "humble romance" revealed by the following letter from Mr. Harry Chant, of 211 Haskell Avenue, Dallas, Texas.

"About fourteen or fifteen months ago I was working with a gang of men and happened to say to one of them, 'I hope it will not rain as I have a big washing to do for the children.' The man said, 'What is the matter with your wife?'"

"For years my wife had been suffering from what the doctors called prolapsus of uterus. She was nervous, had cold hands and feet, palpitation, headache, backache, constipation, a disagreeable drain, with bearing down pains; no appetite. She got so weak she could not get around. I am only a laborer so was always in debt with the doctors, and all for no good, as none did her any good. We began to think that she was never going to get well."

"I told this man what the doctors said was the matter with her," and he said "did you ever hear of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?" "I told him no, but I had tried so many patent medicines that I was tired of them all, and besides I did not have enough money to pay the doctor and the drug store. He said if I would get two or three bottles and try them, and if it did not do my wife any good that he would pay for the medicine. I went to the drug store (Mr. Clawber's on Elm Street), and bought a bottle. The first and second did not seem to have much effect but the third seemed to work like a charm. She has taken in all about thirteen bottles and she is today as stout and healthy as any woman in the United States. This is not the only case. When ever I hear tell of any woman who is sick in the neighborhood I just send the book and paper that is wrapped around every bottle and that does the my own washing and cooking, for my wife can do it all in one day and never seems tired or out of spirits now."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, promptly and permanently.

AUGUST.

The month of hot days and thermometers high;
The month when bright meteors flash through the sky;
When the fields are all swarming with beetles and bugs,
And the farmers are calling for cold-water jugs;
When we long for the mountains and cool, shaded streams,
That ripple and babble with lullaby dreams,
Or the storm-beaten rocks on the sands by the shore,
Where the billows are rolling in musical roar.

MAMA'S NEW GAME.

Oh, what a long day this is!" sighed Kitty. "I wish it were supper-time."

The rain was pattering steadily on the window. It had pattered there all day, and the afternoon in the sitting-room had seemed very long.

The sitting-room was always a pleasant room, but just now not in very good order. There had been a doll's tea-party on the window-seat, and a severe case of the measles on the sofa; and sickness and company as everybody knows, clutter up" a house.

The scrap-book had kept the little girls busy for a time, but now the last picture had been pasted in, and Mabel had shut the book with a bang and given herself a "good stretch," while Kitty had laid herself back flat on the floor, looked bored, and wished for supper-time.

"Well, it isn't supper-time," said Mabel, "and it won't be for half an hour. Mama, do tell us what to do next."

Mama looked up from her sewing, and smiled at the two forlorn little faces. Her eyes wandered about the room as though hunting for a new idea; and when they grew wide and bright and she began to laugh, the children knew she had found it. "Now, what is it?" cried Mabel, while Kitty scrambled up from the floor. "Tell us, quick!"

"It is a brand-new game," said mama briskly. "Kitty may be 'It' first. Stand exactly in the middle of the floor, Kitty. Shut your eyes tight. Turn around three times. Now raise your forefinger, and point straight ahead. Open your eyes. What is your finger pointing at?"

Kitty laughed. She began to mistrust the new game. "It's my hat," she said rather meekly—for the hat was on the piano-stool, where it had no business to be.

"Yes," returned mama. "The next rule in this game is to take that hat, and go and put it in the very best place for a hat that you can think of. And while you do it, it is Mabel's turn to shut her eyes."

Mabel sprang into the middle of the floor and spun about so many times that she was almost dizzy, and pointed so low that when she opened her eyes all she saw for a moment was the carpet, but "Oh, my!" she cried out then. "It is the mucilage bottle! Only think if I had stepped on it, mama!"

"Well" said mama, "where is the best place in this house for the mucilage?" and Mabel carried off the bottle to her papa's desk.

"This is a funny thing to call a game, declared Kitty, coming back from the hall closet. "But go ahead, mama! I wonder what shall I get next? It is just like a grab bag!"

Kitty whirled around three times, pointed and then opened her eyes. "Oh, it's all Dick's school-books on the window-sill! Mama, if I put those in the best place in this house for a boy's school-books I don't believe Dick will ever find them. Dick would never think of looking there!"

"Dick must take the risk," said mama, smiling; and Kitty started upstairs to Dick's room. At any other time she might have grumbled over the errand; but it was fun in a game, and she ran downstairs again in a hurry to see what Mabel's turn would be.

So the game went on, with jokes and laughing, until the sitting-room began to look neat and orderly To be sure, it took a good while, and there was some noise—for was it not a game? but the mama in that house never minded any noise that was "good-natured noise." It is wonderful how fast that half-hour before supper went.

At last, just as the tea-bell rang and the boys came trooping in, there was a great shout and laughing in the sitting-room; for Mabel had opened her eyes and was pointing straight at mama.

Mama laughed, and pretended to be in a great hurry to put herself "in the best place for a mama to be" and jumped up and gathered her scissors and spools together, and ran out to her seat at the tea-table.

"Such a nice game," said Mabel, looking about on the tidy room. "What shall we call it, mama—the Rainy-Day Game?"

Mama glanced through the window at the bright sky in the west. "I think the Clearing-Up Game would be better," she said.—Edith F. Foster, in Little Men and Women.

FULL, YET ROOM ENOUGH.

"Mamma," said six-year old Fred, "I can't love God and you both, so I'll choose you."

"Why, my child? what do you mean by saying that you cannot love both? 'Cause that's what the Sunday-school lesson says; it says that I must love God with all my heart, and there isn't but one 'ail' to it, so if I love Him with all there won't be one bit left for you." Mamma laughed, and only asked Fred to come with her. Going to the cellar she quietly asked him to help her fill a large pan with potatoes.

"There," said he, piling on the last big fellow, "it's full."

"Full, yet there is room," answered mother, as she next took a bag of beans and commenced to shake them into the big crevices between the potatoes. She poured and shook until a quarter or more had disappeared, and the pan was specked with white.

"Neither is it full yet," she said; and, taking up a shovelful of sand, she scattered that over the pan, and it too disappeared, and another after it.

"Not full yet," she said again, as she took up a cup and began pouring water on the pan, and she poured and poured until several quarts were gone.

"Now, you see how a thing can be full and yet hold more—of something else. So your heart may be full of the love of God, and plenty of room left for me, and papa, and sister, and play, and books."—Canada Presbyterian.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Editor: As I have seen the letters in your paper, I thought I would write one myself. I go to Sunday-school, my teacher's name is Miss Lena Wessel. I study Shorter Catechism, there are two more boys in my class. I am eleven years of age. I have a dog and a horse. The horse's name is Bay Dick. My dog's name is Don. I have two brothers and three sisters. Papa has been taking your paper a long time. I will close for fear of the waste basket.

Your friend,
GUSSIE MCLEAN.

Lumberton, N. C.

Dear Mr. McLaurin: As my mama says there was only one letter in the PRESBYTERIAN week before last, I thought I would write one for this week. Mamma took brother, nurse and me down to Virginia Beach, Ocean View and Old Point last month, and we had such a nice time. I love to ride on the boats better than on the trains. Brother is most well since we came back. I have six little baby kittens and they are so sweet and pretty. Do you know my grandpa? His name is Mr. H. W. Burwell, he is sick nearly all the time. I want to see him for he has been gone three months.

Your little Virginia friend,
FANNIE BELLE SPATIG.

I want to see him so bad. I will close for this time.

The knitting mill of Salisbury has begun operations.

Charlotte is to have a factory for the manufacture of catsup, sauces and all kinds of grocers and druggists supplies.

A two foot vein of gold has been discovered near Gladstone, Stanley county

The annual report of Postmaster Geo L. Morton, of Wilmington, shows an increase of 18 per cent in the amount of business transacted at this point. The mail facilities have been greatly improved, a special feature being the mail delivery at Ocean View. The building has been repainted and placed in thorough order. Mr. Morton has managed the postoffice with much ability and has a most efficient corps of assistants.

One of the largest cargoes of spirits shipped from Wilmington in some time was on Saturday when the Croatan of the Clyde line sailed with 1,012 barrels of spirits turpentine.

Durham has organized a business man's league.

The shipment of Delaware grapes has begun from Raleigh.

A Young Man's Business League has been organized at Palatka, Fla.

The clay model of the equestrian statue of General Simon Bolivar, which is to be presented to New York city by President Crespo of Venezuela, to replace the statue which now stands in Central Park is very nearly completed.

A correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writing from Philadelphia, says: The Baldwin Locomotive Works have booked an order for twenty locomotives for Japan. This, with orders already received, makes a total of fifty for that oriental empire. Thirty have just been shipped. Of these eighteen were for the government roads and twelve for a private railroad corporation. The order just received is for the Japanese government. It is stated by the officials of the Baldwin works that there is practically no serious European competition in this trade; that the prices made are much lower than those offered by English, German and French manufacturers. The reputation of American locomotives in some countries, especially in China and Japan, has brought about a competition among American manufacture so strong that the prices are even closer than locomotives for domestic markets.

WHENCE COMETH MY HELP.

Strong hills, unreproachful unchanging,
For souls that would worship as I—
Who am restless, inconstant, and weary,
But true to the hills and the sky,—
Bend near me,
And hear me,
Though answerless still to my cry.

As a pagan can pray, self-deceiving,
To gods that are dumb,
So my soul can adore thee, calm hill-tops,
When to thee I come.
And thy curves living soft against heaven
Are answer that strength will be given,
Flowing free
Into me.

There's a world of my fellows behind me,
And fretting, and pain;
Deep incomprehension, as wide as
The measureless main,
Is our portion together, for them and for me,
Yet I love them. But now—I am free,
I am free,
Thy vassal, thy pupil, to be.

Then take me,
Ye hill tops, and make me
Breathe deep of your uppermost air;
Let the gracious gold tints of the morning
Be psalm and be prayer:
For the soul gaining strength from your uplift
Braves noontime and care.

But tell me, ye merciful hill-tops,
To whom do ye pray?
Who gives you your might and your meekness,
The calm of your day,
That ye have free for sparing
To all who come caring?
To bow and obey?

The God of the hills in his heart bears
The strength of the world,
From the might of the mountains to slenderest
Force there impearled
In the dewdrop. The gold of the morn is his smile.
Slow we learn. God is waiting the while
Till our hearts shall reach high as the hills,
And we see
That all strength and all calm and all beauty
Is He.

REV. R. S. ARROWOOD.

The subject of this sketch was born July 28th, 1854, within the bounds of Long Creek Presbyterian church, in Gaston county, North Carolina. His parents were William and Mary Arrowood. On the 3rd of January last (1897) his good mother passed over to her reward. His father still lives and has been for many years a faithful ruling elder in Long Creek church.

Robert Sylvanus is one of ten living children, all members of the Presbyterian church. Two of his brothers are ministers, W. B. Arrowood, a pastor in Fayetteville Presbytery, and M. C. Arrowood, an evangelist in Mecklenburg.

When about fifteen years of age Robert joined his father's church, during the pastorate of Rev. R. N. Davis; and in his eighteenth year left his father's farm, where he had labored up to that time, and went off to school. Having been prepared for college by his brother, William B. Arrowood, and also at Finley High School, Lenoir, N. C., he entered Davidson College in the fall of 1873, and was graduated in 1877. After graduation he taught a male High School in Lincolnton for two years—sold goods for two years longer in Rutherford, and in September '81, took charge of another male High School at Concord, N. C., which he successfully conducted until the summer of 1885. In the mean time having studied theology he was licensed as a probationer of the gospel ministry, in the fall of '85, by Concord Presbytery at Mooresville, N. C. He immediately began serving Bethphage as a supply and in June '86, was ordained and installed pastor of that church.

Directly after going to Bethphage Mr. Arrowood began preaching at Dewese schoolhouse, a point on the borders of Bethphage. As a result of the work there Gilwood church was organized in 1889, and is now a flourishing church. During his pastoral work of six years at Bethphage, two of which were also given to Gilwood as supply, there were about one hundred members added to the former, and twenty to the latter church by examination, besides those by certificate.

Having accepted calls from Third Creek in Rowan, and Fifth Creek and Elmwood in Iredell Mr. Arrowood entered upon the pastorate of these churches in August, 1891. In the fall of '95, he resigned Fifth Creek and Elmwood and took charge of Unity and Franklin in connection with Third Creek, where he still labors happily and not without success and hope.

In the fall of '88, he was chosen moderator of Concord Presbytery at Taylorsville and was one of the commissioners of his Presbytery in 1891, to the General Assembly which convened in Birmingham, Ala.

In March, 1880, Mr. Arrowood was happily married to Miss Mary Louise Dickson, daughter of the late Rev. A. Flinn Dickson, of hallowed memory, who faithfully served the Church as preacher, pastor and author—his last service being that of First Principal of Tuscaloosa Institute. Mrs. Arrowood finds time, occasionally, to make contributions over a nom-de-plume, to the religious press of the day, which are always read with interest.

Mr. Arrowood's preaching is plain and practical—his style rather colloquial than declamatory—his text and context are well expounded, and altogether he is instructive and edifying. His present field is large, twenty miles in length by ten in breath—and requires much labor. He preaches from two to three sermons, at different places, nearly every Sabbath, and is faithful besides in pastoral work. But being in the prime of life and blest with a fine physique and a good constitution his strength seems equal to his day, and gives promise of still further and prolonged activity and usefulness. His people are sincerely attached to him, and pray that his bow may long abide in strength.

ELDER.

THE SEA.

For those who are so fortunate as to spend a vacation by the sea, here are two vivid pictures of a tempest. The first picture is by Byron:

"Man marks the earth with ruin; his control
Stops with the shore: upon the watery plain
The wrecks are all thy deeds; nor doth remain
A shadow of man's ravage, save his own,
When for a moment, like a drop of rain,
He sinks into thy depths with bubbling groan,
Without a grave, unknelled, uncoffined and unknown.
His steps are not upon thy paths; thy fields
Are not a spoil for him; thou dost arise
And shake him from thee; the vile strength he wields
For earth's destruction thou dost all despise,
Spurning him from thy bosom to the skies,
And send'st him shivering in thy playful spray,
And howling to his gods, where haply lie
His petty hopes in some near port or bay,
And dashest him again to earth—there let him lay."

Alongside that picture by Byron place this one by David:

"They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep. For he commandeth, and raiseth up the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof. They mount up to heaven; they go down again to the depths; their soul is melted because of trouble. They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits end. Then they cry unto they Lord in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distress."

Now look on this picture and on that. Which do you prefer? In the two pictures the two men have unconsciously photographed themselves. Byron, the cynical, tosses up the poor sailor, "howling to his gods," and the gods "dash him to the earth," or "drown him with a bubbling groan." But David, the man of faith and hope, while not less realistic in describing the tempest, yet makes a way of escape from danger and death. In his idea God rules; and when the storm is at its height, "they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses."

So I think you will like David better than Byron. The sacred poet is less labored, and more true to nature; but what is more, the spirit of poetry in him is sanctified and sweetened by the spirit of faith.—Rev. Joseph Hamilton, in Canada Presbyterian.

THE SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA AND HOME MISSIONS.

Many members of this Synod of our Church, who rejoiced in the privilege of having the General Assembly hold its late historic session within our bounds, were deeply pained at one incident of the Assembly—when one of the most venerable members of the Assembly held it up to opprobrium as guilty of "disobedience" to the Assembly's orders, and its members as captious with regard to a department of the Assembly's work. In view of the age of the speaker and his infirmities, making him to a great degree dependent upon others for his information, we were disposed to keep silence. It was a thing that ought not to have been said, and the less said about it the better. But it has pleased the historian of the Assembly to refer to this matter in the Quarterly as "the most dramatic incident of the Assembly:" to quote with approval the reference to "disobedience," and to accompany it with several very ugly words about "courage," "coming out of the brush," "purging themselves." The matter now demands attention,

1. The whole matter of "disobedience" is disposed of by the constitution. To the session is given the authority to "order collections;" to the higher courts the authority to "concert measures for the enlargement of the Church" within their bounds. The Assembly has never claimed any authority over the churches in the matter of collections except to insist that, they shall contribute—the how, when, where, how often, are left within the liberty of the Church. This is proved by the blanks for systematic beneficence—directing the Presbytery to inquire only if the churches have contributed, and if not why not. It is further proved by the original constitution of the Home Mission Committee, that left to Presbyteries the freedom to conduct their own work in their own way, provided they gave one annual collection to the Assembly's work. A scheme of collections is not authoritative, but is an effort to secure uniformity by concerted action; it is the judgment of the whole Church as to what is best for the whole. But circumstances and conditions vary, and the principle of local self-government comes in, enabling the sections of the Church to modify the general scheme to suit local conditions. Has the Synod of Virginia been pilloried for disobedience because it takes a collection for Synodical Missions in November—the month set apart for Education? Have we in North Carolina branded Mecklenburg Presbytery as disobedient because it gives only one collection to the Synod's work? Do we in Wilmington Presbytery censure a brother who "goes for" his people on behalf of the different causes when money is abundant from the strawberry and cotton crops, instead of following the general scheme? It would be a sad day for our Church when our highest court, or any of the lower courts, attempted to enforce an iron-clad uniformity in matters of this kind. Surely those who are nearest the people know best their condition and circumstances, and the constitution is wise to place the ordering of these matters with the session, while the higher courts concert measures for the general good.

2. But this matter has a history. The first point we would present is that the North Carolina scheme was in force before the Assembly's scheme was adopted. In the fall of 1891, the Synod of North Carolina, awakened to its responsibilities, decided to supply all the needs of its own Home Mission fields, and asked all its churches to send one annual collection to the Assembly's Committee, no part of which was to be returned for work in our bounds. At that time all was chaos in our relation to the Assembly's Committee—some Presbyteries doing their own work and sending a per cent, some doing their own work and sending one collection, some "co-operating" by sending up all their collections and asking back more than they sent; some pursuing one plan in Sustentation and another in Evangelistic work. And the net result of it all was $54 left in the Assembly's treasury for general work over and above what was expended here. By the change the Assembly was relieved of all liability for work in North Carolina, and collections went from this Synod to the Assembly's treasury amounting to $755 the first year, though the plan was new and imperfectly understood

The next point is that the Assembly is indebted to this Synod for its present scheme. So great was the dissatisfaction with the old scheme that the Assembly of 1892, appointed an ad interium committee to report to the next Assembly. That report (published before the Assembly) caused alarm to the friends of Synodical work, and the Synodical Committee in North Carolina sent a member to represent it before the Assembly's Standing Committee. He described the North Carolina plan to the Committee and the Committee reported it to the Assembly with the modification of two collections for the Assembly instead of one. The relief from the old confusion has been universally recognized, and the Assembly's Executive Committee reports this year that whereas the average of the ten years before the change gave only a balance of about $12,000 for use at the discretion of the committee, the average of the three years of the present plan has given $20,658, an increase of 72 per cent. Has the Church no gratitude to North Carolina for that?

But in the third place let us see what reasons North Carolina had for not accepting the modification of two collections instead of one.

(1) The work of the Synod was already inaugurated—the increase of the Assembly's work was prospective. Was it wise to abandon work already begun and prospering for the sake of beginning work elsewhere?

(2) The financial panic had struck the country. It was a grave question whether we could maintain our work as it was with existing resources.

(3) Our efficient Superintendent in God's providence had to retire from the work, making the general collections more necessary than ever.

(4) North Carolina is a cotton State and there is no money in the country in June—the only month left to us according to the scheme—the Presbyteries having February and August, and the Assembly asking for January and September. To depend on a June collection for our work would have been to abandon it.

(5) What then did we do? The North Carolina plan had given January and August to the Presbyteries, February and June to the Synod, and September to the Assembly. In order to give the Assembly the best month, January, we changed around so that the Presbyteries would have February and August, and the Synod June and September. It was a change very disadvantageous to the Synod, putting its two collections so near together and both so long after the meeting of Synod. In June the country people—except in the trucking region—have no money, and in September the city people are out of town. But as the Synod could only give one month to the Assembly, it determined to give the best. The results show that the Assembly was not wrouged, as the contributions from this Synod have increased (according to the Secretary's statement) over 150 per cent since the Synod modified its plan to suit the Assembly. They have increased over 3,000 per cent over the net contributions of the old system.

3. I am now compelled to speak of one part of the charges against us on which I would prefer to keep silent—the effort to put upon the representatives of the Synod of North Carolina the odium of the dissatisfaction that has for years existed in the Church with the management of the Home Mission office. I may begin by remarking that the representative of the Synod who made the motion in the last Assembly that called forth this attack has but lately come among us, and that his active participation in Home Mission affairs was in the Synod of Virginia. For the other "attack" to which reference has been made, this writer has no apologies to make. He was entrusted by the moderator of the Assembly with the chairmanship of the committee of Home Missions, and he tried to discharge the duty that committee laid upon him. The question of the secretaryship was raised in the committee by a representative of the Synod of Texas, and both the representatives of that great Home Mission field were strenuous advocates of a change; a representative from Virginia said that if it were his own father he would think a change necessary; equally emphatic opinions came from all parts of the Church as represented on that committee. As the result of its deliberations the committee unanimously instructed the chairman to communicate to the secretary their purpose to nominate another man. The secretary after deliberation informed us that he would be nominated on the floor of the Assembly. Three of the committee then decided to present a minority report placing him in nomination, while thirteen united in a report presenting another name. The vote in the Assembly was—as memory serves me—52 to 65 It was spoken of in the paper, as a "close call." The committee felt that this vote fully vindicated its position. A secretary needs to have more than five out of every nine in favor of him in order to command the full support of the Church. A pastor who after years of service found four out of nine opposed to him would hardly regard the vote as a victory. Could he stay in his charge at all? Can this widespread disaffection, voiced by thirteen out of sixteen of the Assembly's standing committee, and by fifty-two commissioners of the Presbyteries to the General Assembly be attributed to a few "restless, dissatisfied brethren" of the Synod of North Carolina, skulking in the "brush" under the charge of "disobedience?"

One might suppose that if the "friends" of Home Missions were satisfied with its management, its "enemies" need not complain. But these enemies are of a peculiar kind. They have shown their hostility (1) by revolutionizing the conduct of the work in their own Synod so as to increase their contributions to the Assembly's work 1,500 per cent; (2) by proposing a plan that pulled the Assembly's work out of chaos, increasing the funds of its committee 72 per cent; (3) by modifying their scheme to suit the Assembly's, greatly to their own disadvantage, but to the further increase of their contributions by over 150 per cent more; and last by insisting that the Assembly's work was of such importance that it was entitled to the best and most efficient management attainable in our Church.

P. H. H.

WE OFFER OUR readers special treats to-day in the Letter from Rev. S. P. Verner and the report from the Biblical Assembly at Asheville.

SENOR CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO, Prime Minister of Spain, was assassinated on last Sunday at Santa Aguedo by an anarchist. The pistol was used and the victim lived one hour after the assault. Canovas filled various offices of prominence and of influence during the past forty years. He alternated in occupancy of the premiership with Campos and Sagasta—the latter principally—for forty years. He has been the dependence of the crown in the various struggles of Cuba for independence. His greatest title to fame is in the persistence with which he has fought the battles of order and liberty in connection with constitutional monarchy.

The question, What will be the effect upon the Cuban war? it is not possible to determine at the time this is written. The probability is that the premiership will be promptly filled by one of like views and feelings to Canovas and that things will move on without serious disturbance; but with the Spanish disposition to act hastily and impulsively, serious riots may occur and if the leader for the occasion appear momentous consequences may follow.

THE following opinion as to the training for women, from Mr. Lardy, a prominent and influential Swiss government official, is well worth remembering:

Nothing in the world is more precious than a woman with a sane judgment and a pure heart. Therefore, teach woman everything that can fortify and enlighten her judgment and energetically keep from her, after as before her marriage, everything that could corrupt the purity of her heart.

NOTES OF KED SPRINGS' INSTITUTE.

Monday Morning, July 26th.

After song service Dr. Hoge delivered a timely address. Subject: The Children of the Covenant. The Doctor made plain the duty of the household; the father should be the priest and as such preside, and daily worship should be held. Children are under the control of the Church, the larger family, and should be taught the first principles of religion in the family and Sabbath-school. He talked well on the Sunday-school work and gave much good advice to teachers and other workers; thought there was too much preaching in our city churches; one sermon a day would be sufficient, and let the day be spent in reading, studying and meditating upon the Word, in homes and Sabbath-schools. The Doctor was interrupted by the falling of a very heavy rain, and his address closed the services of the morning, which by no means could be called a dry service. In the afternoon prayer and praise service was conducted by Mr. J. C. McCaskill the first elder to answer to his name as placed on the program.

Rev. W. B. Arrowood then followed with one of his best sermons from the 19th Psalm, 7th and 11th verses.

Rev. H. T. Graham preached and his theme was The Power of the Risen Christ.

Tuesday Morning, 27th.

After much sweet music, which is all the time improving, President Rev. C. G. Vardell made one of the most practical addresses of this session of the Institute, on the Duty of Church Members, showing that primarily the duty of church members was the saving of souls, and that by the giving of time, talents, means and prayer. Mr. Vardell was not assigned this subject at first as the program indicates. But no one who heard him could fail to see that he had given the subject careful study. He asked if the Spirit was to come some prayer-meeting night and take to heaven only those church members found there how many would be left. A serious question for all non-attending church-members to consider. A pastor who had a special ingathering into one of his churches was met by a friend soon after who thought it was reason for much rejoicing to the pastor, but the good man replied that it only meant more work for him. Any one can see that while these things in a larger part are so, they ought not so to be. All church-members should be helpful in their prayers and works. What a few people can do by earnest, faithful prayer toward helping pastor and the church cannot be measured by man. This was a duty-telling address. Mr. McKelway then spoke on the Evangelization of North Carolina. His theme was "Christian Patriotism." He said that there are over one quarter of a million people in North Carolina who cannot read the Word of God. Ours is a noble State and we ought to be proud of it, and try to overtake the destitution in religion. Presbyterianism is adapted to the masses. Study the constitution of the United States, and you study the Form of Government of the Presbyterian Church with its lower and higher courts. That this evangelization work is for Christ's sake is proven from its needs, and God's blessing upon what has been done. Great increase in Presbyterianism has followed the efforts of the last few years.

In the afternoon Dr. Monroe conducted a nice prayer and praise service: The Workers' Prayer. Rev. Hugh Craig, after an introduction spiced with inimitable humor discussed the object of the Sunday-school work. Here he had a chance at the elders and deacons and he used it. He spoke of the different departments of the work, as related to the officers, teachers and scholars, and to those who do not but should take part in the work.

At night Dr. W. W. Moore who had been eagerly expected made his appearance and addressed the Institute on Ministerial Education. The book of Proverbs was his text or foundation of remarks. The address was greatly enjoyed. The address gave new life to the Institute, and the singing was said to have been even better than heretofore.

Wednesday Morning, 28th.

The day was bright, the atmosphere cooler and the music excellent. Dr. Moore followed the praise service in a sermon from Ecclesiastes 12:12. His subject was The Whole Man. This sermon was full of instruction; Dr. Moore's speech is always pointed and his words full of meaning.

After five minutes recess and the usual service of song, Dr. Howerton of Charlotte, was introduced by Mr. McKelway. Dr. H. spoke at length on the subject of the Assembly's Home Missions. His remarks were based upon the work in Arkansas. He showed that only forty-four out of every one hundred people in North Carolina were members of some church. In Arkansas not more than twenty-six out of every hundred are members of any church. In the matter of contributions Arkansas is away ahead of North Carolina as per member in the amount contributed. He made a strong appeal for missions. His heart evidently was full of the subject which he enforced by advice most practical.

The afternoon was given to addresses on Red Spring Seminary. Dr. Moore, Principal Vardell, Rev. A. J. McKelway, secretary and treasurer of Board of Trustees and Financial Agent of the Presbytery, Mr. Arrowood and Mr. Patterson chairman Board of Trustees, all made speeches. We gather the following facts: God's blessing is upon the school. It is a success. The building must be enlarged. It is in need of more money. It is not run to make money as other schools are. The money is placed in the hands of the Principal by the parents, to be administered by him in the education of their children. The faculty for next year has been enlarged. Preparation for even greater things are being made. Some for want of room in the building were turned away last session, but it will not be so next session. Ample room for forty or fifty more students is being provided. Six thousand dollars is needed to relieve Presbytery of its work of building and furnishing. The work must be done for the students are coming. If every member of the church in Fayetteville Presbytery will send one dollar to Rev. W. B. Arrowood, Laurinburg, N. C., everything will run on smoothly.

At night Dr. Moore delivered an interesting address on Palestine, or the fifth Gospel. This was one of the most instructive addresses of the Institute. Teaching people much in so short a time of a land about which they had been studying so long, and had learned but little.

Thursday Morning, 29th.

During song service this morning Mr. Smith talked on the importance of all people singing. Dr. Howerton then spoke on the Duty of Elders in Vacant Churches. He regretted that so few were present to hear him. Amongst the many duties made plain by the Dootor, none were more needful and practicable than that of the elders holding regular service in vacant churches, churches will thus be held together and strengthened, and collections can be taken which would help wonderfully in carrying on the work of the Lord at home and abroad.

After recess Rev. H. T. Graham made a stirring address on Foreign Missions, basing his remarks on the passage of Scripture: Go ye into into all the world and preach My Gospel. Mr. Graham is a returned missionary and could have delivered his address in the Japanese language.

In the afternoon Dr. Hill made an eloquent and helpful address on the subject of the Church of the Apostles. Proving to the mind of many that the Form of Government and the Apostolic Church was Presbyterian. Dr. Moore made the closing address at night on America and the Bible. This discourse while applicable and helpful to this Institute and section of country, would be helpful to all other sections of the United States, and the world at large. Mr. McKelway had what Senator Tilman calls a hand primary taken to see how many wanted Dr. Moore to come to the Institute next year. All hands went up after singing, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts," &c. Dr. Moore pronounced the benediction and thus closed the sixth annual meeting of the Institute.

This session was run upon a high plane. All the talks were substantial food, but easy to digest. We have some criticism to make. The time of intermission from 12 to 3.30 on the Sabbath is too much wasted time. Especially when we consider the very large number of those that drive a long distance, and have to return the same day. They only hear one address and must leave at the beginning of the next. Some speaker could be found probably on the ground who would willingly and to the delight of a large congregation fill up some of the unoccupied time. More publicity might be given to the program before the time of meeting. Some practice might be had on the music and several neighboring choirs trained, might have been specially invited and expected to sing. The success of the music this year was due chiefly to the earnest faithfulness of Rev. A. J. Smith the teacher, to those who performed on the instrument, to Mrs. and Miss Flora McKinnon of Red Springs, Mrs. McKelway, of Fayetteville and the Misses Malloy of Lumber Bridge. These with their presence and voices gave a helpful send off to every service, and therefore they are entitled to special mention.

Dr. Moore paid a high tribute to the work of the Institute and predicts much good will come from it to the present and future generations. The dissemination of so much wholesome truth is bound to bring forth fruit. This Institute is attracting widespread attention, and those who only hear of its work are more than surprised when they see it. Some are careless and do not appreciate their privileges as they ought, but Gideon's army is always on hand to do the work of the Lord, realizing that people are as much responsible for hearing, or failing to hear as those who speak are for delivering the message. Rev. A. J. Smith sought for points as to the management of this Institute, having been appointed by the Presbytery of Savannah, Ga., on a committee to arrange for the holding of an Institute for Bible study.

MAKING CHILDREN HAPPY.

The rearing of children is a subject which always has been and always will be a source of much discussion. We shall never arrive at the point when the application of labeled rules will meet each day's experience; but there are general principles which ought to give definite aim to our government. We assume that all good mothers wish their children to be obedient, truthful, intelligent, but do all teach them to be happy? Some may say: "This is too evasive a thing to be controlled, children are naturally happy." Thank God the dear little ones do start upon life's pathway with hearts ready to absorb all the sunshine that comes to them, and now is the opportunity to make their world so rich, so beautiful, that its rays may stream over into mature life, and carry with it some of the freshness and enthusiasm that gladdened childhood's days. No hardships or trials can so paralyze the will or make existence such a treadmill that life is not worth living. We believe that through the period of childhood the heart and intellect can be so trained and interests so multiplied that however dark the days may be which follow, the feeling will never come that it is not worth while striving. As to the plan to be pursued in this education, we would put first and above all the force of example. Let the home atmosphere be bright and cheerful, and all disagreeable things kept in the background. This will far outweigh all desired teaching. Make your children feel that you regard ill temper and being cross very serious faults, and making those about them happy the right expression of a right spirit. The cultivation of love for animals is an important element in a child's education. Nature in all its varied forms should be a daily lesson, and impressed upon the sensitive mind, will be through life a source of joy. Try to keep them from looking upon their tasks as disagreeable duties, and encourage them to feel that there is great satisfaction in being useful. Children so trained are the ones who push forward and make a career of usefulness and honor.—Womankind

SOUL-LIGHT.

Sometimes, in passing through a crowd, we see a face that attracts us by its sweetness of expression, Perhaps it is an old face, crowned with a glory of hoary hairs: yet love, joy and peace shine out of every dot and wrinkle in it. Sometimes it is a young face that beams with health and purity and beauty. But whether old or young when we see that unmistakable soul-light in a face we know than the heart behind it is pure, the life good, and that the body thus illuminated is the temple of the Holy Spirit. To keep the mind occupied with good, pure, useful, beautiful, and divine thoughts precludes the possibility of thinking about and thus being tempted by things sinful, low or gross. If is because Paul knew this that he says so earnestly: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are of good report, think on these things." In the well-formed habit of thinking pure thoughts lies the secret of being pure in heart; and in the daily and nightly meditation in the law of the Lord, is a safeguard against many of the sins which defile the carnal heart, and debase and blacken the countenance.—Scottish Reformer.

If we think of Christianity as a religion, its central point is the incarnation. If we think of it as a Gospel, its central point is the cross and the empty tomb, and both are necessary for an adequate conception of what has come to us through Christ.—Rev. A. T. Taylor.

LOSING TEMPER.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes, and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And any one who has experienced this feeling knows that it cannot be shaken off, but must be prayed off —Selected.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Henrietta Keddie, better known as "Sarah Tytler," is the joint head of a boarding-house for women students at Oxford, as well as a novelist. She comes from Cupar, Scotland, but lived in London in the seventies and early eighties, devoting herself to her favorite literary work.

Thanatopsis was written when Bryant was only seventeen years of age, but was not published until six years later. The poem was discovered by Dr. Bryant with some other papers in the poet's desk and published without his knowledge in the North American Review.

Professor Thomas D. Goodell, of Yale will contribute to the August number of The Century an article entitled "A Journey in Thessaly." This will cover the ground of the recent fighting between the Turks and the Greeks. There are pictures of Larissa, Pharsalos, and Kalabaka, and of several of the wonderful mountain monasteries, one of which is reported to have maintained an effectual defense against the Turks.

The closing of Robert Beall's bookstore in Washington removes one of the capital's landmarks. The store dates back to the early 50's when the proprietor, then a young clerk, branched out for himself. An order for $1,000 worth of books, procured through John Sherman's favor, set him on his feet. Webster, Sumner, Winthrop, Toombs, Alexander Stephens, and other antebellum statesmen were Beall's frequent customers.

Mrs. Stannard, the author of "Bootles's Baby," was once introduced to Sir Morell Mackenzie at a London entertainment by her writing name of "John Strange Winter." The doctor, who did not keep up with current fiction, looked somewhat dazed, and repeated the name wonderingly, whereupon the author remarked: "O, yes, I'm Bootle's Baby." Sir Morrell retreated, marveling still more, and, drawing a friend aside, confided to him "that he had just met a poor, demented lady, who was introduced as a man and thought herself a baby."

Rev. F. H. Johnston, D. D., from Elizabeth City, N. C., to 97 Whitney Ave. New Haven, Conn.—until Sept. 1st.

Licentiate R. Ernest Vinson, from Raeford, N. C., to Winnsboro, S. C., till Sept. 1st.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Evangelistic Notes—July: Very interesting notes will be found in another column.

Elizabeth City:—At last communion one person was received into the church on profession.

Banks Church, Mecklenburg Presbytery:—A week's meeting including fourth Sabbath of July was greatly enjoyed by our people. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Siler, was assisted by Revs. H. W. Hoon and R. A. Miller. One very promising young man from a family outside of our church, united with us and was baptized.

Providence Church in Mecklenburg:—Revs T. M. Lowry, of Shelby, has preached the word for us for nine days with great simplicity and power. It was a constructive instead of a destructive meeting. No clap-trap, or man-made methods, but the plain and practical planting of the eternal seed. Four were added to the church. About $400 has been raised and a good committee appointed to enclose and put in order our old cemetery. It is one of the oldest and most interesting in the country.

J. W. S.

Church Orgaized:—A church of ten members was organized July 30th, at Andrews, Cherokee county, by a commission of Asheville Presbytery. Rev. J. B. Cochran, pastor of the Murphy church, has been preaching at this point occasionally. Rev. R. P. Smith, General Evangelist of Mecklenburg Presbytery, came and conducted a meeting of seven days, preaching twice each day. The congregations grew and the interest increased. On the last day of the services the commission of the Presbytery convened. Rev. H.M. Parker, chairman, preached an appropriate sermon and proceeded with the business according to our Book of Church Order. This little flock starts out with two worthy men as ruling elders. J. A. Slagle and J. M. Richardson. The people generally of this section know very little about Presbyterianism, but the work done here has already made a favorable impression for our church.

Hickory:—The mid-summer communion was observed in the Hickory Presbyterian church last Sabbath. The pastor was assisted by Rev. A. T. Graham, of Davidson. His earnest and faithful preaching was very much enjoyed by all who had the privilege of attending the services. There was one addition on profession of faith.

Rocky River Church:—We have had fourteen additions on examination at Rocky River—all children of the church They came into the communion partly as a result of about three weeks preaching for eight days of which Rev. Jonas Barclay did the preaching and Rev. R.C. Morrison two days. The preaching of both these brethren was much enjoyed. The first was a stranger when he came, but now has many friends and well-wishers. The last, a son of the old church, is held in high esteem and love

Granville Field:—We have recently had seasons of refreshing in several churches of my charge. At Nutbush, Geneva and Oak Hill we have held protracted services. Rev. Dr. C. M. Payne, of Washington, N. C., assisted me at Nutbush in a week's meeting. Here the congregations were large and attentive, increasing in numbers daily. The Holy Spirit used the instructive tender preaching of the Word for the edifying of saints and the leading of sinners to Christ. Rev. A. S. Caldwell, of Oxford, N. C., rendered efficient help at Geneva church. His earnest, faithful presentation of gospel truth was owned of God. Fifteen made profession of faith in Christ as their Savior. Seven joined Geneva church. Others will follow.

God's people seem more earnest in their desire to be useful servants and faithful followers.

Rev. Dr. Drew, of Chase City, Va., assisted me at Oak Hill church. He had visited this church before, some years ago. All were glad to see him. Some who dated their conversion from his former visit more gladly welcomed him. Dr. Drew retains his vigor to a wonderful degree. His preaching brings conviction to the soul. He shows the exceeding sinfulness of sin and the bliss of freedom from sin. There were a number of professions of faith, most of whom will unite with Oak Hill church. Much of Dr. Drew's preaching was directed at Christians. We believe the church is greatly benefited by his visit. Thirty or thirty-five have made profession as the result of these meetings. We believe that much good has been done.

W. T. WALKER,
Pastor of Granville Field.

GENERAL.

The Methodist Church lost a valuable servant in the removal by death of Rev. W. S. Black. He died on Wednesday of last week suddenly of disease of the heart. He was chaplain of the 26th N. C. Regiment in the late war and since for many years editor of the N. C. Christian Advocate. He had been in charge of the Oxford Orphan Asylum for three years.

The gospel will be carried to the dwarfs of the Mabeya tribes in Africa. Mrs. Margaret Maclean, of Glasgow, who has had this matter much at heart, has given £1500 in support of the work. The work will be an advance of the American Presbyterian missionaries from Gaboon and Corsico as centers.

Miss Jennie Stoddard Clark, youngest daughter of Rev. Wm. H. Clark, D.D., of Detroit, Mich, has sailed from New York on her way to South Africa. She is going to Wellington, Cape Colony, forty-five miles from Cape Town, to teach in Huguenot College. This institution was founded in 1874 by Rev. Andrew Murray. It is designed for the Christian training of girls, and its curriculum embraces all the requirements of a liberal education. Miss Clark is the granddaughter of the late Rev. Henry R. Hosington, who for many years was a missionary of the American Board in Ceylon, and inherits much of his missionary zeal.

In consequence of the great earthquake in India, the work of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists has suffered greatly in the loss of buildings and in general distress among the congregations.

A large Baptist chapel has been commenced at Bexhill, near London. The venerable Mrs. C. H. Spurgeon, relict of the renowned pastor of the Tabernacle, cut the first sod of earth, and made an address on the occasion.

PERSONALS.

Rev. Dr. F. H. Johnston. pastor of the church at Elizabeth City, N. C., is off on a vacation, visiting relatives at New Haven.

Rev. R. L. Lancaster has returned to his labors at Kenansville. His family still remain at Masonboro Sound.

Rev. W. L. Lingle, who has so acceptably served the Second church, Charlotte, for the past month, has gone to Atlantic City for the balance of the summer. This church will be supplied during August by Rev. F. K. Sims, a recent graduate of Columbia Seminary.

Rev. William Black, Synodical Evangelist, is spending his vacation at Wrightsville with his family.

Rev. D. J. Currie and wife of Chapel Hill are attending the Bible Conference at Asheville.

The Assembly's Minutes give the address of Rev. H. H. Hawes, D. D., as Williamson, W. Va. That was temporary We are requested to state his address is Bluefield, W. Va.

Rev. Dr. Dabney is now on a visit to his son Dr. Charles W. Dabney at Asheville, N.C.

Rev. Dr A. P. Saunders, President of Fredericksburg College will supply the pulpit of Rev. Byron Clark at Mt. Washington, Md., during the month of the vacation of Mr. Clark in North Carolina. As stated last week Mr. Clark will preach at Immanuel church in this city.

The prospects for Peace seem to be bright, and every preparation is being made for a full school. The whole Institute has been thoroughly overhauled, repaired and painted inside and out. Everything looks as new and fresh as "sweet sixteen."

THE SOUTHERN BIBLICAL ASSEMBLY.

After a delightful trip over the mountains along the line of the Southern Railway with its splendid service, I find myself in the city of Asheville, where the time since my arrival three days ago has passed so pleasantly that I scarcely recognize that I have gotten here.

I came to attend the Southern Biblical Assembly which was opened Wednesday night, August 4th, with a charming talk on Christian Fellowship by Rev. Dr. J. E. Gilbert, Secretary of the American Society of Religious Education under whose auspices the Assembly is held. According to the program of the Assembly, several lines of work are to be pursued during the two weeks in which the sessions are to be held. Among the most important of these are the following: At half past 9 o'clock each morning, save Sunday, Dr. Shearer, President of Davidson College, lectures on the Life of Christ. At the same hour in another church Mrs. H. C. Bell, of Alabama, conducts a juvenile school in which, in a simple way, is covered the entire life of Christ. Mrs. Bell had charge of this same work in 1895, and in 1896, and her work is charmingly done. In the afternoon a school of primary methods especially adopted to teachers in the primary department of Sabbath-schools is conducted by Miss Lelia R. Nowlin, a bright and accomplished young teacher of the schools of Washington, D. C. There are to be daily evening lectures by prominent educators, ministers and writers such as Dr. Edward Rondthaler, of Salem, Dr. A. W. Wilson, of Baltimore, Dr. C. H. Bell, of Alabama, Dr. Thos. Hume, of the State University, Dr. J. M. P. Otts, and others. Beginning August 10th, a Minister's Conference will be conducted by Rev. R. E. Caldwell, of Winston; other features will be, a College Faculty Conference conducted by Rev. E Mac Davis of the University of Tennessee, a Young People's Re-Union, a Bible Reader's Union, conducted by Dr. Gilbert, and a Parent's Conference, conducted by Gen. John Eaton, President of the National Society.

The central theme of this session of the Assembly is Christ and the purpose of the lectures, class work and various conferences is to hold up and magnify Him, the God-Man, who is both the Son of God and the Saviour of man. As I have said Dr. Shearer and Mrs. Bell are carrying their classes over the life of Christ. And each one of the evening lectures has a subject that touches some phase of the life of Him who not only "spake as never man spake," but also lived as never man lived.

The first evening lecture was delivered Thursday night in the Baptist church by Dr. Rondthaler, of Salem, Bishop of the Moravian Church, on "Jesus, the God-Man." It was a beautiful and very interesting lecture in which was traced the history of the doctrine of Christ's divinity and humanity. The second evening lecture was to have been on Friday night by Rev. Dr. A. W. Wilson, Bishop of the M. E. Church, South, on "Jesus, the Pattern Man," but because of the inclemency of the weather it was postponed until Saturday night.

Dr. Shearer's lectures are very interesting and very profitable. As yet I have only heard two of them. His first lecture was introductory, showing how that Jehovah and Lord of the Old Testament and Christ of the New Testament were one and the same person and the Mediator of all the covnants. Then having shown in the first lecture who Jesus is, in the second he discussed His credentials. This he did by considering briefly and pointedly the nature and purpose of miracles.

Thus far the attendance at the Assembly is not large, due no doubt to the fact that by some mistake the reduced rate railroad tickets to the Assembly were ordered to be sold not before the 8th of August. After this date no doubt others will come in and enjoy some of the good things now being served. All who come will find unsurpassed schedules on the Southern Railway, magnificant scenery along the route, profitable instruction in the Assembly, and a most cordial people in Asheville. May many come, and as here on the mountain tops we get new glimpses of creation's beauty, may we also get new and fuller views of Him who "created all things, and for whose pleasure they are and were created."

LETTER FROM AFRICA.

Luebo is the name of the trading station situated exactly at the confluence of the Luebo and Lulua rivers. The Luebo is a small but long river, perhaps two hundred miles long, but not as large at its mouth as the Tennessee at Chattanooga—perhaps more nearly the size of the famous French Broad below Asheville. The Lulua is a larger river, about the size of the Cumberland at Nashville or somewhat larger; running through at Luebo, a steep mountain valley, about ten or fifteen miles wide up to the plateaus adjacent, and full five hundred feet deep. As the Luebo descends this valley from the south, it will be seen that considerable waterfalls are necessary. The Lulua is navigable up to Luebo during the rainy seasons, or about six months in the year. It is navigable up to a point within fifty miles of Luebo all the year. The above statements about the size of the rivers are subject to the modifications of the seasons, it being now low water time. The valley here is extremely thickly wooded and would afford great interest to the botanist, the more especially as almost nothing scientific is known about the flora here. Coffee, cotton, tobacco, the rubber-vine, and many gums are indigenous Immediately at and between the junction of the rivers on the south bank is the trading station of the "S. A. B." (Societe Anonyme Belge, the outgrowth of the former "Sanford Trading Co.") This was the first of the "white man's" stations here, and there Messrs. Lapsley & Sheppard were received and entertained on their first arrival here. On the north bank opposite, and slightly up the hill, is the trading place of the S. A. P. V. (Societe Anonyme des Produits Vegeteaux); a recent company, but very vigorous and aggressive. Somewhat higher up is the old place of the Portuguese trader, whom by a curious coincidence I met at Loauda, who has left the place, as the competition has shorn him of his early profits. They (the Portuguese) were here before Stanley discovered the Congo, having come from Loanda. Still higher up on the hill, just below the Mission, is the Dutch House (strictly "Neuf Africaanische Handels-Venootscap.") With the exception of the Portuguese place, these trading-stations are very neatly built and kept, much more so than many situated nearer the base of supplies. I make one criticism, however, equally applicable to our own place and many others, and that is the fearful effect of the utter removal of nearly all trees, and even the greensward, leaving only a bare soil to be cut to pieces by the deluging rains, and to reflect the tropic glare into the eyes. Nature's glorious green, her special boon to man's visual organs, here so lavishly provided, is vigorously kept away, nor is any effective attempt made to replace it by other growth.

All along the path from the river to the Mission are native houses and a few nascent villages, where they are trying to copy the doings of the foreigners. All these clearings are recent, and some are quite extensive.

In connection with the trading-stations, I ought to have mentioned the cordiality of all the relations between

"I AM THY SALVATION."

"In the multitude of my thoughts within me," the first of thy comforts, gracious God, is this—that thou hast said unto my soul, "I am thy salvation." He saves us, not because of any merit in us, or any deservings of our own; but because sovereign grace chose us, and divine compassion redeemed us, and when we were far off, infinite pity brought us back and made us nigh by the precious blood of Christ. It may well "comfort our hearts," this "everlasting consolation and good hope through grace," coming as it does direct from "our Lord Jesus Christ Himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us." A saved and pardoned sinner can truly say, "Thy comforts delight my soul."

The next thought is, that having saved us, he will keep us. "We are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation." Comparatively few Christians put God's keeping power fully to the test. If we would trust him for the keeping, as we do for the saving, our lives would be far holies and happier than they are. "I will keep it every moment," is one of those grandly unlimited promises which most of us are afraid of, and we store them away in the background because we dare not believe them, and bring them out into the light of our daily practice. O foolish and unbelieving hearts, how much of soul-delighting comfort do we thus miss!—Mrs. Spurgeon, in Sword and Trowel.

THE POWER OF SMILES.

A young man was once confined in a darkened chamber by a long and painful illness. The inmates of the house were distant relatives, and seemed to think that there were doing their whole duty toward the friendless youth by allowing him to remain there. They seldom went into his room, and his attendant was a sad-faced old woman who never smiled.

The young man became despondent, and resolved to commit suicide. While he was writing a note telling his reasons for ending his life a knock was heard upon the door, and a sweet faced lady entered. She was a neighbor, and hearing of his illness, had sought him out.

She smiled so sweetly that even before she spoke the young man gave up the idea of the crime which he had contemplated. She spoke a few encouraging words to him, and when she placed her soft had upon his hot forehead in a motherly way he broke down and sobbed like a child. She smiled again, and knelt in silent prayer by his bedside, with the sweet love token by which God spoke to him still glowing upon her bright, womanly face.

In that holy silence all his bitterness of soul left him, and there came an intense desire to seek and find Christ. The repentant one felt the presence of God's Spirit, and his hungry soul cried out for rest and peace. Ere the smile had faded from the upturned face of the Christian woman, the loving Saviour had entered the open door of the seeking soul.

In a week's time the young man left the dim chamber of pain, and went out into the great world to do the Master's work—American Messenger.

FEATHERED ARROWS.

To say graceful things, and to pay fitting compliments, is one of the fine arts, and one that can be cultivated with exceedinfi profit in the home circle. Some people fall into the mistaken notion that bluntness and brusqueness are signs of superiority, whereas they are signs of a small and mean spirit. There is a gracious quality in speech that diffuses light and warmth like sunshine. Just the right thing said at the breakfrst table will often attune the soul to a joyous key for the whole day. If complaint were in every household to give place to compliment, what happy changes would result. Most of us are chary of a compliment, particularly to those we love the best, as though it were deadly poison, and would prove instantly fatal. In fact, instead of being dangerous, there is nothing that so lightens the burdens and dreary round of daily drudgery as appreciation charmingly expressed. Suppose you, sir, should tell your wife that she seems to be growing younger and prettier every day, it is not likely that the shock of surprise would kill her, but it is altogether likely that the words would be like a singing angel to her through the day. Dr. McCosh says it is characteristic of the Scotch men that, although they love their families deeply, yet they never praise or compliment, deeming this a species of hypocrisy. But there is no good reason why affection and praise should find no manifestation in the family circle, and every reason why they should have free play.

MAKE IT UNPOPULAR.

General Grant did a manly thing in refusing to drink wine everywhere and in all society. It is only a strong man who can keep his wine-glass upside down—in this case right side up too!—while all the grand people around him are sipping champagne and toasting each other in sparkling drinks. No one can tell how "far this little candle sheds its light." But no man can do for a fashion in society what a woman can.

When the time comes that the young man who now shares his time in your society and the saloon, who jokes about temperance in your presence, and takes a glass socially, now and then, is made to feel that these things cannot be if you are to be his companions at party, ride or church; that good society cannot tolerate these things in its members; in short, that this kind of man is unfashionable and unpopular, then alcohol will tremble on its throne, and the liquor-traffic will hide its cancerous face—Rose Elizabeth Cleveland.

HAVELOCK.

Havelock was converted during his first voyage to India, and began to work for God as soon as he arrived. His company became teetotalers, and were called "Havelock's Saints." One night during the mutiny, when the regiment was suddenly attacked, almost all the other men were unfit for service, but "Havelock's Saints" were ordered out, drove the enemy off, and delivered the camp. The post of adjutant falling vacant, Havelock was appointed to it, the Governor-General remarking that, if the good behavior of Havelock's company was due to his being a Christian, he wished all the officers were Christians.

THE ART OF SILENCE.

No art puts more healing and sweetness into the soul and society than the art of silence. Our worst regrets are for what we have said, rather than what we have left unsaid. Many a great success has been reaped by keeping still at the right time. Very few of our richest human relationships are preserved without wise and sacrificing silences. The difficulty lies in knowing and seizing the "right time." We all know the golden opportunity when it is past. How then shall we acquire this art without which one never becomes a graceful Christian? It is an art whose last and hardest lesson is best learned first. Be sure it is safest and wisest to keep still when you are under the greatest provocation to speak. It is then that silence is of the most value, and one such silence carries easily within itself the promise and power of all lesser ones.—Sunday School Times.

DANGER OF BECOMING "USED" TO THINGS.

It is not always well to become used to things. When first one sees an act of striking moral quality, good or bad, his heart is stirred to strong feelings of praise or blame. But it is too often the case that constant recurrence of the same act weakens or dampens our feeling about it. We get to take it as a matter of course, and to wonder rather that anybody should wonder at it. But God never comes to that fancied wisdom of indifference to which our worldly experience bring us. He cannot look upon sin without abhorrence, or upon faithful service without the "Well done!" His heart is fresh and young as a child's, and he has the child's warmth of feeling about both good and evil. Much as he must have seen of wrong and wrong-doing, he never 'gets used" to it, or takes it as a matter of course. Nor is good ever stale to him. He always has a fresh joy in it. Let us be followers of God in this, as dear children, growing up into the childlikenes of the Father. —Sunday School Times.

LET US STOP TO THINK.

Let us stop to think of the good bye kiss. Better miss a car than leave a heartache.

Let us stop to think of the children. We, too, were children once and loved to be remembered.

Let us stop to think of the aged. For us, too, the evening shadows will close at length and we shall, perchance, be left at desolate hearthstones. We shall need to be remembered then.

Let us stop to think of the stranger. We, too, have been alone, and have needed the touch of a kindly hand upon our lives, and many a life has gone out in the blackness of darkness for the lack of such a touch as any one of us might have given.

Let us stop to think of God and the future. At best the time is short and the end is near. And when it shall come, blessed will be he to whom the entrance upon another life will be but the realization of dear and familiar dreams, the consummation of a life-time of longings. Let us stop to think. If there be any virtue, if there be any praise, let us stop to think upon these things.—The Lookout.

Eli Perkins tells of an old lady with her face covered with wrinkles, turning from the mirror, saying, "Mirrors now-a-days are very faulty. They don't make such mirrors as they used to when I was young."

How often do people attribute all the faults committed to their neighbors. If they find themselves destitute of friends in the community it is all the other people's fault. If in church everybody seems to think differently, then every such person is ignorant or wilfully mean. If nobody enjoys their presence or extends to them the courtesies of love and friendship, the neighborhood is denounced as uncivilized.

The wrinkles are in the mirror, of course, and the fault with the glass. But friend, know this, that sweetness, loveliness and beauty compel appreciation. Be not wanting and others will not seem to be. —Selected.

It is a great thing to give a child a sunny background to its life; as sunny as possible, so that whatever may be the shadows of after life, it may ever have a corridor of memory, a picture gallery, into which it may turn for refreshment and stimulus. And how wonderful is that Providence which has ordained that time, which dims the brightest colors that ever left the painter's palette, only suffices to touch the lines of early life into more lasting and vivid beauty.—F. B. Meyer.

You are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year, meaning to clear them up some day—if you could only know and see and feel that the time is short, how it would break the spell! How you would go instantly and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do.—Phillips Brooks.

Alone with God is the keynote of a holy life; the secret of power; the garden of all useful, beautiful and fragrant growths. The school of graduation in this high and holy exercise is private prayer. Without private prayer grace flows in shallows and dries up. A vital connection with God, an ardent desire to know and love him more and more, and to serve him better is the basis of private prayer. Hypocrites have no closet. Formalism knows nothing, cares nothing about being alone with God. The worldly Christian has never learned, or has forgotten, the lesson of private prayer. Other motives may draw to public prayers. God only draws to the closet. The true Christian, like the seraphim, loves to veil his approaches to God. A wordly Christianity is always ostentatious; publicity and parade are its delight.—Selected.

INTRODUCTORY.

This lesson is chosen from the same Epistle as the last, which was written by the Apostle Paul at Ephesus to the church at Corinth. The former lesson was a practical application of the principle found here. This is the exposition of the nature of love here translated charity. All questions and controversy are left behind in this wonderful chapter. The great principle of Christian love as controlling and moulding the Christian life is presented. The first thing for all of us should be what every teacher should do and seek to have all scholars do, to memorize this chapter and repeat it frequently. Prof. Drummond in his address on this chapter at the Students' Conference at Northfield said: "How many of you will join me in reading this chapter once a week for the next three months? A man did that once and changed his whole life. Will you do it?" Prof. J. Stuart Blaikie, in his work on moral culture, advising all persons to make themselves very familiar with certain portions of the Bible as giving great power and culture. Among those passages which should be thus written on the heart, he places first on the list the Sermon on the Mount, and second the thirteenth chapter of first Corinthians. This chapter has been called The Psalm of Love. Learn by heart the whole chapter.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. Tongues. Refers to the gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost and connects this with the foregoing chapter. This shows that gifts were to be coveted and therefore might be expected to continue in the Church, but that great and valuable and important as these might be, charity or love was rather to be desired. Charity or love cannot be defined any more than life. Still it is essential and we can know more about it than many of us do. The theories of Prof. Drummond about science and the course of nature will disappear, but his spirit so like to that he has portrayed in "The Greatest Thing in the World" is rare and beautiful. Read, study, that little book. Sounding brass. Not a musical instrument, but a piece of brass that makes a clanging noise. Cymbal. Large, broad plates of brass.

Vs. 2. The gift of prophecy. To speak the truth of God even including the foretelling of future events. Understand mysteries. Intellectual insight into hard questions and the dark ways of Providence. All knowledge. Of affairs, science and philosophy called learning. All faith. Not saving faith, but the gift of faith to do mighty works. All these are gifts under chapter xii. And have not charity. As Saul was among the prophets, and Samson was of great physical power, and Jepthah a great general and had not love. So many professing Christians or those used of God be in our day. This is a woeful thought. Bestow all my goods....give my body. Which may be done for a selfish consideration or a personal advantage, or for vanity or fear, all to be seen of men; even a martyr may be stubborn or stoical, or think to win merit by death, and all without the love or Christ. In verses 4-7 we have what Prof. Drummond calls the spectrum of love in nine ingredients.

Vs. 4, Suffereth long. Slow to anger, patient with the provocations, faults or infirmities of othert. Is kind. Active in doing kind things. Envieth not. Afford says the word means "knows neither envy nor jealousy," at the good which others enjoy. Vaunteth not. Is not boastful, claiming superiority or seeking admiration and applause. Is not puffed up. With self-conceit and pride like a soap bubble, mostly wind.

Vs. 5. Unseemly. With impropriety. discourtesy or tyranny. Seeketh not her own. Selfish, looking out for self first of all, puts away the sins which grow out of selfishness such as ambition, licentiousness, dishonesty, oppression and lying. Easily provoked. Easily is left out of R. V., "provoked" is fretful, ill-tempered, easily aroused to anger. Thinketh no evil, R. V., taketh no account of evil. "Does not put it down in its books of accounts, is not suspicious, is not always looking for faults in others, not attributing evil motives to them." Peloubet's Notes.

Vs. 6. Iniquity, In-equity: unrighteousness. Is not glad when others sin, hating to report the faults of others. Rejoiceth in the truth. R. V., "with the truth" In sympathy with all that is true.

Vs. 7. Beareth all things. Of hardships, invasion of rights and reproaches. Believeth. Has a trustful disposition. Hopeth. Goes on working in hope against preju dices and difficulties. Endureth. Bearing, believing, hoping.

Vs. 8. Never faileth. Is eternal in its nature. Prophecies. The gift of prophecy (and the forecasts of men). Shall fail, R. V., "be done away." Tongues. The gift of tongues. Knowledge it shall vanish away. In the fuller knowledge of the eternal world.

Vs. 9. In part. A very small part.

Vs. 10. That which is perfect. The full revelation of love, the culmination of the Gospel, the harmony of all truth and right.

Vs. 11. A child. Used as illustration of the previous verse.

Vs. 12. Now. In this present life. We see in a glass. Through a mirror. Then. in the life to come. Face to face. Without the intervention of any distorting media or imperfect comparisons, but in their reality.

Vs. 13. As the Golden Text presents "these three, but the greatest of these is charity."

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. In its nature noblest.
2. It brings closest to God.
3. Without which faith and hope fail.
4. It is the most powerful for good, as a motive.
5. It is universal.
6. It is eternal.
7. It will expand and grow forever in blessedness and glory.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Aug. 22th, 1897.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST.

Text for the week:

If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His. Rom. 8 : 9.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Love of Prayer, Matt. 14 : 22-27.

Tuesday, Courage, Matt. 26 : 47-56.

Wednesday, Humility, Phil. 2 : 1-11.

Thursday, Earnestness, John 8 : 21-30.

Friday, Self-Sacrifice, John 12 : 27-33.

Saturday, Sympathy, John 8 : 1-11.

Sunday, Topic, Have we the Spirit of Christ? Rom. 8 : 1-18.

Suggestions:

Seek to have the same mind also which was in Christ Jesus.

If any of you lack wisdom let him ask of God, that giveth to all liberally and upbraideth not and it shall be given him. God is more willing to give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him than an earthly parent is to give gifts to his children.

Notes:

Have we the Spirit of Christ? It is a most momentous question—for if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, He is none of His. The Holy Spirit, proceeding from the Father and the Son, must dwell in us that we may have and possess those desires and aspirations after holiness and those dispositions and actuating motives, evidenced in our Saviour's life on earth. If in any measure we are thus spiritually minded to that extent we have the Spirit of Christ.

It was the meat and the drink of our Saviour to do the will of His Father in Heaven. Have we then this Spirit? He learned obedience by the things which He suffered—and in the context of the verse where we are enjoined to have the same mind which was in Christ Jesus, the special regard in which the injunction is to be observed is in patient humility to be obedient in whatever we may be called to do or to suffer.

The Spirit of Christ within us is evidenced as an actuating principle when we exhibit in kind, that love for God and man which our Saviour showed in the covenant He made to rescue man, and in the life of humiliation and death of misery He underwent in fulfilling that covenant.

The contrast is drawn very sharply between the being possessed of this Spirit and the being devoid of it. To be spiritually minded is life; to be carnally minded is death. To have the Spirit of Christ is to live in communion with God in trustful reliance upon Him; to enjoy peace of conscience, rejoice in the Holy Ghost and so to persevere unto the end; to have not this Spirit is to be afar from God, drifting like a rudderless ship upon a stormy sea of uncertainty and doubt, and to make shipwreck at last of all our dearest hopes.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES—JULY.

A visit paid by the Superintendent on the third Sunday in July to the churches of Graham and Burlington resulted in these liberal churches undertaking the support of Rev. John Grey for one year. Mr. Grey is laboring in North Wilkes and Alleghany counties and his work has been recently blessed. At a meeting held lately there were sixteen professions of faith in Christ.

Rev. P. C. Morton have received ten members into the new church at Chadbourne, and the people are preparing to build at once.

There are several who has applied for membership in the church at Spruce Pine, in Mitchell county, Rev. L. A. McLaurin, Evangelist.

Rev. C. W. Robinson at North Wilkesboro has received twelve members as the result of the visit of Rev. William Black, the general evangelist. The people contributed $13.50 for Synodical Missions.

After preaching Saturday and Sunday at Hamlet, Mr. Black secured a petition with twenty-nine names for the organization of a church and $350 for a church building. Fayetteville Presbytery has since appointed a commission to organize the church.

Mr. Black's next visit was at Glen Alpine, a little church served by Dr. Rose, of Morganton. Here there were fifty-one professions of faith, thirty-six persons indicating their preference for the Methodist Church and eleven for the Presbyterian church. Nine of these have already been received. Mr. Black is now at Wrightsville on a short vacation.

TURLINGTON.—Ira Thomas Turlington, the infant son of Prof. Ira T. and Mrs. Hortense Turlington, was born Sept. 22nd, 1896, and after a brief illness of ten days passed up to the "Home for little children," July 23rd, 1897. The Saviour lifted the dear little baby boy out of the mother's arms and took him into His own, where bright, smiling and contented he waits for the coming of mother, father and all whose hearts are sad over his departure.

HARTT.—Major M. N. Hartt died very suddenly at his home in Steele Creek township, N. C., April 28th, 1897, in the 75th year of his age. Major Hartt was twice married, leaving one son by his first marriage, and a kind affectionate wife and a little daughter by his second marriage to mourn the death of a kind, tender, affectionate husband and father. Major Hartt connected himself with Steele Creek Presbyterian church in early life, and lived a professed follower of the Lord Jesus Christ to the day of his death. He was liberal with his means in supporting the church and its benevolent objects, and a kind, obliging, good neighbor. What more need be said. A. G. N.

THOMAS.—In Fayetteville on 8th of July last, Mrs. Laura Thomas, a native of Charleston, S. C., and wife of Mr. J. M. Thomas, of Tar Heel, N. C. She was a consistent member of Beth Car church. Alas how desolate home is now to the afflicted husband. We all held her in the highest esteem, but our loss is her eternal gain.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Hickory is to have a system of water works.

The first sweet potatoes of the season were seen in the Southport market on the 2d.

The prospect is very bright for the rice crop. The only danger to be feared is storms during August; barring these the crop will be an unusually heavy one.

Recent rains in old Guilford county have wonderfully cheered the hearts of the people, and have insured one of the finest crops of corn for years; in fact every thing will be abundant, by the blessing of God except fruit, which is only a partial crop. Trade is better and likely to still increase when the large crops of vegetables and melons are sold.

DOMESTIC.

Work was begun in Atlanta last week on building investments amounting to about $1,000,000.

Kansas was visited by a sirocco last week. The thermometer stood at 110 degrees. The earth was baked and crops were destroyed.

Two hundred white girls stopped work at the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, Atlanta, on account of the employment of female negro help. The four hundred employees were in sympathy with the movement and the mills were forced to close.

A number of Iowa families have obtained a concession of 6,000 acres of land in Shelby county, Tenn., and will establish a colony. The tract is in the great dairy and fruit belt.

August 4th was Stenographers' day at Nashville. Several hundred were present. Addresses were made and a reception held at night in the Woman's Building at the Exposition.

The earliest record we have seen of cotton being received was at Savannah on the second, Charleston, Montgomery, Selma and Greenville, Ala., come in on the third and Louisville, Macon and Augusta on the fourth. The first mentioned brought 10 cents, the others varied from 8 to 9 cents.

The War department has invited bids for supplying the service with forgings for seventy-five sets of field guns and thirty sets of mortar guns, the cost of the two combined approximating $80,000. These guns are to be assembled at the Watervliet arsenal and as fast as delivered sent to posts at which they are most needed.

All records were broken by the receipts on the 3rd, when $3,750,000 in gold was deposited for coinage at the San Francisco mint. Of this amount, $750,000 was the property of the Alaska Commercial Company, and the balance was deposited by various miners and smelting companies. It is said that this far exceeds any one day's deposits at any one mint.

FOREIGN.

The Klondyke gold fields are on British territory.

Advice received at San Francisco by steamer state that in Szechuan, China, the famine is still at its height and people are dying from starvation by the hundreds every day.

Dr. John Freyer, professor of Oriental languages and literature in the California University, has arrived from China, where he has been in consultation with high government officials about the founding of a great college at Shanghai for the education of Chinese in Western art, sciences and literature.

He declined an offer to become the president of the institution, but consented to assist in the project. It is intended that the institution shall be an educational centre, where the favored youth of the empire may go to gain knowledge of Occidental civilization. There is now at Tientsin an academic institution of this kind, but it is planned to have that at Shanghai of a much higher standard, as the nucleus of the Shanghai University a normal training school is in operation, with thirty pupils, who are preparing to become instructors.

HABIT-MAKING AND HABIT BREAKING.

"How shall I a habit break?"
As you did that habit make,
As you gathered, you must lose:
As you yielded, now refuse.
Thread by thread the strands we twist
Till they bind us, neck and wrist;
Thread by thread the patient hand
Must untwine, ere free we stand;
As we builded, stone by stone,
We must toil, unhelped, alone,
Till the wall is overthrown.

But remember, as we try,
Lighter every test goes by;
Wading in, the stream grows deep
Toward the center's downward sweep;
Backward turn, each step ashore
Shallower is than that before.

Ah, the precious years we waste
Levelling what we raised in haste;
Doing what must be undone
Ere content or love be won!
First, across the gulf we cast
Kite-borne threads, till lines are passed,
And habit builds the bridge at last.

JEAN INGELOW.

Jean Ingelow, whose death occurred July 29th, was born at Boston, Lincolnshire, England, about 1830. Her first volume of poems was published in 1863, two years after Mrs. Browning's death and one year after Christina G. Rossetti had won recognition with her "Goblin Market."

Miss Ingelow's work at once gained great and deserved popularity. The dramatic quality of "The High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire (1571)," and "Songs of Seven," made them, immediately, the spoil of the elocutionist. In "Brothers and a Sermon," her striking characteristics of clear, strong, simple English, the power to tell a story, and well balanced love to God and man are as plainly illustrated as in any of her poems.

There was a noble group of women writers to do honor to English literature in the earlier decades of this half century. The last of the Bronte sisters died in 1855; Mrs. Browning, in 1861; Adelaide Anne Procter passed in 1864; Mrs. Gaskill, whose "Cranford" is a classic, in 1865; Harriet Martineau lingered till 1876; George Eliot died far too soon, in 1880; the beloved Miss Mulock (Mrs. Craik) in 1887; Mary Howitt reached a good old age and died in 1888; Christian Georgina Rossetti, singer and saint, died in 1895; we are still telling our grief for Mrs. Oliphant, and now the last of the goodly company has gone.

From the minor singers who are left, Mrs. Darmestetter, Katharine Tynan Hinkson, Alice Meynell, Dora Sigerson, Rosamund Marriott Watson, though their songs are musical enough, we shall hark long and in vain to hear one such strong note of love to God and man as thrilled in every song of Jean Ingelow, the last of the women poets of Victoria's reign.—Independent.

One of the best-known charity workers in the country, Miss Rosalie Butler, died a few days ago at Stockbridge, Mass. She was especially identified with Bellevue Hospital and the charitable institutions of this city on Blackwell's Island, and her influence can be traced for the past twenty-five years in almost every reform that has taken place in those institutions. In her will she left $50,000 to the State Charities Aid Association.—Independent.

Crab Salad.—For crab salad put the crabs in warm water, add a tablespoonful of salt, place the kettle over a brisk fire and boil twenty minutes; take out to cool; then pick the meat from the shell and mix with the mayonaise. To serve, arrange your lettuce prettily on the dish, place the mixture inside the garnishing, and put a few slices of lemon on top. If preferred, you can replace the mixture in the shells and garnish with lemon and cresses —New York Tribune.

And though mine arms should conquer twenty worlds, there's a lean fellow beats all conquerors—Thomas Dekker.

Sometimes a burglar only succeeds in damaging the lock of a safe so that the combination won't work. Next morning the bank officers can't get at their own money. There may be millions in the safe but if their credit depended on getting at it in a hurry they would be bankrupt, simply because the combination won't work.

A sick man is in very much the same fix about getting at the nourishment he needs to keep him alive. There is plenty of good food at hand, but his digestive organism is out of order; the nutritive "combination" of his system won't work. He can't possibly get at the nourishment contained in the food. He takes it into his stomach, but it does him no good. It isn't made into good blood. He is just as badly off as if the food was locked up where he couldn't touch it. He gets no strength or health out of it.

All these mal-nutritive conditions have a perfect and scientific remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the nutritive "combination" of the system into perfect working order. It gives the digestive and blood-making organs power to make pure, red, healthy blood, and pour it into the circulation abundantly and rapidly.

It drives out all bilious poisons and scrofulous germs, cures indigestion, liver complaint, nervousness and neuralgia, and builds up solid flesh, active power and nerve force.

Mrs. Rebecca F. Gardner, of Grafton, York Co., Va., writes: "I was so sick with dyspepsia that I could not eat anything for over four months. I had to starve myself, as nothing would stay on my stomach. I was so badly off I could not eat even a cracker. I thought I was going to die. I weighed only 86 pounds. I tried almost everything, and nothing did me any good, until I took two bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I am now as well as I ever was, and weigh 125 pounds."

A LITTLE SERMON.

Never a day is lost, dear,
If at night you can truly say
You've done one kindly deed, dear,
Or smoothed some rugged way.

Never a day is dark, dear,
Where the sunshine of home may fall,
And where the sweet home voices
May answer you when you call.

Never a day is sad, dear,
If it brings, at set of sun,
A kiss from mother's lips, dear,
And a thought of work well done.

THE FAIRY LIGHT-HOUSE LAMP.

It all happened after Esther and Marjorie's mother died and pretty Aunt Delicia left her beloved kindergarten in the city to come and keep the little brown house at the cross-roads for them all. This was the way it began.

"The children trouble me terribly, Sam, by running away," the young aunt sighed to her brother. "Sometimes they take one cross-road, sometimes another, and I must drop my work and hunt them up without the first idea which way they've gone. To-day I'd been looking for them a long time when the light-house keeper came bringing them home. They had walked all the way to the light, and it's three miles."

Mr. Merriam frowned wearily; he was ill and worried about business troubles.

"Whip them Delicia, whip them," he said. "I give you full permission and they need it bad enough. Their poor mother hadn't the health and I never had the time to attend to them."

But Aunt Delicia's pretty dimples suddenly disappeared and she looked very serious.

"I don't believe in whipping children, Sam, if they can be controlled by any other means; and I think I know of a way to keep Esther and Majorie contentedly at home. I want a sand garden for them to play in Sam. Nothing in the world has such charms for a child as plenty of good, clean sand."

"One of your new fangled notions from the city, I suppose." Mr. Merriam answered irritably. "I tell you, put the strap on them, good and hard, too. That's the way to bring up children. Besides, there's no sand nearer than the beach and how is it going to be fetched from there, I'd line to know? Rob and Arthur are needed every minute on place to help Wheeler, now I'm so poorly."

But all the same the next day the two boys had orders from their father to make a sand garden such as Aunt Delicia wanted. Opposite the gaunt staring ribs of an ancient wreck, Arthur stopped the buckboard and reluctantly jumped off.

"What nonsensical notions Aunt Delish has, anyway! I know father thinks so, too. As for me, I don't relish being bossed around by a curly headed girl," he grumbled as he lifted down the barrel they had brought for the sand. "Why, Rob, where's the shovel? Didn't you put in the barrel?"

"I thought you did," his brother answered.

"What a nuisance! we can't go way back for it now, and there's no one near to borrow of," Arthur went on grumbling.

"Perhaps we can scoop it up with the barrel," Rob suggested. "The sand is softer under water. Let's wade out and try it."

"Suppose we should scoop up some of Captain Kidd's treasure," Arthur laughed, as they drove the barrel into the sand. "There, it's working all right. Keep her going. Now, steady!"

"That old skeleton over there," said Rob, pointing over to the wreck, "probably carried plenty of gold and jewels. They say she was an East Indiaman."

But Arthur interrupted. "I say, Bob, there's an excursion steamer coming to the Marine Exposition. Let's ride over for a while too. We can leave the barrel and slip down here this evening for it."

And for many days Aunt Delicia's sand garden remained just there on the beach. Rob and Arthur forgot all about it. Aunt Delicia said no more, but one evening after her long, hard day's work of cooking, cleaning, and nursing her sick brother she took a wheelbarrow, traversed the three miles to the shore and brought back the barrel of sand. Rob and Arthur were somewhat ashamed next day, when they saw too little, yellow heads bobbing about busily behind a sand-heap.

Esther and Majorie were very happy with their little shovels and paddles and a pail of water to moisten the sand. Aunt Delicia took pains, when she could spare the time from her many household tasks, to show the little ones how to build houses and towers, how to construct canals with bridges over them and "really truly" water in them.

But soon dark days came upon the little brown house at the cross-roads. Mr. Merriam was obliged to go into bankruptcy and then became seriously ill from overwork and worry. Esther and Marjorie had played alone and unheeded in their sand garden a great many days, when they caught a glimpse of Aunt Delicia's curly head at a window one afternoon.

"Tum, see our yite-house, p'ease Auntie Deyicious," a little voice called, and, as Mr. Merriam was now much better, "Auntie Deyicious" stepped out into the sand garden with an easy mind.

The children showed her with pride a black, muddy-looking pool of water, upon which floated a tiny boat, made of a green pea-pod with a satiny, white poppy leaf for a sail. There was a lone sailor on board, an inch-long china doll of Esther's. A tower of wet sand overlooked this interesting sheet of water and a square hole was cunningly cut through the tower for a window. The little boat started on a voyage across the pool, Marjorie's breath serving as the wind which began to grow boisterous and blow the tiny bark hither thither.

Little Esther looked at the sky gravely "I dess der's doin' to be a 'torm" she said. "I mus' yite the yamp in my yite-house."

In the window of the sand tower, the baby hand set what surely must be a fairy lamp, for it cast beautiful magic rays of red, green and violet over the lilliputian sea. By its rainbow light, the lone sailor and his gay little shallop finished their voyage safely.

"That's a beautiful game, dears," said Aunt Delicia with a smile, as she picked up the fairy light-house lamp and looked at it. But suddenlp she gave a little scream of amazement.

"Why, children, wherever in the world did you get this stone?"

"Tisn t 'tone; it's Etser's yite-house yamp," pouted the baby.

"We found it in the sand, Auntie," Marjorie explained. "See here are some more lovely stones. Isn't this a pretty pink shell, Auntie?"

"Yes; but, my dear child, this—this is a ———. But come in and we'll show it to papa."

Mr. Merriam turned the fairy light-house lamp over and over in his hand, as he lay on his sick bed.

"You are right, Delicia," he said. It is a diamond, and I am sure, very valuable. "Why, it is as large as a gooseberry and exquisitely cut."

It was true. The children's beautiful toy was sold and brought a wonderful sum of money to the little brown house at the cross roads. With it Mr. Merriam was enabled to satisfy his creditors in full and start anew in his business. As for Esther and Marjorie, they were reconciled to the loss of the fairy light-house lamp when Aunt Delicia bought them a tiny lantern just like a "really-truly," one which shone bravely in the sand tower and lighted the lone sailor on his perilous voyage as satisfactorily as the big diamond had done.

But if there were two sorry, regretful boys in the world, they were Rob and Arthur.

"I wish we hadn't been so mean to Aunt Delicia about the sand," said Rob to his brother one day as the two boys were working together in the garden. "Just see what good luck it has brought us."

"I wish so, too," Arthur answered. "I'd ask her to get pa to give us a bicycle with some of the new money, but I can't look her in the eye and ask her when we let her lug that precious sand garden diamond and all, three miles on a wheel-barrow." —Mary A. Winton, in Sabbath-School Visitor.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—As I have not written to your most excellent paper in sometime, I will give you a small outline of my trip to Richmond, Va. Papa and myself spent last week in that city. Papa carried me on three battlefields that he fought on during the war. We visited Lake Side Park, the city reservoirs, which covers twenty-two acres and is 22 x 12 feet deep, Hollywood Cemetery and the Jefferson Hotel. We went to the Jefferson Roof Garden entertainment, also to Seven Pines, twelve miles on the electric cars and to Chimborazo Park. I saw Lee's Hill's and Washington's monuments. We went on top of the capital and it was so nice to look over the city and see so many points of interest too numerous to mention. I will close for fear of the waste basket.

our Mission and the trader, and the almost entire lack of any friction whatever. Rum is a prohibited article here, and so we are spared many of the scenes of the coast. M. Fritz and M. Pilette are now at the S. A. B.; M. Boudour at the S. A. P. V., and Herr Vreizen at the Dutch House. We have rare visits from Luluaburg, where the nearest State Station, and Roman Catholic Mission are situated, about a hundred miles further up the Lulua.

Then here is the "Station" of the "American Presbyterian Congo Mission," twenty minutes from the river Lulua on the north bank, up a hill with a climb of nearly two hundred feet and nearly overlooking the valley. The land is less inclined than lower down, and becomes more and more level behind the place. The Dutch House lands adjoin below, and the "suburbs" of the Bakete village of Bena Kasenga are at the rear. It was chiefly the contiguity of this village which determined the immediate location of the Station. As I arrived in the dry season, I passed through this and several other villages on the land route before arriving at the Station. Mr. Lapsley's first servant, Ngome, from the Lower Congo, has a large and flourishing village between the Mission and Kasenga, and is quite a chief and great trader. The Zappo Zaps are below us toward the Lulua with immense corn fields. There are, I suppose 4,000 people in half an hour's walk here, all told, and of very many different tribes. I believe this is really the best country in Africa north of the Transvaal. Time will soon show.

From the point of view of scenery and landscape the Mission is grandly located. Many have been heard to declare it the most nobly commanding in its prospect in the whole Congo. The clearing is located immediately where the high plateau on the north bank of the Lulua begins to descend to the river; and tho' the houses themselves are located a little too far down the hill to take full advantage of the view, still this is easily remedied when the next must be built. Many a morning have I seen the dense fog lifted up from the river, where it hangs heavily all night, and rolled away over the plateau as the sun's rays begin to gladden the forest gloom. It is certainly true that these forests are terrific; nothing exaggerated in Stanley's accounts if those he traversed are like these. Impenetrable they certainly are save where a native path runs narrowly through them.

Appendix on arrival of steamer.—This is such a fine place and such a fine people that you all just MUST send us more helpers, especially a physician. The church is overflowing with members.

THINGS USEFUL.

When purchasing a pineapple select one with its green, spiky leaves in perfect condition; cut this top from the fruit and plant it in a pot of earth. It will grow and be a desirable plant, looking well among other green plants in the winter season.

Try ham fixed this way once and see if you do not like it: Slice the ham for broiling and put it to soak over night in buttermilk, or if you have no buttermilk sweet milk is a fair substitute. Lift out of the milk bath and rinse in cold water, and then wipe dry on a clean towel. Broil or fry as usual.

Tomato Chutney. — Take four pounds of ripe tomatoes, a pound of apples, an ounce of crushed mustard seed, half an ounce of grated ginger-root, half a dozen small white onions, four ounces of salt, half a small teaspoonful of cayenne, a pound of brown sugar, and a pint and a half of strong vinegar. Chop the tomatoes and put in a preserve-kettle with the apples sliced, the onions cut up and the vinegar; set over the fire; when hot add the sugar and other ingredients. Let the whole boil slowly until soft. Take from the fire, rub through a wire sieve and set aside to cool. Stir daily for three or four days. Put in wide-neck bottles and seal. This is an excellent and economical sauce for meats, fish and entrees.

SUMMER RAIN.

BY REV. W. E. BOIES.

From the gray and silent sky,
Softly as a lullaby
Falleth now the gentle rain,
On the roof in cadence low,
On the pavement hushed below;
And when morning comes again
Tempered is the torrid heat,
Pulses throb with firmer beat,
Smileth the parched mead and plain.

Not alone majestic trees
Hardly stirring in the breeze,
Yield unto the rain's caress,
But the tiny blades of green,
And the blooms of meekest mien
Radiant are with thankfulness,
Gemmed with jewels by the rain,
When the sunlight beams again
With a strange new tenderness.

Anon the heavens darken,
The bravest crouching harken
While growls o'erhead the thunder,
Till threatening to sunder
The bosom of the sky!

With flash and crash the shower
Beats down the fragile bower,
And rain-drops thick and thicker
To hail-stones turn, and quicker
Whirls the mighty wind!

Summer rain may take the form
Of mild shower or ruthless storm;
Yet when clouds have all rolled by,
There is left the same blue sky
With its sun, and then the stars!

Editors find it hard to please everybody. What some readers object to and dislike, others approve and enjoy. Some stop the paper for the very article which others commend. Some ask less of the very thing that others solicit more of. Editors study variety of matter, and endeavor to meet the needs of all classes. They may err in judgment, but their critics should remember that what they think might be omitted is just what other readers like best and want more of. Allowance, hence, should be made for differing tastes and judgments.—The Presbyterian.

REV. R. C. REED, D. D.

Dr. Reed is now in the prime of a vigorous life at forty-six years of age, having been born in Hamilton county, Tenn., Jan. 24th, 1851. The son of a Presbyterian minister, with his home in the country and in the mountains, his early environment was about as favorable as the world affords for the development of a sturdy manhood. And among his characteristics this deserves to be mentioned first of all. He is a man whom friends, or foes either if he should have any, always know where to find, and on whom they can always count. He graduated at King College in 1873, and at Union Theological Seminary, Va., in 1876; was licensed in May of the latter year by Knoxville Presbytery and ordained in September by the Presbytery of Memphis. His first pastoral charge was at Smithville (Charlotte C. H.) Va., where, although "fresh from the Seminary," he was found able to satisfy a congregation accustomed to such intellectual fabulum as had been previously furnished them by men like Dr. Henry C. Alexander and Dr. Wm. R. Atkinson. His next charge was at Franklin, Tennesseee, where he remained three years, during which time a handsome church building was erected and the church took on the new life which continues to characterize it to the present day. In 1891 he was called to the Second church, of Charlotte, N. C., and remained there about two years, during which time another new church edifice was built, at a cost of over $30,000, and paid for, without in any way affecting the large benevolent contributions for which that church is celebrated. In 1893 he came to the Woodland St. church, Nashville, Tenn., of which he is still the beloved and efficient pastor. During this pastorate a considerable church debt has been lifted, also without drawing any funds for that purpose from the church's benevolent contributions. This record shows that Dr. Reed possesses that most valuable of all ministerial gifts, the gift of getting people to do things. His style of preaching is not imaginative and pictorial, but clear, elegant and forceful. A sample of it is found in the little book recently published, entitled "The Gospel according to John Calvin," in which the doctrines of our Church are stated with a strength, clearness and felicity equal to anything to be found in sermonic literature on that subject. His warm sympathies and great geniality qualify him in a pre-eminent degree for pastoral work, and have gained for him everywhere that he has lived and worked a wide circle of deeply attached friends. Under the non de plume of "Clark," and also over his own name, he has become known throughout the Church as one of the most, if not the most gifted of the younger generation of writers in our Church. In 1890 he received the inevitable D. D., from his own Alma Mater, King College, being however the first alumnus ever so honored by that conservative institution. For several years he has been a most useful member of the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions, of which he has recently been made chairman. Not the least of the things to be admired in the subject of this sketch is his evident unconsciousness that the gifts with which he is endowed are in in any way remarkable. As for his faults and imperfections, of which he no doubt possesses the usual share, the writer is thankful to say that, during the long time that he has known him intimately, his affection for him has grown so much that he has become blind to them.

Every to-morrow has two handles; we can take hold of it by the handle of anxiety, or the handle of faith.—Anon.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people, and the old are hungrier for love than for bread, and the oil of joy is very cheap, and if you can help the poor on with a garment of praise, it will be better for them than blankets. —Professor Drummond.

* * *

You picture to yourself the beauty of bravery and steadfastness. And then some little wretched, disagreeable duty comes which is your martyrdom, the lamp for your oil; and, if you do not do it, your oil is spilled.—Phillips Brooks.

* * *

"My grace is sufficient for thee." However weak, through sin or through sorrow, we may be, we have God's precious promise that His grace will be sufficient for us. Even then if we seem entering death's dark valley, that grace can either bring us back to life, or sustain us through the shadows, or into the sunshine of Jesus' presence.—Sunshine.

* * *

There is nothing more hardening to the sensibilities than the failure to translate pity into action. Christ's pity was practical. We are told that he had compassion on the hungry multitude, and the immediate result of it was how many loaves had he. This is finely illustrative of the way in which Christ's whole nature moved at once and in unison.—Rev. Dr. George D. Baker.

* * *

The whole Church is a body, with corporate life. No one member can say to another, "I have no need of you." The standard of duty for one is the standard for all; "Do all to the glory of God." Ask yourself, if every member of my church does as I do, what would be the result? And, can I claim exemptions which it would be ruinous to the Church if all claimed? Would I be willing to have my church-bell silent while others call to God's house Sunday evenings? And if I may stay at home and spend the hour of evening worship in social converse, may not every member in the church claim the same so-called privilege? Does not my action practically say, Shut the church's door and put out the light?—Westminster Bulletin.

NORTHFIELD NOTES.

If there be any doubt as to the propriety of a pastor taking a vacation, two things in my case will do much to remove that doubt. The first is that the vacation is spent at the annual conference of Christian workers and learners to get the help and inspiration which God gives here, that the return to pastoral work may be to better service and larger usefulness. The second serves as excuse and adds greatly to the pleasure of the journeying and resting. It is that two of my dear elders are my companions. As business men they needed change and rest. As earnest Christian men they did not wish that change to be to self-indulgence, but for some advantage. So they take their physical rest with me where they may find rest for their souls. They must judge and they will take occasion to say in their own places and ways what advantages or disadvantages business men find in coming to Northfield to rest for a few days.

Our journey to this place included a night on the Chesapeake Bay, by the "Old Bay Line" boat Alabama, a delightful and elegant steamer of the Baltimore Steam Packet Company, which is selling tickets from Norfolk to Baltimore at one dollar and a half for the round trip, good for ten days or one dollar each way regular fare. The rooms for two persons or three will cost from one to three dollars as a traveller may choose. We also spent a night on Long Island Sound going from New York to Boston by the Fall River Line. The journey was in the palatial Steamer Puritan, of the line which is famous for its magnificent boats and elegant service at moderate cost. New York and Boston were familiar to me as was New York to my brethren. But we did Boston for a day with much pleasure. One item was a ride in the harbor and down the bay to Nantasket Beach, in a boat that goes every hour. That harbor is of special interest as my father was a prisoner in Fort Warren with those who surrendered as he did at the fall of Fort Donelson.

The Conference had been in progress a week when we arrived. But we fell in line and soon had our places in the earnest throng of worshipers. There we found many men from our Southland. Our Dr. Campbell is here from Asheville. Dr. Leyburn, of New Berne writes me that he will be here this week. These and others assure us that this Conference has their hearts and it is certainly reaching richly out to bless all who are here. The two chief speakers for this year are Rev. Dr. MacGregor and Rev. Campbell Morgan of London, lately of Birmingham, England. The impressions they are making are quite like those made by Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe of London, England, and Rev. Andrew Murray of South Africa in 1895.

The theme uppermost and foremost in these conference meetings is that of complete consecration and full surrender to Jesus as Lord.

At a large meeting of Christian Endeavorers, there were delegates from all parts of our own land and from South America, Europe and Australia. The President of the union of all Australia, Rev. Dr. Meade of South Australia, made an address full of cheer and helpfulness. Rev. Mr. Morgan, of London, presided. There were sentence prayers, testimonies and blessed fellowship. The dangers that threaten this great Christian Endeavor movement were faithfully stated and faithfully met. The objections to the pledge were kindly considered. Let me say in passing that I sat between the pastor of the Church of the Covenant, of Washington City, and a friend, a pastor of Baltimore and our expressed pleasure in one item was this: That Dr. Meade had a beautiful face as he spoke from age and experience of what he knew of the wonderful work of Christian Endeavor in Australia and India, and of its marvelous adaptation to converts from heathenism. We had greetings from Europe, Asia, Africa and South America to this meeting of Christian Endeavorers at Northfield. There are dangers. We must meet them in the name of the Lord, and go forward "for Christ and for the Church."

A. D. M.

DEAR BROTHER:—I see in a late issue of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN you have it copied from the Missionary that Mr. Lindley left his pastorate of Charlotte First church to go to Africa. This must be a mistake as I find in the book of sessional records of Rocky River church the following: "In the fall of 1834, Mr. Lindley having felt it to be his duty to become a foreign missionary took leave of a united and affectionate congregation and departed (with Dr. Wilson a member of his church) to commence a new mission station in southeast Africa." Was he not pastor of Rocky River church? I was born and raised in old Rocky River and this has always been my understanding since I can remember hearing Mr. Lindley spoken of.

Yours cordially,
R. C. MORRISON,
Mebane, N. C.

WE HAVE nothing to say against the general principle of receiving ministers from other churches into ours. In fact some of these ministers are among the very best in our communion, but it is not always thus. Occasionally our Presbyteries have good cause to deplore remissness in admitting ministers coming in in the way indicated. The occasions are frequent enough to make large caution proper. This note is inspired by the fact that the Congretional Church lately dismissed from its membership, with a letter of recommendation to any Presbyterian church to which he might apply, a minister who had been acquitted of an offence, not as being innocent but as being insane. This emphasizes greatly the importance of being guarded in the matter of receiving ministers coming to us from any other church.

EXTRACT FROM "Our Washington Letter:

If new proof were needed of the necessity for the reforms in the practice of patent attorneys which Commissioner Butterworth is working to bring about, it has been abundantly furnished by the testimony of Patent office officials in the hearings on the disbarment charges against John Wedderburn & Co., showing the manner in which money has been obtained from poor men and women who were deluded into the belief that they had made valuable inventions when they had in reality not made inventions at all. It has been put in evidence that the firm of Wedderburn & Co., filed during the last two years more than 3,700 applications (presumably getting fee advance for them all) of which more than 1,800 were rejected by the Patent Office because they contained nothing that was patentable, and the patentable devices in at least three-fourths of the remainder were not of sufficient value to repay the inventor for the cost of the patent. Yet attempts were made by this firm by means of cunningly worded letters and circulars to persuade every one of these applicants to pay more money to apply for foreign patents, and to advertise for sale worthless devices which could not be patented in the United States or elsewhere. It is not surprising that Commissioner Butterworth should be so highly commended for the new rules he has made regulating, as far as his authority extends, the practice before the Patent Office.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

San Francisco, Aug. 2d.

Our Foreign Mission office has long had occasion to recognize the courtesy of the Union Pacific authorities, and especially of their Agent at St. Louis, Mr. J. F. Aglar, whose painstaking attention to the minutiae of all that concerns the comfort and convenience of our missionaries en route, makes their journey across the continent as easy as it can be made.

But it is at best a wearisome journey. Leaving St. Louis at 8 p. m., Tuesday, we traveled continuously, except for a ten hours detention at Carson, Nevada, on account of a wrecked freight ahead of us, till 8 p. m., Saturday when we reached San Francisco.

Every Easterner who can should make this journey once; but having made it once, if I am permitted to get safely home once more, I think I shall be satisfied.

The plains of Kansas and Colorado belong to the wonders of nature. Manifestly the whole of them were once sea bottom. But the Hand that reared the Rockies gave them also a lift, and the waters receded and the "dry land" appeared; that part of it that is in Kansas being now covered with a luxurious growth of corn and dotted with the homes of men.

But, going westward, the elevation and the dryness increase, and vegetation is confined to the buffalo grass which there are now no buffaloes to enjoy. After leaving Colorado even this grass fails our weary eyes. Clear across Wyoming, northern Utah and Nevada there is nothing but a scrubby growth of sage, good grazing for sheep, we are told, in winter, but too dry even for a goat in summer. There are occasionally mountains and many hills but neither on mountain, hill nor plain is there a living tree, and sometimes for hours of travel not a patch of cultivated ground, even so much as a truck garden.

Villages are passed showing signs of age, with not a shade tree in sight An occasional galloping cow-boy, a few sheep or cattle at long intervals, a prowling coyote now and then, serve only to intensify the desolation.

Judging by appearances one would say that this portion of our continent is geologically ancient and has long ago had its day. It is a premonition of the condition the evolutionists tell us the whole earth will be in some day, when the process of radiation has cooled it down and dried it out

Spiritually, it is a type of heathendom. A few patches of irrigated meadow show that water would make it all blossom as the rose, if only water could be obtained. The desert of heathendom will thus blossom, because in the River of Life there is abundance to water the whole of it, and the word of promise declares it shall be watered.

Our anticipated views as we crossed the Sierra Nevadas proved a tantalizing disappointment, by reason of forty miles of snow sheds that walled us in.

The soil and vegetation of the part of California traversed by our route has at this season, much the color of burnt umber. It is said to be green from November to June. Fruit orchards abound, but the culture is only profitable for those who can produce car load lots. Here, as everywhere, the small dealer is going to the wall.

Yesterday was a lovely Sabbath, and our party worshipped at the Calvary Presbyterian church. There was a good strong, plain Gospel sermon by the pastor, Dr. Hemphill, followed by a pleasant communion service. Wednesday evening we are engaged to conduct his monthly concert service and tell about our Southern Presbyterian missions.

Thursday morning we board the "China," and then, 6,000 miles, 21 days, across the great sea to Shanghai. Dr. Moore and Dr. Ingold will be separated by that distance from all they have heretofore known as home; Mrs. DuBose, from the two children she leaves behind to be educated; Mr. and Mrs. Bear from friends and kindred seen again after nine years of separation. And yet they all seem bright and happy. The only member of the party who seems blue at the thought of going is the one who hopes to return in a few months.

My association and correspondence with our missionaries for four years has convinced me that they are the happiest people in the world. And so the Scripture is fulfilled which says "He that loseth his life for Christ's sake shall find it"—that is, shall find a fuller, higher, happier one. Old Dr. Lindley said when he went to Africa it seemed to him that the further he got from home and friends the nearer he got to God. It is indeed a blessed work, in which the opportunity is given us all to share; and blessed will be that Christian and that Church that does not falter and grow weary in it.

AFTER PAPER is up we receive through Miss Claude L. Grier the very sad intelligence of the death on Sunday, 25th ult., of Miss Pauline Dubose Little, the fair young wife of Rev. Lacy L. Little. She died at Karuisawa, Japan, a mountain village where they were summering. She was ill only twenty-four hours and died of acute Bright disease. She was buried in Yokohoma. Dr. Dubose was expected in course of a week and Mrs. Dubose, the mother, had not yet left this country, but is now on the ocean and destined to receive the sad tidings on her arrival in Japan. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved. Will publish Miss Grier's note next week.

NEWS FROM CONGO MISSION, AFRICA.

Near Luebo, May 7th, '97.

We are steaming cautiously up the Lulua now, hoping to reach Luebo, though the river is very low. If we should not be able to come up, we shall have to return to the mouth and go overland ten days' journey. But I am specially anxious to reach Luebo on Phipps' account. He has had a malignant fever for ten days, with other complications. He is now somewat better, but is confined to bed, and of course unable to take a foot journey, even in a hammock. I drop you this hasty card, because there will be no time for writing after reaching Luebo. The boat will remain there only a little while. The trip otherwise, from Stanley Pool has been uneventful, though I have had two small fevers, due perhaps to exposure in waiting on Phipps.

Shall add a word later.

Yours in Christ,
W. M. Morrison.

[P. S.] Luebo! Hallelujah!! All well and all here. They report the work in most flourishing condition —500 at church last Sunday. Oh! for a full demonstration of the Spirit's power. Am delighted with the surroundings, though I have seen the place only by twilight. We arrived late yesterday afternoon. Letter here from Dr. Snyder, dated Dec. 31st. I am praying that fresh reinforcements may come with him. Our possibilities are wonderful. Praises to the Lord for bringing me here in peace and safety!

Messrs. Morrison and Phipps arrived at Luebo by State Steamer Archduchesse Stephanie to day, May 8th, '97. We are all well, but Phipps had fever. They were detained nearly three months at Stanley Pool. Morrison looks pale, but I believe is built for Africa. I have an invitation from the new Lukenga and am going over next week to put a station there. It won't cost more than for the same two missionaries to stay here. The difference in local prices more than pays transport

All my difficulty with the language is over. I can go anywhere now alone for 800 miles and be understood at once. * * * The Mission is in a splendid condition every way. S. P. Verner.

Luebo, May 8th, 1897.

I WILL STRENGTHEN THEE; YES, I WILL HELP THEE.

Isa. xli. 10.

Who will come with me to the King, to lay at His feet a petition for the fulfilment of this Word of His grace upon which He has caused us to hope? We shall be a company of Feeble-minds, and Much-afraids, and Fearings, and Ready-to-Halts, and we may make but a sorry appearance in His courts; but our necessities admit of no delay, and this King is so gracious, and hath so much love and pity for weak and needy ones, that He is sure to grant us, not an audience merely, but according to the desire of our heart. My own condition is such that I must have His help, or faint, and utterly fail, and I know there are many in like stress of need who will seek the King's face with me.

Blessed be His name, we may come into His presence with holy boldness and confidence, bringing with us the warrant of our faith in His own precious promise, fairly and legibly written on the pages of His Word, without blot or erasure, and with no "ifs" and "buts" to mar its sublime simplicity: "I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee." Does He not love to be trusted? Does He not honor faith? Can one word of His good promise fail, or shall not the thing which He saith come to pass?

And, as to our present need of succor, some of us can say, with tear-filled eyes, "O Lord, if weakness be a plea for Thy promised strength, then are we truly fit objects of Thy mercy, for we are at the lowest ebb of helplessness, we have scarcely strength enough left to feel that we are feeble, we are 'brought into the dust of death.'" God has "weakened our strength in the way," to teach us our dependence upon Himself; He has humbled us, that He may lift us up; He has shown us our own nothingness that He may be our all in all.

Most of us have needed this discipline of complete failure in ourselves to convince us that our strength is in God alone. He has had to humble us, and to prove us, to know what is in our heart; and alas! with some of us, it has taken as long a time to do this as in the days of old, when the Lord's people wandered in the wilderness for forty years before they learned the lesson. Ah! what trouble our God takes with us! What ungrateful, perverse, rebellious children we have been! He has had to empty us of so much that is abominable in His sight, our pride, our self-sufficiency, our carnal security, our own righteousness, before He could fill us with His Spirit, and take pleasure in us, that it is no wonder the process has been a painful one, and cost us many a cry and groan. We have been cast headlong from the heights of our pride and self-exaltation, and then, as we lay bruised and bleeding on the ground of self abasement, crushed under a sense of our own utter weakness, the Lord has drawn near, and given this gracious assurance, "I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee." "I, the Lord thy God, will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not."—Mrs. C. H. Spurgeon, in Sword and Trowel.

PUNCTUALITY AT CHURCH.

Good behavior in church is just as important as good behavior anywhere else. And part of it begins at the very beginning, in being in church a little while before the service commences. In our home in my childhood, at family worship, my father had a way, which I remember as pleasantly in contrast with the hurrying methods of to day, of starting everything with a margin, so that nobody could be late. He insisted that the young people of the house should always come to prayers if they were well; and he himself, Bible in hand, would be seated five minutes before the appointed time, waiting for us all to come. I can see him now, across the years, his gray hair brushed back from his serene face, his eyes lighted with a rare inner smile, his look expressing the greatest patience.

"I like to compose my mind," he would say, "before I enter the presence of the King."

I can hear him softly crooning his favorite hymn, if I lean back in my chair and listen, hear it as if the voice which sang those stanzas had not been for many long years singing with the Redeemer above:

How happy are thy,
Who the Saviour obey,
And have laid up their treasure above
Oh, what tongue can express
The sweet comfort and peace
Of a soul in its earliest love.

One of the unwritten laws always observed in this good man's home, was that nobody should be tardy in church. The habit clings to me still. It is my delight to be in my pew some minutes before the organist begins his voluntary, and I am distressed and humiliated if ever, by accident, I am so late that I must walk down the aisle after the pastor has inaugurated the service. It seems to me as impolite to be late at church, as to be late at any other function which has a fixed hour for starting.

Besides it is really unnecessary. The habitually tardy person usually catches his train, if this is important in his day's engagements, and the train labelled, "Divine Service, half-past ten o'clock," can be as easily caught if one choses to take pains in the matter.—Margaret E. Sangster.

NOT TO BE LAUGHED AT.

"That He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish," Eph. v. 27.

One Greek word used by the apostle in this passage is very remarkable—amomos, "without blemish." The heathen god of laughter was Momus; and it was supposed of him, in heathen mythology, that the slightest thing, which the common eye could not see, his acute eye saw, turned into ridicule, and laughed at.

Now the apostle's idea is, that Christ's Church, the company of believers, the bride, shall be so holy, so spotless, so perfect, in mind, in body, in spirit, that even the god of the heathen that turned into ridicule specks that were invisible to others, shall see nothing in that holy and spotless apocalypse that he can seize, or turn into a source of laughter. It is a most expressive thought; and indicates the magnificence and glory of that Church which Christ shall present unto Himself. Angels, startled at the glorious spectacle; the cherubim and seraphim, noticing a white-robed company in the realms of the blessed that are not natives, but colonists and immigrants, will ask the question, startled by the strange spectacle, Who are these, and whence came they? And the answer given will be, "These are they which came out of great tribulation; and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."—John Cumming, D. D.

ESCORTING AS WELL AS INVITING.

Half-doing is no better in the Sunday-school than anywhere else. Inviting is often only half doing, if not followed by escorting. A young men's Bible class in New York is not the only one which has learned this. Its records show that the number of new members who have come to the class by themselves, simply on invitation, is a small percentage of the whole number invited. On the contrary, nearly all new members have been escorted, usually by the same persons who invited them. "I will call for you on Sunday at such an hour," carries with it a definite, urgent, and personal invitation not easily resisted. But even when there is no spirit of resistance, when there is a willingness to accept the invitation, much is gained by courtesy and fellowship if the inviter goes after the invited, and brings him in as a companion, and not merely as a stranger. This is true for all classes. When the primary teacher gets on the track of possible new members, and gives the cordial invitation, she must often wisely arrange so that she, or her assistants, or some of the young people, shall call for the new children, and for their mothers, perhaps, to escort them to the school. The reality and the earnestness of the invitation are made plain in this way, and the relations of teacher, scholar, and parent are made closer from the first. Without this escorting, many will not come at all.—Sunday School Times.

"MY LOT IN LIFE."

I find myself where I am and as I am. My duty is submission. My privilege is enjoyment. Because I am sick or disabled, I need not be useless or unhappy. I accept my situation as of divine appointment, and I will try to be contented in it.

Lamenting over the past will do no good. I cannot recall or change it.

Complaining of the present will not mend it. It may make myself and others wretched. Anxiety about the future will not of itself make it any better.

My heavenly Father has permitted things to be with me just as they are, but I know he loves me. I will therefore leave all to him. No rebellion shall be cherished in my heart, and no murmur shall escape my lips. My Saviour has promised that his grace shall be sufficient for me. He will never leave me, but be a present help in the time of need.

Trusting in Him, and committing all to my Father's loving care, I will do what I can. I will make the place where my lot is cast as bright and cheerful as possible, and work and wait with patience till I am permitted to go to my heavenly home. —Banner.

We touch one another in all life's associations. We impress more or less all with whom we come in contact. In the home, in society, in business, and in the church we leave our mark. It becomes us all, then, to inquire what kind of an impression we are making upon childhood and manhood in our several spheres of influence. Is it for good or for evil? If for good, then our life is worth the living; if for evil, then it is a failure. A true and successful life is one the touch of which upon others is quickening, wholesome, purifying and beneficent.—Selected.

Some years ago a soldier in the United States army was condemned to be shot for sleeping on his post when overcome with fatigue. The president pardoned him. It is said that ever after that soldier prayed night and morning for the president, and when months afterward, he was fatally wounded in battle, he spent his last breath in prayer for the president of the United States. Love to Christ is the grateful response to forgiveness of sins by Christ.—Lesson Commentary.

Rev. Wm. E. McIlwain, from Pensacola, Fla., to Waynesville, N. C., until October 1st.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Sugar Creek Church:—A meeting of a week's duration at Sugar Creek church has just closed. Rev. J. M. Wharey, D. D., assisted Rev. T. J. Allison. His preaching was enjoyable and edifying to the people. There were five additions on profession last Sabbath, making thirty-three additions to this church since Mr. Allison came here last September. Good congregations all the week and very large one last Sabbath.

Blowing Rock:—A friend from Blowing Rock writes: We have had several very excellent sermons of late. Rev. Watkins Mebane preached for us one Sabbath and Rev. Barth Soulier, of Valdese delivered a very excellent sermon. Then the pulpit was occupied by a returned Baptist missionary from Jamaica and Dr. Rumple filled it on the Sabbath, (the 8th.) It seems very natural to frequenters of Blowing Rock to see him here.

The hotels and boarding houses are full to overflowing, but the continued rains have marred the pleasure of many.

Mt. Airy:—By special invitation Dr. W. W. Moore visited the Mount Airy church last Sabbath, and preached for us morning and night. At the morning service two deacons elect, to wit: Messrs. J. D. Smith and Geo. W. Lee, were ordained. Large, intelligent, and attentive audiences greeted Dr. Moore at both services. Our people were expecting great things and their expectations were more than fully realized. His sermons were perfect masterpieces. We feel that the Lord has greatly honored us by sending him to our midst, and that the cause of the Master was advanced by his coming. The church was revived and stimulated to more active and zealous work. C.

August 12th, 1897.

Jonesboro:—Since our last communication, we have had ten additions to this church, four on profession of faith in Christ, and six by letter. The congregation was much delighted last Thursday night with the presence of the Rev. W. S. Lacy, D. D., of Norfolk, Va. Dr. Lacy conducted the prayer meeting service and gave us a most excellent talk on Burden Bearing.

St. Andrews Church In Fayetteville Presbytery:—The people of St. Andrews are now occupying their new building. They are to be congratulated for their faithful work and are now richly rewarded by a nice and commodious church. On the second Sabbath inst., the new church was dedicated to the service of God. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the Rev. C. G. Vardell to a large and attentive audience. Many were moved to tears as he spoke of the purity of the life of Christ and the glory of His Church. We all fell in love with Mr. Vardell, and our prayer is that God may abundantly bless him in the grand and glorious work to which he has been called as President of Red Springs Seminary.

Rev. D. M. McIver, of Bolivar, Tenn., during his vacation has filled several appointments at St. Andrews much to the delight of his many friends. Mr. McIver is a young man of much promise. His sermons are clear and strong and show him to be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Long Cane Church:—Rev. J. Lowrie Wilson concluded a meeting at Long Cane church last Friday. The pastor Rev. J. F. McKinnon began the meeting on the Sabbath preceding, and Dr. Wilson came to his assistance on Monday. He preached with great earnestness and power to large congregations. As a result eleven were added to the church on profession of faith.

Eno:—The brethren appointed by Orange Presbytery (McCorkle and Maxwell) have been preaching two weeks for the Eno church. By the courtesy of the Methodist brethren at Cedar Grove, the meeting was held in their church. The hours for preaching were 5 and 7.30 p. m. The congregations were large and very attentive. Fifteen persons professed faith in Christ and four of them have united with Eno church. Christians were drawn together and the old church is greatly revived. They had hesitated to rebuild their church because of the inaccessibility of the old site. A congregational meeting was held August 10th to consider the matter of rebuilding. They agreed at once to rebuild. Then came the great question, where shall we build? The old site is dear to every member. It has been a preaching place since 1735. The old church was organized in 1735. Acres of graves contain the dust of six generations of the fathers of the members.

There is, however, no spring of water near the old site and the flooded fords of the Eno often diminished the congregations. It is a mile or two distant from the public roads and the private roads are very bad. It had therefore been evident for a long time that the village of Cedar Grove (two miles west of the old site) would be a more convenient place for the church. It was therefore with deep feeling that the church came to consider the question of removal. After some earnest speeches the vote was taken, not without tears, and every member present voted for removal. A desirable lot was offered at Cedar Grove and the committees were appointed as follows. Finance Committee: J. H. Hughes, Charles Foust, Miss Ara Hall, Miss Ella Anderson, Miss Dickey, Revs. W. P. McCorkle. H. S. Bradshaw, C. W. Maxwell. Building Committee: J. P. Hughes, W. H. Anderson, B. C. Patton. The church has about forty members and they thank God and propose to build at once. Rev. H. S. Bradshaw was called to supply the church in connection with his present field.

Evangelism In Stokes:—Good meetings are progressing in Stokes county conducted by the Evangelist P. C. Morton assisted by Rev. R W. George. Crowded assemblies of the people. Many confessions, and ten persons have joined the Presbyterian church at Dan River.

Sharon Church In Mecklenburg Presbytery:—Rev. G. T. Thompson who recently entered upon his labors at this church will hold a week of worship there in the latter part of the month.

Henderson:—Two accessions to the Henderson church last Sabbath on profession of faith. The health of Rev. A. R. Shaw, the pastor, is steadily improving. For the present he is preaching only one sermon a Sabbath.

Spruce Pine:—Rev. L. A. McLaurin is faithfully at work at Spruce Pine and Elk Park, evangelistic field of Concord Presbytery. The good news comes that recently seven new members had been received into the church at the former place.

VIRGINIA.

Hampden Sidney:—Rev. W. L. Lingle writes: I have had applications from thirty new men for rooms in the seminary next year, and the prospects for a good year are unusually fine.

GENERAL.

Rev. Dr. W. J. Chichester, a native of Baltimore, who has closed a pastorate of twelve years at Los Angeles, Cal, has accepted the call to the First Presbyterian church of Chicago.

The next biennial convention of the English Lutheran Synod lately held in Baltimore will be held in Detroit.

Miss Christina Thow, of Craigmore, Broughty Ferry, Scotland, has left bequests amounting to five thousand dollars each to the Dundee Parish Church Domestic Mission, the Small Livings Fund, the Foreign Mission Fund, the Home Mission Fund, and the Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund of the Church of Scotland.

Rev. F. S. Stickney, pastor of the Monumental Episcopal church, Richmond, Va., died on the 15th inst. His remains were interred at his old home at Wilson, N. C.

Rev. Dr. Taylor, of Wake Forest, conducted a delightful little service at the Carolina Club House on Wrightsville Beach on last Sabbath evening.

A new Church of the Strangers will be built downtown in New York City. Thirty thousand dollars out of a needed $100,000 has been raised. The new edifice will be known as the Deems Memorial Church of the Strangers. The location has not yet been decided upon, but it will probably be not far from the present church in Mercer Street. The ground lease of the present building, which stands on the Sailors' Snug Harbor property, will expire on May 1st, 1898. The society will not pay the advanced rental demanded. During the two years of the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Asa Blackburn 175 members have been added to the congregation. Dr. Blackburn is a prime mover in the plan for a new church, and is also urging the idea of honoring the name of his predecessor, the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Deems. The Board of Trustees at a meeting held on June 28th appointed a committee to secure subscriptions for the new church. The old church was bought by Commodore Vanderbilt for Dr. Deems. He paid $50,000 for it. The first service was held there on October 2d, 1870.—Christian Intelligencer.

The North Carolina Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua has just closed its Fifth Annual Session of five days at Red Springs. The object of this Chautauqua as stated by the President in opening the meeting, is to encourage the workers, to increase the efficiency and to enlarge the field in the Sunday school work. The gathering was large from the first, but Friday perhaps the largest crowd ever witnessed in Red Springs was present, an excursion train having brought in many for the day. Some preaching and much speaking was engaged in. A good deal was said about the past history of Baptist Sunday-schools in North Carolina, of their present success, ways of working, &c., and of their future prospects. Raleigh schools seemed to be in the lead in work and in furnishing speakers, teachers and others for the Chautauqua. The music was an attractive feature, several instruments being used. The most attractive speaker to Robesonians was Prof. J. B. Carlyle, of Wake Forest, he being one of Robeson's gifted sons. There was demmonstrations of the presence of the Holy Spirit during the meeting and it is hoped much good has been accomplished.

A very sad accident occurred on the first day of the meeting. While Mrs. S. B. Tolar and child of Rennert who had come with her family to attend the whole meeting) was crossing the railroad trestle to get to their boarding place after the close of the afternoon session; they were instantly killed by the southbound passenger train, the child being cut to pieces. The mother was horribly mangled up and thrown to the ground below. Two daughters standing near by were eye witnesses of the sad occurrence. No blame can be attached to any one, the engineer did all in his power to stop his engine when he saw the situation, but being on down grade could not stop in time to save their lives. The sad affair cast a gloom of sadness over the whole Chatauqua and the community. J. McL.

Mr. Lingle has a splendid offer to continue his studies in Greek and Hebrew in Chicago next spring. He will decide this winter whether he is to be teacher or preacher in the future. Those who heard him here—especially the regular congregation at the Second church—think that he has been effectually called to the pulpit. They think he will make a great mistake to confine his talents to the class-room.—Charlotte Observer.

Rev. P. C. Morton filled the pulpit of Immanuel church on last Sabbath both morning and evening. Rev. Byron Clark, who was to have been here filled Mr. Morton's pulpit at Whiteville. On the 23rd inst., Mr. Morton will begin a series of meetings. The prayers of God's people are asked that the Holy Spirit may be outpoured in abundant measure upon the services.

"CAST THY BURDEN UPON THE LORD."

Psalm 55 : 22.

My burden 'tis heavy, 'tis cumbrous,
Quite different from burdens, I ween,
That David was thinking of casting;
Such burdens as mine, did he mean?
Oh, if I only could know it.
Could be sure He would bear such as mine,
How quickly, how gladly I'd "cast" it.
Methinks ne'er again I'd repine.

'Tis not sin! I'm forgiven! My Saviour
Hath washed me! "I'm whiter than snow!"
Is faith sleeping, that God doth not hear me
And the boon I am asking bestow?
Is it wrong to ask temporal blessings?
He bade us to pray for our bread!
And 'tis not "amiss" I am asking,
He knoweth, He knoweth my need.

I long to be free! Lord, release me.
I am praying and working by day,
At night I am dreaming and planning,
And hoping He'll show me the way.
I'm not doubting, but almost discouraged,
And the load doth increase day by day.
Perhaps, O dear friends of the "Corner,"
You will plead e'en for me when ye pray.

E. M. DAVIS-GRANT.

OUR TEMPORAL NEEDS.

The little poem which you have just read at the top of this page suggests very touchingly the burden which weighs on many a life, owing to poverty, or care, or material necessities. This burden is not less difficult to carry that it is sometimes a vicarious one, and that we are distressed and grieved at the adverse circumstances of relatives and friends. We see sons and daughters growing thin and old under the anxieties which narrow means, lack of work, or fragile health press in increasing measure upon them. Time was when they never had a grief we could not soothe, nor a load we could not help them to carry, but that blessed time went with their flying childhood, and in their maturity there are hours of solicitude which we may not share or relieve. The sufferings borne by parents in behalf of their, or rather on account of their grown-up children, are terribly real, and deeply wearing.

Few of us have not dear friends, too, for whom we are anxious and with whose narrow means or losses we are in full sympathy. Forbidden sometimes so much as to express our compassion in words, or to aid in any tangible way, we constantly pray for these beloved ones and bear them on our hearts to the throne.

Then, too, our own loads are heavy enough. Debts, perhaps, which are as fetters about the feet, a mortgage on the home, notes in bank to be met relentlessly on their swiftly approaching dates, the need of change and travel and no money to make the same possible, the falling off of an income, the straightened ways that once were easy and wide, are all trying to faith. Yet, has not God promised us temporal help in time of need?

Assuredly, yes. Our Lord explicitly says to every believing disciple, "Take no thought for the morrow. The morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. Consider the lilies of the field how they grow! Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing, and one of them shall not fall to the ground without your Father? Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

The whole word of God is thick sown with sweetest promises as the stars are sown in the midnight sky, as the daisies spring in the summer fields. God pledges us His almighty help.

We are to do our best, using the wisdom He gives, availing ourselves of the resources we have, working with judgment, common sense and perseverance, thus doing our own part, and then we are to leave everything else in entire confidence in the hands of our Father in heaven, saying:

"I can never doubt His goodness,
I must ever trust His love;
By a cord I cannot sever
I am bound to my home above.

"And therefore on my journey
Henceforth I'll walk by faith,
Till He give me fuller vision
On the other side of death."

THE CHILD OF THE CHURCH.

The child has a definite place in the Church of Christ, and it is strange that this fact is not more generally apprehended. This relationship is clearly recognized in the Old Testament, where it is definitely solemnized by a sacramental seal. This has never been annulled, but is still further emphasized in the New Testament dispensation, in which the sacramental seal of the covenant is found in the baptism which takes the place of the Old Testament circumcision.

The place of the child in the family is somewhat analogous to its place in the Church. The child becomes a member of the family at birth, and is as much a member the first day of its life as at any subsequent period. It does not at first have the same duties, nor the same privileges, but is entitled to the same care and love and protection, and has actually and vitally as much right to be called a member of the family as if fully grown. As it develops it will be called on to discharge appropriate duties, and will be expected to yield to discipline in order that it may be properly directed. Unless the child is born into the family it can become a member only in the exceptional way of adoption.

The place of the child in the nation is somewhat analogous to its place in the Church. The child becomes a member of the nation at birth, and is as much a member the first day of its life as when it reaches maturity. It is a citizen, as much entitled to the protection of the nation, if its interests are jeopardized, as if it were fifty years of age. It has certain duties and obligations. If it commit offenses against the law in early life, it is liable to be placed under penal or reformatory influences by the Government. If the heir to an estate, that property must pay taxes as certainly as if owned by an adult. The child may not vote nor hold office, but is a member of the nation without question. Unless the child is born a citizen, it can become a member of the nation only in the exceptional way of naturalization.

The Church of Christ stands with the family and the State as a divinely organized institution. It were a strange thing if children born of believing parents should have no place, nor right, nor standing in the Church of Christ. It is the teaching of God throughout his whole Word, plainly stated in the Old Testament and ratified in the New, that children have such a place.

The Presbyterian Church has devoutly and lovingly accepted the plain teaching of the word of God, and unequivocally announces her judgment in her authoritative standards in these words: "All children, born within the pale of the visible Church are members of the Church, are to be baptized, are under the care of the Church, and subject to its government and discipline, and when they have arrived at years of discretion they are bound to perform all the duties of church-members."

It is to be expected that the child members of the Church will grow up to yield their hearts to Christ, and their lives to His service in His Church, just as certainly as that they shall grow up in the family to be dutiful and orderly children, and that in the nation they shall become honorable and useful citizens. They are not communicants in their childhood in the Church, as they are not voters in the State. Duties vary with increasing years, but there is membership, all through the years, in family, State and Church, if that membership has been born into, and has not been forfeited.

Some churches have failed to emphasize and take advantage of this Scripture truth, and yet have felt the need of some form or statement to take its place. The Salvation Army has no sacraments, but we read frequently of the presentation of children in the public service, and their consecration to the Lord in a form which is infant baptism with the baptism left out. Such cases occur in the Baptist Church, which claims its right to the name "Baptist," partly because it does not baptize the children who certainly should be baptized. A writer in a paper of the "Christian" denomination urges the use of some such ceremony for the dedication of children to Christ. The teaching of the Friends' Church is that children have a birthright membership in the Church. We should be glad to see all these bodies take the simple, Scriptural position occupied by our Presbyterian Church. It would be a blessing to the children, and a source of grace and comfort to the parents.

Pastors and sessions are to feel that their relation to all the children of the Church grows out of the actual membership of these children in the Church. It is not because they may have become attendants of the Sabbath-school, or of the infant class, but because inherent members of the Church itself, who are to be gathered into the various places of duty and privilege, taught their duty, and led to an acceptance of the spiritual service of Christ. It is a relationship not of sentiment, but of reality, and the discharge of pastoral duty to the children is one of the most vital and essential parts of the pastor's work for Christ.—Herald and Presbyter.

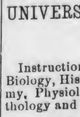
THE WATER OF LIFE.

How beautiful the metaphor which represents God's grace as water under its manifold active forms. It is never the sea but always the spring, the fountain, the brook by the way. It is never the cistern but always the perennial well. It is never the vast wastes of ocean, but always the irrigating streams which cover the otherwise barren plain with a mantle of verdure.

God has so created the world that life and water are indeed almost synonomous terms. It is water that gives life to the hidden things of earth. It seeks out the dull, hard-rinded seed, and calls out from the discarded husk the plumule that shall ascend to the light of day, displaying beauty and exhaling fragrance. It seeks the thirsty roots of the clover and makes the field to rejoice. It runs eagerly up the channels of the great trunks and the oaks spread their leafy canopies over the plain. The bird seeks it in the wood and goes away singing; the cattle come to it in the meadow and return to their rest satisfied; man strengthens himself for toil by it, and with it refreshes himself when his toil is past. Let a few days of drouth derange the flow of the streams and how innumerable are the miseries of men. Stop that flow entirely and the whole universe would be resolved into dry dust and wandering gas once more.

Scattered throughout the Bible are these smiles which help us to realize that without God the soul is dead. He is to us, in the person of Christ especially, "the dew," the "rain upon the mown grass," "the living water," which gives at once beauty and strength.



But it is the water which becomes part of us that fulfils these kindly offices. One might perish at the margin of a lake as well as in the middle of a desert, did he not himself partake. All the leaping fountains of Saratoga bring no health or happiness to him whose lips are sealed by an obstinate will. All the streams which issue from beneath the throne of God refresh not him who holds aloof from their crystal courses. "The Spirit and the Bride say Come," but only he who wills partakes of the water of life freely. Under the blazing rays of a midsummer noon we first learn how dependent we are upon the earth's water supply, and when wearied with the burden and heat of the day God's grace comes to us, it may be for the first time, with sweet attractive power.—Interior.

Third Quarter—Lesson IX.

August 29, 1897.—Acts xix : 21-34.

Commit to memory verses 24-26.

Subject. Paul opposed at Ephesus.

Golden Text. "Take heed and beware of covetousness."

CATECHISM.

Question 55. What is forbidden in the Third Commandment?

Answer. The Third Commandment forbiddeth all profaning or abusing of anything whereby God maketh Himself known.

Time. A. D. about 57.

Place. Ephesus.

INTRODUCTORY.

Turning from the Acts in the fifth lesson of this quarter, to take lessons from two of the Epistles we left Paul at Corinth, where he remained a year and six months. After this Paul set sail for Syria, intending to reach Jerusalem in time for the great feast, perhaps Passover, in the spring of A. D. 54. This visit made by Paul must have been very brief. In a short time he returned to Antioch completing his second missionary journey. In A. D. 54, Paul entered upon his third missionary journey extending about four years. He visited the early churches and made a long residence at Ephesus. It is thought that by journeys from this center the seven churches of Asia were founded. This was the city of the greatest importance in all Asia Minor, and the principal emporium of trade in the East. The crowning glory of Ephesus was the temple of Artemis or Diana. It was one of the seven wonders of the world. The city was celebrated for its manufacture of tents. The graves of Mary and John were later made there where they lived for many years. The excellent tentmakers Aquila and Priscilla exiled from Rome wrought with Paul in founding the church. In the opening verses of this chapter is an account of a Pentecostal blessing. Then follows the account of Paul's work at Ephesus and the sacrifices practiced for the sake of the Gospel.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 21. These Things, the incidents related in the preceding verses. Purposed in spirit, formed a plan on his own desire and judgment. Macedonia and Achaia, countries in Europe west of Asia Minor. To Jerusalem to report and to aid the poor churches there. Must see Rome, as he wrote to that church.

Vs. 22. Timotheus, Timothy a companion of Paul in the last journey, and Erastus, who had gone with him from Corinth.

Vs. 23. About that way, R. V., "concerning the way," meaning the Gospel.

Vs. 24. Silver Shrines of Diana were small models of the famous temple with images of Diana in them. Brought no small gain. They were sold to the people at Ephesus, to pilgrims and merchants visiting.

Vs. 25. Workmen of like occupation, silversmiths and those who did other work of making these and similar shrines of other deities.

Vs. 26. Hath turned away much people, shows how much progress the Gospel had made. All Asia, meant the Roman Province of Asia in the western part of Asia Minor.

Vs. 27. Our craft is in danger. This was the popular appeal. Demetrius had capital invested. There was no thought of the lives made better, homes purer and ideals higher, the sick restored and the comfort in trial, but only of their earthly loss.

Vs. 28. Full of wrath against Christians whose tenets and teachings were endangering their trade. All this reads like a chapter of modern complaints against the Gospel.

Vs. 29. The whole city was filled with confusion as the populace was stirred and raised a mob and caught Gaius and Aristarchus, as Paul's companions when their main object, Paul, escaped them and dragged them away as criminals. The theatre, coliseum, a vast amphitheatre open to the sky and capable of seating fifty thousand people. "These mighty buildings were used not only for dramatic representations, but also for great shows of gladiators. They were also favorite meeting places for the citizens." Schaff.

Vs. 30. Paul would have entered being unwilling to allow his friends to suffer in his stead. Suffered, permitted him not as they knew the Ephesian mobs too well and were unwilling to have his precious life endangered.

Vs. 31. Chief of Asia. "The Asiarchs or High Priests of Asia, were heads of the imperial, political, religious organizations of the Province." —Ramsay. There were men of wealth chosen annually to superintend and preside over the games and festivals held in honor of the emperor and the Gods. The expense of the games fell upon them to provide the gladiators, the wild beats and many other small expenses. This gave the highest honor, an honor greatly coveted, and when robed with mantles of purple and crowned with garlands they assumed the duty of regulating the great gymnastic contests and controlling the tumultuary crowd in the theatre they might literally be called the chief of Asia. His friends, as Christians which is hardly probable, or probably open-minded and large hearted men who had observed the character of Paul and the conduct of those who became disciples through him. Not adventure himself to the madness of the mob.

Vs. 33. Alexander, possibly "the coppersmith who did me much evil" as Paul wrote 2 Timothy iv. 14. He was put forward by the Jews lest they should be identified with the Christians.

Vs. 34. A foolish cry as if every one did not know that. Finally the city clerk came forward and with a very ingenious and rational speech persuaded the mob to disband. Paul immediately left for Macedonia.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. The real little model of the true temple of God are Christians and they should carry the image of Christ about in them.

2. The consciousness of being where Christ would have us be, and doing His will, gives us great courage.

3. The opposition to the truth is vain. Ephesus and the great temple have perished, but the Gospel lives and grows and continues to conquer.

IDOLS.

Text for the week :

Little children, keep yourselves from idols. 1 John 5 : 21.

Daily Readings :

Monday. Keep yourselves from idols 1. John 5 : 13-21.
Tuesday. Pride. Dan. 4 : 28 37.
Wednesday. Money. 1 Tim. 6 : 3-10.
Thursday. Rank. Esth. 6 : 1-14.
Friday. Applause. Matt. 6 : 1-6.
Saturday. Human love. Matt. 10:34-39.
Sunday. The idols we are likely to worship. Ex. 20 : 1-6 : Luke 12 ; 1 John 5 : 13 21.

Suggestions :

Idolatry is the giving of inordinate love or affection to any object whatsoever, or the giving of adoration or homage to any object or being other than God himself. God is a jealous God ; He brooks no rivalry, no competition, no parallelism or equality in affection or adoration due to Him alone. Thou shalt have no other gods before Me—is the command which embraces in its scope all that would place anything, in any degree, or to any extent between us and God, so as to mar our vision as to His supreme excellence and as to His supreme right to our homage and to our love.

We are so prone to view idolatry only in respect to the worship of objects animate or inanimate, as in heathendom, that we overlook the fact that where revelation and superior religious intelligence render this species of idolatry impossible, the sinful principle still exists in the heart, and may find its manifestation on other lines.

It is this aspect of the subject that we are called to consider. What idols are we likely to worship? The giant idol, the father of the tribe, is self. The very root-principle is selfishness, and we will serve with most devotion that disposition or propensity which most gratifies the spirit of selfishness. Often this is avarice—the love of money. Sometimes it is gluttony, again ambition to excel, from inordinate love of admiration or attention from one's fellows ; in one of its manifestations love of human applause. A common form of idolatry, which one feels loath to condemn, it is in such infinite remove from all that is base and sordid, is that excessive love for those bound to us by natural ties that it places them in our affections between us and God, as the love of the parent for the child, or the husband for the wife, or the wife for the husband. And yet it is just here the idol self—oftenest is most prominent ; just here he raises high his hideous form, albeit he is decked in virtuous garb. Each for himself must in the light of God's word decide what his most beworshiped idol is, in order that he may duly obey the injunction "To keep yourselves from idols."

NOTES FROM GREENSBORO.

The congregation of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro have again had the great pleasure of listening to their venerable and beloved pastor, Dr. J. Henry Smith, two well-timed sermons. On Sunday night, a week ago, and at the 10.30 a. m., service yesterday, he followed Dr. E. W. Smith the junior pastor in his sermons of some weeks on the Church in the Family, or the Family as a Unit for Christ—family religion, and the worship of God in the Church, families sitting together and worshipping together as in the days of old. Dr. J. Henry Smith, though still feeble, after some three months of quiet and diligent use of means, bids fair now for some further years of usefulness in the ministry. By the way, the 31st of July brought around the fiftieth year of his ministry, about thirty-nine of which has been spent with this congregation. The blessed results of such a long ministry, who can tell? The writer has seen hundreds brought into the church, by God's blessing upon the Word from his lips in these thirty-nine years. Oh the stars ! the stars ! set to his crown of rejoicing.

I want again to commend the change of hours for morning service to other churches. As I said before, assembling at 10.30 promptly—we believe in minute promptness—for the morning worship, of one hour only, then taking the next hour for the Sunday-school which closes to the minute at half past twelve. We find a large number of the children in the pew for this worship, and a large number of adults remain for the Sunday-school. The Bible class yesterday numbering fifty-five ; and the largest number in school 267 ever present on a hot summer month. We have in addition to this eight home classes of over one hundred studying the lesson, with monthly reports from visitors to said classes.

TRIBUTE

From the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church of Durham, N. C., in memory of Mrs. E. S. THOMSON, called to rest July 10th, 1897.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father, in wisdom and love, hath taken from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. E. S. Thomson, therefore be it

Resolved 1st. That we humbly thank Him that He graciously permitted her "to occupy" with us, showing by her obedient service, how we may, while the Master is "in a far country," take of "his goods"—the words of the Father's love—and give unto others, who may receive and give again, so that the record may again and again read "and the word grew," "and the word was multiplied" until The Bruised One "shall see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied."

2nd. That we "take, as being sent," her example as she followed, literally, the teaching of our Lord and Master, in that she in making a dinner called in the poor and made them feel at home, in her home as she hoped to feel in the "place" her elder brother had gone to prepare for those who love as He loved. She was a faithful co-laborerer in the cause dear to this society, yet never overlooked the missions at her door, as many who came under her blessed influence can, testify. Duty seemed her watch-word and the blessed sunshine that always surrounded her, in its performance however burdensome, or however unpretending, was an example for all—an inspiration to many.

3d. That we render thanks for her example as a mother, whose training of her boys, was born of a great heart's desire that they be pure, as the world demands that every mother's daughter be pure.

4th. That we gratefully acknowledge Him, the Author of the childlike faith that was in her, and pray that we too, at the foot of the cross, may let our faith, though but a thread, twine around the rope of God's love, and find in the God of Heaven, our Father who "receives graciously," "loves freely," and "freely gives us all things."

5th. That we, in our loss, which is her gain, be cheered by the blessed assurance of these, our Father's words, "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels ; and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him."

6th. That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved mother and husband, and offer most earnest prayer for the boys so dear to her heart, that the Word, from which she drew her early instructions "may be a lamp to their feet," and that we comfort the sorrowing hearts with these words : "Shall—together—meet the Lord in the air, and so shall—ever be with the Lord."

7th. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on the society records, and one be sent the bereaved family as a token of our appreciation of her worth, and of our sympathy in their loss.

Mrs. R. D. Blacknall,
Mrs. R. L. Montgomery,
Mrs. L. A. Carr,

RANKIN—On Aug. 5th, 1897, at her home, Franklin, N. C., Mrs. Jane B. Rankin, wife of Maj. N. P. Rankin, and daughter of Evans and Bernitha Wharton, deceased, Guilford county, aged 64 years. Her two sons, one from Washington City, and the other from Savannah were summoned to her bedside and most faithfully did they join their father and sister in waiting upon her, but all their faithfulness could not avail to her restoration.

In very early life Mrs. Rankin became a Christian, and united with the old home church, Bethel, and during the remainder of her life maintained a high Christian character. Her lot, in Christian work, was mainly in the weak and struggling churches of the mountains. First in Lenoir, N. C., and for the past eighteen years in Franklin.

Her labors for the church have been abundant and unselfish, and she has now entered upon her reward in heaven.

May the Lord bless and keep those that so sadly mourn her loss.

Prof. J. A. McLauchlin, who for two years was principal of the Wadesboro Graded Institute has accepted the chair of Mathematics in Austin College at Sherman, Texas. We are sorry to lose Prof. McLauchlin. His work here was satisfactory in every respect. The best wishes of his many patrons and friends follow him to his new field of usefulness. Such men of push, energy and intellect are always in demand. Would that Wadesboro had more such.—Wadesboro Courier.

FOR THE FAMILY.

IN THE HOME CIRCLE.

The fire upon the hearth is low,
And there is stillness everywhere;
And, like winged spirits here and there,
The firelight shadows fluttering go;
And as the shadows round me creep,
A childish treble breaks the gloom,
And softly from a farther room
Comes: "Now I lay me down to sleep."

And somehow with that little prayer,
And that sweet treble in my ears,
My thoughts go back to distant years.
And linger with a dear one there;
And as I hear my child's "Amen,"
My mother's faith comes back to me;
Couched at her side I seem to be,
And mother holds my hands again.

O for an hour in that dear place!
O for the peace of that dear time!
O for the childish trust sublime!
O for a glimpse of mother's face!
Yet as the shadows round me creep,
I do not seem to be alone—
Sweet magic of that treble tone—
And "Now I lay me down to sleep."
—Eugene Field.

FANNY CROSBY.

One of the most noted writers of hymns in the world is Mrs. Fanny Crosby, who has been blind all her life, but at the age of 80 is still actively engaged in religious work. Fanny Crosby was born near Ridgefield, Ct. She was educated at the New York institution for the blind, where she remained for several years as a teacher after she completed the collegiate course. She early manifested an aptitude for writing verses, and on a tour of the State, which was made by the pupils of the institution, she attracted considerable attention by an original poetical address which she had composed. Always profoundly religious, she soon began writing religious verses, but it was only after her marriage to Alexander Van Alstyne, blind like herself, that she first began work on the long line of hymns which have made her name famous wherever the English tongue is spoken. After the initial step followed in quick succession hymn after hymn. "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" appeared in 1868, "Pass Me Not" in the same year, "Rescue the Perishing" one year later and "Blessed Assurance" in 1873. The next year came three widely sung hymns—"Hold Thou My Hand," "Close to Thee" and "Every Day and Every Hour." "I Am Thine, O Lord," appeared in 1875, "Hide Thou Me" in 1876. "'Tis the Blessed Hour of Prayer" in 1881, "What a Gathering" in 1887 and "Saved by Grace," one of her favorites, in 1891. Her latest hymn, published this year, is entitled "Loving Saviour, With Thy Blessing." To-day there is scarcely a Gospel song book published which does not include all, or the greater number, of the above songs. What occasioned the writing of the songs? Incidents, principally. This is mainly true in regard to the authoress' best known works. Here are one or two incidents which called forth songs: One day Doan, the famous Cincinnati composer, came rushing into Miss Crosby's room while she was in that city attending a religious meeting. Excitedly he said to her: "Miss Crosby, I want a song. I have just forty minutes before leaving the city. Can you write it?" Miss Crosby turned calmly toward him with "You don't want much, do you?" Then she said: "Can you hum the tune you are going to use with the words?" Doan hummed it over. Again Miss Crosby spoke: "Have you any suggestions as to what the hymn shall be about?" "Yes," replied Doan, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." Rapturously she clasped her hands. "Oh, what a beautiful thought!" she cried. Thirty minutes later she had composed eight verses. But three were published. Several years later Miss Crosby was attending a meeting of the famous Water Street Mission in New York City. One hardened sigher, when the call for repenters to make themselves known was made, stepped forward and went torward the platform whereupon Miss Crosby, in company with the missionaries, sat. On being told that a man had come forward, she exclaimed: "Lead me to him." Tenderly she clasped her arms around the rum-soaked and guilt-stained man; as tenderly she whispered in his ears. Then the tears began to course their way down his cheeks. With a great sob the big, burly fellow broke down and cried like a child. The incident so impressed itself on Miss Crosby's mind that, before she retired that night, "Rescue the Perishing" had been completed.—N. O. Picayune.

"Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune

How much of woman's life happiness is lost for lack of harmony. A hundred sweet melodious tones ruined by one little note of discord. Women who ought to enjoy the perfect happiness of love and wifehood and motherhood are miserable from one year's end to the other, because of some weakness or disease of the delicate organism of their sex.

These delicate complaints, which make a jangling dissonance of so many lives, are not by any means a necessity of womanhood They may be overcome and completely eradicated under judicious treatment.

There is no need of repugnant examinations. There is no need of resorting to any unauthorized medicament compounded by an unskilled, uneducated person. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the troubles of the feminine organism positively, completely and safely.

For nearly 30 years Dr. R. V. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N.Y. He is an eminent and expert specialist in this particular field of practice. Any woman may write to him with perfect confidence, and will receive, free of charge, sound, professional advice and suggestion for self-treatment by which 99 out of 100 cases of female complaint, even of the most obstinate kind, may be completely and permanently cured. Address him as above.

"While I was living at Eagle Rock, Botetourt Co., Va.," writes Mrs. G. A. Connor, of Alleghany Spring, Montgomery Co., Va., "a lady friend came to me and said: 'My daughter, aged 15 years, has repeated hemorrhages at the nose, and she has never had the necessary indispositions of womanhood.' I advised her to get Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The lady purchased one bottle and it cured her daughter. She was well and happy when I left there."

Constipation is the all-embracing cause of ill-health. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure it. They never gripe.

BEDTIME.

Good-night, dear Day! you're tired, I know,
You've had so very far to go.
And now you lay your cheek so red
On white snow-pillows for your bed.

That one clear star shall be your light
To watch above you all the night;
Just like the little lamp-light spark
That drives away the nursery dark.

The moon will tuck you into bed,
Those bright clouds are the prayers you said,
And hurrying on to God they go
Like prayers of children here below.

When night is over, up you'll get,
To see if I have wakened yet.
But I'm in Dreamland many a mile;
You'll have to play alone awhile!

FIDDLER CRABS.

Would some of you like to hear of an afternoon stroll we took at low tide one day along the Cape Cod beach? Mamma and auntie and I set out hoping to pick up scallop shells on the sand. We did find some beauties, of all sizes and sorts, and since then have sent them off in a box by express to Boston, to sick children in a hospital, feeling sure they would like to amuse themselves with these pretty shells that came from Cape Cod shores.

The oddest thing we saw that afternoon on our walk along the beach was a multitude of round holes in the wet sand, as big as though the point of a man's cane had made them. These holes were as close together as the fingers of your hand, when spread ont. Can you guess what made them? We watched, and soon we saw dozens of little brown fiddler crabs scattered sideways over the beach, and the moment we came near them they would run for the nearest hole and disappear. So this was what the hole meant. At high tide, when the beach is covered by waves, these "fiddlers" go down in their holes, and stay till the next low tide. They make fresh holes to come out by, casting up little round balls of wet sand as they come, so that all around the holes you see little heaps of sand thrown up by these busy workers.

You would be amused to examine closely a fiddler crab. When a crab walks its head is always at the side, not in front, which looks queer enough. The father crabs have one big white claw at one side of the body, and with this they defend themselve if attacked, and they also catch their food by means of it. If they see you coming near, they raise this claw, and open its jaws like a pair of shears. I caught one of them, picking it up quickly from the sand, and when we gave him a chance he would nip our fingers; but it did not hurt much, and when we dropped him, off he scuttled into one of the sand-holes. There were mites of baby fiddlers, and mother ones, too, without the long, white claw. The beach was covered with the curious tracks left by them, as they wandered over it at low tide, looking for their food.

When we had finished our stroll we came home, thinking how many strange and wonderful things God our Father has made, and how he has taken care to give to each creature just what it needs.—The Child's Paper.

A BRAVE DEED.

It hardly seems possible that a girl of sixteen should save nearly fifty people from a terrible death, yet that is what Grace Bussell did. Her father was one of the first settlers near the Swan River in Western Australia. She used to help in many ways, would ride twenty miles a day with the cattle, and was as much at home in the saddle as she was in the kitchen. Now it happened one day in December that a vessel was wrecked off the coast, about eight miles from the Bussells' home. The steamboat sprang a leak, and not being far from land, the captain tried to steer her in. But she ran aground, and there she stayed, with the water gradually flowing into her. The life-boat which was on board the steamer was lowered, but it leaked and eight people who ventured in it were drowned. The surf ran so wildly that no one dared to swim through it, and there was not a house or a person in sight. The girl of sixteen was riding along with a native servant. She caught sight of the vessel, and turning her horse's head toward the coast, started at a quick gallop. When she reached the sea she urged her horse into the angry surf. She rode boldly on till she reached the vessel. With much difficulty she took some of the children in her arms, and put them before her on the saddle, then took women and larger children. So she went backward and forward four hours till all were safe on land, the servant having ridden in to bring out the last man. Tired and wet as the girl was she had still something more to do. Those forty-eight people must have food and protection before night came on. So Grace rode for help, but by the time she had gone the eight miles, she was so worn out that she fainted, and it was some time before she could tell what had happened. Her married sister started off at once with food and wraps for the shipwrecked people, and the next day they were all taken to Mr. Bussell's home. Grace well-deserved the medal of the Royal Humane Society, which was presented to her.

DO YOUR BEST.

There is a fable told about a king's garden, in which the trees and all the flowers began to make complaint. The oak was sad because it did not bear flowers; the rose-bush was sad because it could not bear fruit: the vine was sad because it had to cling to the wall and could cast no shadow. "I am not the least use in the world," said the oak. "I might as well die, since I yield no fruit," said the rose-bush. "What good can I do," said the vine.

Then, the king saw a litle pansy which held up its glad, fresh face while all the rest were sad. And the king said: "What make you so glad, when all the rest pine and are so sad?" "I thought," said the pansy, "that you wanted me here, because here you planted me, and so I made up my mind that I would try and be the best little pansy that could be."—Canada Presbyterian.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I was ten years old the fourth of July. We are living on a farm one and a half miles from Rutherfordton, N. C., and are delighted with our new home, the good fresh air and cool spring water. We call our home Springdale because there are so many springs on the farm. I have four little sisters and one little brother and we have great fun playing out in the cool shade. I am going to school now to papa. He is teaching near home. I am studying geography, arithmetic, Fourth Reader and spelling. I must not make my letter longer now, but will write again and tell more about our nice games. &c. Papa wants to thank you through my letter for your great kindness to him. We enjoy reading your good paper so much.

Your little friend,
WALTER SLAGLE HENDERSON.
Rutherfordton, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I am a little girl seven years old and can't write very well, so will get my sister to help me write. I saw a letter in your paper from my little cousin and was so glad to see it and hope you will publish this letter so she can see it. My little brother went to grandmothers and is going to stay a long time. I want to see him very much. I ride horseback every day. I get on behind my sister and we just trot the horse. I have a pet cat, her name is Fiddleums, she is mighty pretty. I have a pretty pet cow, I can take her by the horns and she won't hurt me a bit. We go to church at Centre and Dr. H. G. Hill is our pastor. It is almost too far to attend Sunday-school so we sturdy our lessons at home. We will go to Raleigh in about a month and Dr. Daniels will be our pastor then. We have a river near our house and a bath house near it. We go in bathing most every evening. I can't swim yet, but my brother can swim and dive like a duck. My sister is just learning how. I must close now hoping very much to see this in print.

I am your little friend,
OLIVIA G. RUSSELL.

It is a solemn thing to have God so near, but the joy is equal to the solemnity.—Spurgeon.

THE SOUTHERN BIBLICAL ASSEMBLY.

Last week I gave your readers some account of the Southern Biblical Assembly's opening sessions, and now, by your permission, I desire to give them some further account of what has been going on since that writing.

Since that writing six evening lectures have been delivered in the Baptist church and the most of these were both able and instructive. On Saturday night, Aug. 7th, Rev. A. W. Wilson, D. D., LL. D., of Baltimore, delivered an address holding up Jesus as the Pattern Man. And he was followed on Sunday night by Rev. Dr. C. H. Bell, Professor in the Cumberland University, who read an interesting lecture on "Jesus and the other Masters of Religious Thought" in which he sharply contrasted Christ and His teachings with other religious teachings. On Monday and Tuesday nights Rev. Howard W. Ennis of Washington, D. C., gave two illustrated lectures on the life of Christ—the first on "His Advent and Youth" and the second on "His Ministry." Of these it must be said that the stereopticon views were, on the whole, very good indeed; but, as I have not yet reached the stereopticon state, I must say they were not enjoyed. It was more like a concert than a religious service and the spirit of true worship seemed not to be in the house. On Thursday night Rev. Dr. James Atkins, Sunday-school editor of the Southern Methodist church, gave a very good lecture on "Jesus the Great Teacher," but only a small congregation was out to hear him. And on last night Dr. Thos. Hume of the State University read a lengthy but beautiful lecture in which in his own inimitable way he pointed out "The Messianic Element in Isaiah." As he passed along the Doctor dropped this point which some writers on Isaiah would do well to heed: It is vain to argue the first and last part of Isaiah were written by different authors on the ground of difference in style of these two parts, because between no two passages of Isaiah do we see a greater difference in style than we see between the early and later writings of Shakespeare.

On last Sabbath nearly all of the pulpits of the various churches in the city were filled by Assembly lecturers or visiting ministers, and the writer had the privilege of opening the doors of a little Baptist church now vacant, and preached from the brief but profound text: "God is love." To-morrow also the various churches will hear visiting brethren and, among others, it is announced that Rev. J. M. P. Otts of Alabama will preach in the First Presbyterian church and Rev. Dr. Hume in the First Baptist church.

On last Sabbath afternoon in the First Presbyterian church a very interesting Bible Reader's Union was held, presided over by Rev. Dr. J. E. Gilbert Secretary of the National Society. Talks were made by a number of brethren and plans were presented for the systematic reading of the whole Bible. Another meeting of the same kind will be held to-morrow afternoon and it is hoped that it will be as profitable and as enthusiastic as the first.

Miss Nowlin of Washington has been continuing her school of Primary Methods in the Methodist church, giving very interesting and instructive lessons especially adapted to the teacher in the primary department of the Sabbath-school. Besides other important matters, she has given many valuable hints as to what the teacher should be, her relations to the class, and the weekly preparation of the lesson. The Juvenile School under Mrs. Bell of Alabama has also continued its work from day to day and out of her rich experience and tender sympathies she has drawn much that has been helpful and stimulating to those Sabbath-school teachers who have attended her classes.

Dr. Shearer continues his admirable course of lectures in the First Presbyterian church each morning at 10 30 and, though he sometimes lectures nearly an hour and a half, these are faithfully attended by ministers, church officers, and ladies. But neither his lectures nor those of Mrs. Bell and Miss Nowlin are as largely attended as they deserve. After discussing in the first two lectures the Personality of Christ and His Credentials, Dr. Shearer has continued in the same succeeding lectures to touch upon different phases of the life of the Saviour. Since my former writing he has discussed, in order, the following: (1) Christ's favorite mode of teaching as seen in the Parables; (2) Typology, or the types fulfilled in Christ—the ceremonial and ritual system of Moses, symbolical prophecy, the prophet, the priest, David and other Kings, the sacrificial offerings, the manna, the brazen serpent, &c.; (3) Prophecies fulfilled in Christ, too numerous and too well known to need mentioning; (4) Prophecies uttered by Christ, relating both to His own life and death and to subsequent events, and (5) The Sermon on the Mount, to which three very interesting and important lectures have been devoted. In all of these lectures Dr. Shearer has, with his accustomed fidelity, held up the grand and telling truths of Scripture and conservative orthodoxy.

There have been held a few college faculty conferences in the afternoons presided over by Prof. E. Mac Davis of the University of Tennessee. Dr. Shearer of Davidson, Dr. Hume of the Univer-sity. Dr. Bell of Alabama, and others have joined in the discussions and it is hoped that this interchange of views may not only stimulate the study of the Bible in institutions of learning where it is already used, but that it may lead to the introduction of Bible study in other institutions.

One of the most interesting features of the Assembly, especially to the writer, is the minister's conferences held in the afternoons at the First Presbyterian church. The first conference was held Tuesday afternoon and the paper of the day was read by Bishop Rondthaler of Salem on "the minister and his Master in the Personal study of the Scriptures." Others joined in the discussion and thus the occasion was made all the more pleasant. On Wednesday Dr. L. B. Turnbull led the discussion and his subject was "The Minister and his Master as a Preacher of the Truth." After Dr. Turnbull's interesting remarks, the venerable Dr. Dabney talked grandly for about ten minutes on Expository Preaching. Next afternoon Rev. Dr. T. T. Eaton, pastor of Wall Street Baptist church of Louisville, read a very spirited and spritely paper on "The Minister and his Master in his Relations to the World," and, illustrating from Moses and the lifting up of the brazen serpent, clearly showed that the one great duty of the minister to the world is to hold up Christ to sin-bitten sinners. Yesterday afternoon Rev. Dr. Alex. Sprunt of Rock Hill, S. C., gave one of the best things that the writer has heard—a paper on "The Minister and his Master as Pastor of the Flock." To attempt to do anything like justice to the paper in the space allowed me would be an injustice, hence I can only say that Rock Hill is to be congratulated on having a pastor who knows so well what a pastor's duties are—and no doubt practices what he preaches. Another conference is to be held next week.

I could write on and on, but I close by saying that it is to be very much regretted that so few ministers and other Christian workers are here to enjoy and profit by the good things that are being dispensed.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Splendid crops are reported in the Henderson section.

A new lodge of Odd Fellows was instituted at Wallace last week.

An exchange states that in the cargo of the Atlantic Transport liner Montana, which sailed last week for London, were five hundred pounds of gold ore. It was shipped by Mrs. M. A. Smith, of North Carolina, who consigned it to an agent in Swansea, Wales.

The August crop report recently issued by the State Agricultural Department gives cotton the highest average on record. The condition of the crop compared with last year's is placed at 1024.

Mr. Tinsley P. Junkin has retired from the Presbyterian College for Women leaving Miss Lily W. Long in sole charge as principal.

The first cotton bale of this year's crop to reach Wilmington was sold here on Saturday last to the Sloan Cotton Company. It came from Cameron, S. C.

Although the crops of Granville are in a most flourishing condition, yet a complaint is heard from the farmers on account of the very serious damage which the tobacco worms are inflicting on the plants, thus diminishing very considerably the quantity of wrappers that will be grown for the market this season.

THINGS USEFUL.

For prickly heat make water slightly slippery with soda and bathe with it.

Wrap your fruit jars in newspaper and set in a cool, dark place. The wrapping will prevent the fruit from bleaching.

M. C. Zinder, of Carroll Station, writes to The Sun to say that small branches or leaves of elder spread around will drive away red ants. "I always keep these leaves among my jellies and preserves" the letter says, "and I am not troubled any more."

A simple dessert for the children's table is any dried and sugared fruit, like dates of figs, chopped fine and mixed with their oatmeal or farina, or any cereal; then serve with whipped cream.

Potato Pone.—Mash seven or eight potatoes while very hot, season with tablespoonful of butter, half teaspoonful salt; beat into it with a wooden spoon a half cup of cream: this makes it very white and light. Shape into a cone. Pour over it an egg lightly beaten and allow it to stand in the hot oven five minutes: no longer.

Pepper Catsup.—Add the juice of two lemons to a quart of water. Pound two ounces of pepper-corns, half a dozen whole cloves, two heads of garlic, one small onion, and a pod of chilli together; mix in the water with a teaspoonful of curry powder and put in a preserve-kettle; set over the fire and let it simmer for half an hour; strain, bottle and cork.

"THE GREAT ASSEMBLY."

"Gone home to be with God."
So runs the news
Which comes in day by day;
I cannot choose
But picture that great host
Gone on before,
And those who now pass through
The open door.

How does it swell and grow—
That multitude!
The "many mansions" fill.
Earth's solitude
Is deeper than of yore,
But that Home-place—
How beautiful it grows
In Joy and grace!

Float down the welcome songs
That greet them there;
I hear them from afar
Through the still air.
Ah! happy they, at rest,
Who rough ways trod.
Absent from us, they are
At home with God.

How safe, how free, how glad
They all must be!
They find themselves across
The dreaded sea.
The burden of their care
Has been laid down,
The cross they bore exchanged
For victor's crown.

Yet is their greatest joy
That they can see
The face of Him who died
To set them free.
We weep, but how can they
Do aught but sing?
No tears have they, whose eyes
Have seen the King.

So little while have we
To mourn and wait!
Christ has no orphaned souls
Left desolate;
Let us then weep no more,
But lift our eyes,
And watch till day shall break
Across our skies.

—Marianne Farningham, in Christian World.

The Master's work may make weary feet, but it leaves the spirit glad.

REV. S. M. RANKIN.

We introduce to our readers this week Rev. Samuel M. Rankin, of Red Springs, N. C. While he is one of our young men, having been in the ministry only three years, yet he has abounded in labors and the Lord has greatly blessed him in his work.

He was born in Guilford county, N. C., July 30th, 1864, on the old original Rankin homestead. His great-grandfather John Rankin, entered this tract of land about the year 1759, and it still remains the property of the Rankin family.

Both parents are of Scoth-Irish descent. His father Robert C. Rankin is an elder in Bethel Presbyterian church and by his support and influence has been, and is, a great power for good in the Master's service. His mother's maiden name was Mary A. McLean, daughter of Col. Joel McLean. She was reared under the ministry and tuition of Rev. Eli W. Caruthers, D. D.

The subject of this sketch was baptized by Rev. J. C. Alexander, whose preaching and influence did much toward impressing his mind and heart with the importance of devoting his life to the Lord's service. He made a public profession of his faith and united with the church just before his sixteenth birthday, and about the same time the Holy Spirit pressed upon him the call to the ministry.

His father not being able to give his children the advantages of a liberal education, Samuel was left to a great extent to the resources of his own energies and determination to secure these privileges. For some time the way seemed dark and gloomy, but after a few years of prayer and toiling the way opened for him to enter a preparatory school, and then Davidson College. While in school and college his vacations were spent in earning money to enable him to continue his studies. During his last vacation at college the Y. M. C. A. sent him as their delegate to Moody's summer conference of Y. M. C. A. workers at Northfield, Mass.

After leaving college he became principal of Swain High School, Stedman, N. C., and taught one year before entering the seminary.

His theological education was received at Union Seminary, Va. He was invited to supply the churches of Mebane and Bethlehem in Orange Presbytery during his first vacation, which he did with acceptance. Seventeen were received into the membership of these churches that summer. He was also instrumental in bringing before Orange Presbytery the advisability and importance of establishing a Presbyterian High School for boys at Mebane which was done at the following meeting of that Presbytery.

His second vacation was spent in the field which he now occupies at Red Springs, N. C. At the close of this summer's work he was invited to remain and become pastor, but wishing to complete his course at the seminary he declined the invitation; however he consented to become pastor the following January on condition that the churches would grant him a four months vacation in which to complete his theological course, beginning the first of the succeeding January.

He was ordained to the full work of the ministry, February 22nd, 1894, and soon after was installed pastor of Red Springs, Philadelphus and Antioch churches. During the three years which have followed these churches have greatly prospered under his ministry. Each church has had a most precious revival of religion and one hundred and seventy-two have been added to the membership of the churches, and thirty-nine families have been added to the pastorate. Antioch church has been painted and a nice chapel built at Aberdeen. Red Springs church has been thoroughly overhauled inside, and Philadelphus is now being remodeled. The churches are all in good working condition and large and attentive congregations assemble every Sabbath to hear his plain practical sermons.

Mr. Rankin is an earnest, effective preacher and fearlessly declares the whole counsel of God. His voice is clear and delivery good and Christ the Saviour is the great theme of his preaching. He is also a faithful and conscientious pastor. His people are very much attached to him and appreciate his labors of love.

In addition to his work in his large pastorate, Mr. Rankin has done much for the cause of Christian Education in Fayetteville Presbytery. It was by his influence and personal effort that Red Springs was enabled to make the bid which secured the location of Presbytery's school for girls. Then as agent of that institution he raised the money to erect and equip the buildings, at the same time acting as Chairman of the Building Committee and Secretary and Treasurer of the Board of Trustees. It may truly be said that Red Springs Seminary of Fayetteville Presbytery owes its existence in a great measure to his hard work and energetic and business management.

On January 18th, 1894, Mr. Rankin was happily married to Miss Mary Lee Wharton, of Greensboro, N. C., and much of his success is due to her counsel and encouragement.

[To the regret of his many friends, Mr. Rankin accepted a call on April last to the pastorate of the church at Jackson, Ky., where he is effectively serving his Master in his chosen profession.

That the sketch was written before the change just referred to will be evident to the reader. ED. N. C. P.]

The remedy for the Church's barrenness is to be found in old-fashioned faith and repentance, and not in any new theories or fads. We need not so much new measures or new theories, or new organizations, or new men as a new infusion of spiritual life which comes by faith in Christ and repentance through the power of the Holy Ghost.—J. S. Watkins.

NORTHFIELD NOTES.

No. 2.

Our party planned to take in several points of interest and have so far succeeded by going first to Baltimore and from there using a summer excursion ticket, one of many arranged by the Pennsylvania railroad with stop-over privileges. Our stop over for Northfield is at Miller's Falls, nine miles away. Special rates to Northfield and return direct or by boat on Long Island Sound can be had from Washington and all points north and east of that starting point. It is worth while for business men to come here for physical and mental rest and escape from the cares of daily life. The atmosphere is pure and invigorating in these Berkshire Hills. The views in every direction can hardly be surpassed. The accommodations and expenses can be of any sort and to suit any taste or pocket book.

The young men, and many grey-haired men feel young enough in that way to enjoy the Camp Northfield where tents are pitched in the pines in the sound of a babbling brook and well up the mountain side. Four persons occupy a tent and the cost to each tenter is only five dollars a week. All about the Seminary grounds tents are pitched and men, women and children live at the cost of five dollars a week, each, by renting a tent and taking meals in one of the halls. This Northfield Seminary was founded by Mr. Moody for the education of girls at a small cost, and where girls can do much to work their way to a liberal education. The buildings are open as boarding places during the several conferences. The last conference for the summer is held early in August for Christian workers, especially for Bible study and the deepening of spiritual life.

For this year the leaders and chief speakers are two, Rev. G. Campbell Morgan and Rev. G. H. C. MacGregor. Both are pastors in London of Presbyterian churches. Mr. Morgan is a Welshman, lately a pastor in Birmingham, and Mr. MacGregor is a Scotchman not long ago a pastor in Aberdeen. They are young men, neither of them being thirty-five years of age. They are carrying forward the teachings here for several years recently past. That teaching is profoundly spiritual and above all Scriptural. These men are examples of what they teach and preach. They give the chief addresses of the day at the morning hour, comparing spiritual things with spiritual, and with the standing challenge to the great audiences to search the Scriptures daily whether these things are so.

Into this company come many missionaries at work both at home and abroad. The evening meeting is often given up to consider the cause of missionaries. This year these meetings have been the very best of the conference. Mr. V. D David, the Tamil evangelist of India, brought to Christ nineteen years ago by the instrumentality of his wife is here and holds a service every day. God has greatly used him in many lands. It is said that he has been the means of bringing ten thousand or more to Christ. A native of Natal, a Zulu, and his wife also a native, both well educated and earnest workers, are here and have been heard. Indeed, representatives of all lands and evangelical churches are here to speak for Christ and His cause.

The name of H. Grattan Guinness, founder and head of the missionary training school of East London, is, or should be, well known to all Christians. His son who is both a physician for the body and a preacher of the Gospel, and who has been so largely indentified with the workof the Congo Valley, is here and has presided at the missionary meetings. His words are mighty and his direction of the meetings has been to make them successful.

Dr. W. J. Erdman, who is well known in Wilmington, daily at four o'clock in the afternoon answers questions sent to him in writing, as few men have the training, skill and wisdom to do so well.

Last Sabbath there were meetings at every hour from six in the morning to half past ten at night. Of these and many other meetings and means of spiritual help or guidance the visitor is invited to take his choice and as much as is good for each one. There is enough for all, and in such kind that no one need fail to receive a rich portion.

A. D. M.

OUR OBITUARY columns tell the sad tale that Little Kate McKelway has passed from earth to Heaven. The announcement sent a shaft both sure and true into our inmost soul. As we knew her she was a goodly child; sweet and pure and gentle as the breath of Heaven. God pity the bereaved!

THE FACT that three of the faculty of Princeton University—all of them Presbyterians, and one of them, a Doctor of Divinity—signed a petition asking for the licensure of a barroom in Princeton Inn has justly caused a great deal of stir. Other petitioners to the total number of twelve also signed—some of them being wives or other relatives of professors—among the signers too was Grover Cleveland late President of the United States. How we do hate to write that! The terrible significance of this matter consists in the fact that without these signatures the license to sell liquors could not have been obtained. We have no heart to comment upon it further than to say that the shameful act of these individuals, does not indicate that the Presbyterian Church endorses their conduct—nor does the act of the professors brand Princeton University as favoring the liquor traffic, for there are fifty professors or more in the institution. Nevertheless we wish it could be that the University would express officially condemnation of the course of these professors.

It is heart-sickening to note the indifference that seems to exist in church courts, sometimes, with regard to the liquor-traffic. At times one might almost suppose from the agitation produced by a resolution looking to restriction that the church was opposed to total abstinence. Is it not possible for the Church to take a bold, decided, unmistakable stand against any form of alcoholic intemperance, or anything that leads thereto, without getting into partizan politics? We believe it is.

WE ANNOUNCED last week the death of Mrs. Little, in Japan, and promised publication of the letter containing notice of the sad bereavement. We give it here;

KARUIZAWA, JAPAN,
July 27th, 1897.

A shade has been cast over our little missionary community summering in this little mountain village, by the death of Mrs. Pauline DuBose Little, the fair young wife of Rev. Lacy Little. She died at four o'clock on Sunday, 25th inst., having been confined to her bed less than twenty-four hours; cause of death acute Bright's disease. The remains were taken to Yokohoma for interment. Dr. Worth, Rev. Messrs. Haden, Hudson, Buchanan and Price with Mrs. Haden, and Misses Wimbish, Patton and Torrance, accompanied Mr. Little on the sad and wearying journey. Rev. Messrs. McAlpine and Grinnan will probably reach Yokohoma at same time from Kobe. Dr. DuBose was expected in Japan this weeks. Mrs. Dubose and Miss DuBose are to return from America in a few week. To the stricken ones in other lands hundreds of hearts go out in sympathy.

Including children there are forty-four Southern Presbyterians here, twenty-three of whom are from China."

Mrs. Little was born in Shanghai, in January, 1876. After graduating from Mary Baldwin Seminary with highest honors, she returned to China, reaching Shanghai on the 10th of September, 1895. Hers was the distinction of being the first child of a missionary of our Church to return to the field for service. She was united in marriage to Rev. Lacy L. Little on June 30th, 1896.

IN THE DEATH of Prof. Vinson Davidson College has lost one of the finest scholars and purest of Christian gentlemen. For particulars we refer to Davidson Notes.

Charity indeed we owe to the dead as well as to the living; but not that erroneous charity by which truth is violated and undeserved commendation lavished on those whom truth could no longer injure.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

HAMPDEN-SIDNEY, VA.

The next session of Union Theological Seminary will open on Wednesday, Sept. 1st, at four o'clock, with an address by Rev. C. C. Hersman, D. D. After the address the matriculation and enrollment of students will take place. We wish to take this opportunity to refresh the minds of the students in regard to the new rule concerning rooms. No room will be held for a student longer than two days after the opening of the session unless the intendant or faculty receive a notice from the student concerning his tardiness and the reasons therefor. Students not complying with this rule will be compelled to take such rooms as may be vacant when they arrive.

There is a rare treat in store for the students of the Seminary this year in the lectures on Hymnology which are to be delivered during the session by the Rev. W. S. Lacy, D. D., of Norfolk. No man in the Church is more competent than Dr. Lacy to discuss the great hymns and hymn writers with fullness of learning and correctness of taste and in such a way as to promote, through our students for the ministry, the spiritual end of praise.

Rev. James A. Worden, D. D., of Philadelphia, who is perhaps the best lecturer on Sunday-school work in the world, is also under promise to deliver a series of lectures at the seminary on that important subject, at a time not yet fixed.

Rev. W. W. Moore, D. D., has been appointed to deliver the Reinicke Lecture at the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Alexandria, Va., next December. This is a gratifying expression of fraternity and appreciation on the part of our Episcopal brethren.

There has been a marked increase in the number of inquiries and applications from prospective students since the announcement was made that the seminary would shortly remove to its new buildings in Richmond. The intendant's book shows a larger number of applications from new students, for rooms than we have had in years.

We really think our

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Once more within the last two years Davidson College mourns the loss of one of her ablest and most popular Professors. At three o'clock on the morning of the 20th, Prof. William Daniel Vinson, M. A., LL.D., who has filled the chair of Mathematics here for the past fourteen years, died suddenly of heart-disease.

Prof. Vinson was born in Sumter county S. C., in 1849. At the tender age of three he was left an orphan by the death of both his father and mother. An uncle and aunt took him for years into their home. When a mere lad he went to Chester, and lived with relatives there till the close of the war. For the years immediately succeeding the surrender he attended Washington and Lee University, then presided over by that idol of the young men of the South, Gen. Robert E. Lee. As a student at Washington and Lee he was distinguished as the ablest and most versatile man in the University, winning the Robinson Medal, an honorary scholarship, and the Cincinnati Oration. In 1872 he was awarded the degree of Master of Arts, and appointed tutor in Greek. In 1874 he was elected Professor in the Female College of Waco, Texas, and a few years later Professor of Mathematics in Austin College, Texas. Here he remained with growing reputation till 1883, when he was selected to fill the same chair at Davidson College.

During the fourteen years of his life at Davidson he was never absent from a single recitation, and undoubtedly his unremitting labors were the indirect cause of the breaking down of his originally rugged and virile constitution. Last spring he began to suffer with heart trouble, but continued to perform all his duties with steadfast punctuality till the end of the term. During the vacation the disease assumed a more threatening form, and for days his death was expected at any moment. Again his wonderful constitution rallied from the attack, and he seemed to be slowly recovering his strength, when the end came suddenly and he was called to his reward.

Prof. Vinson was a remarkable man, of unusual powers as a mathematician, gifted with the most remarkable memory I have ever known, widely read in English Literature and Political Economy, yet modest, unassuming, and one of the most approachable of men. This hearty goodfellowship, joined to sound judgment and rare conversational powers, made him always popular and much respected on the campus. In all matters of college management he was wise, firm, and conservative. During his illness he frequently declared his entire willingness to go if the Lord had no more work for him to do, and he died in the full triumph of the Christian's faith.

The funeral was held on Saturday morning, conducted by Rev. A. T. Graham, Dr. Shearer, and Rev. Mr. Irving. The class of '97, half of whose members were present, sorrowfully bore the body of their honored instructor to his last resting-place, which his many friends covered deep with flowers.

Steps have already been taken by the Faculty and the Executive Committee to fill his place by selecting one of his old students and favorites, who has distinguished himself at Johns Hopkins as a mathematician, and made a wide reputation as an unusually gifted teacher. His name will be announced in a few days, and all confidently predict that the mantle of his distinguished predecessor will not fall upon unworthy shoulders.

A teacher who can inspire his students with love for their studies, is a great teacher. If, in addition, he can inspire them with a love of truth and rectitude and with respect for their fellow students and make them desire their own good and the good of humanity, this is a teacher that words cannot sufficiently praise. This was the secret of Dr. Arnold's teaching, to make his boys brave and high-minded scholars and men. This power is not given to all teachers; let us be thankful if we have some who do it in part.—Southern Churchman.

There are two things which we must uphold and hold first, the sacrifice of Christ upon the cross and the priesthood of Christ in heaven.—Andrew A. Bonar.

Nothing holds a man like his word, and nothing so fully fixes the course of action of the Lord our God as His own promise.—Selected.

The Wilmington Messenger in that spirit of enterprise which actuates its proprietors, Jackson and Bell, has issued a very large illustrated four page extra edition showing the principal public buildings and private residences on Ocean View and Carolina beaches and the attractive objects of interest at these places and other summer resorts near Wilmington. They have issued several thousand copies of the extra. This is the energy that deserves success.

By the way, the month of September is the pleasantest and for other reasons the most attractive on the coast. Ocean View hotel will remain open as long as the travel holds on and the Sea Coast Company will continue to give dispatch with ample accommodation and willing service. The fishermen already are patrolling the coast on the lookout for the mullet run and seine hauling soon will be in full swing.

WHAT SHALL I DO WITH MY BOY?

No question of greater importance than this confronts parents. He who solves it satisfactorily is a benefactor to his race. The boy must be educated to accomplish much in life. Growing up in ignorance, he must be a hewer of wood, and a drawer of water to those more highly favored in intellectual development than he. Hoping to help the parent solve this problem, we call your attention to a School well equipped to give your son all the help he needs in the way of academic training. We speak what we know and testify to what we have seen, when we say that the Fayetteville Military Academy offers the best opportunities for the moral and mental training of the youth of this State, and of all who may wish to avail themselves of its benefits.

The official report of the remarkable attendance last year of the students of this school, at Church and Sunday-school justifies the belief that this record is not surpassed.

1st. The moral and religious influences of the School are first-class, while its discipline is calculated to build up moral character, without which education is a curse. While the school is in no sense sectarian, or denominational, the principal is a Christian gentlemen who places a high value on Christian character.

2nd. The literary advantages are second to none. The principal, Col. T. J. Drewry, is ably assisted by a faculty of well qualified teachers and the work done is thorough and faithful.

3rd. The location of the school is very desirable. It enjoys a healthful climate, and is in the midst of a refined and cultured people. While there was whisky sold in the town last year in the open Saloon, such was the discipline of the School that no student was ever known to visit a saloon, or indulge in any intoxicating liquors. Now there are no saloons in the city.

In view of the above facts, and many others that might be mentioned, if you have a boy to educate, we take great pleasure in recommending the Fayetteville Military Academy to your favorable consideration.

THE TRAINING OF LABORERS FOR THE MEXICAN HARVEST.

BY THE REV. H. B. PRATT, LAREDO, TEXAS.

MR. EDITOR:—At the request of Dr. Craig, I beg leave to lay before your readers, in advance of the September collection for the cause of Home Missions, some facts in reference to our Bible Training School in Laredo, and plead for a heartier support of this and of our Texas-Mexican work in general, by our people at home.

The idea of such a school and its practical inception arose out of an imperious necessity. Even if we had the means to call to our Texas work preachers trained in Mexico, it is only here and there we can find one adapted to our ideas of the work to be done. Indeed, without exception, all the missions are greatly disappointed with the practical results of ministerial training in Mexico, and are casting about for some radical change in the system hitherto pursued. Our plan is our own and on entirely new lines, but the results of eight months experiment on these lines convince me and all who take the trouble to look into it, that we are on the right track for procuring the most efficient workmen at the least cost of time and money, and of putting self-support within the reach of our poor and scattered congregations.

In our Laredo Bible School we receive no boys, and take only men of matured character able to read and write, of good natural abilities, of tested religious character, already given to Christian work, and wishing to qualify themselves for better service therein. It is fair to assume that if God has a work among the Mexicans for us to do, he will himself provide us with suitable men to carry it on. It is His to furnish the laborers of natural and spiritual endowments for the work, and ours to give them proper training, and then set them to the work. If God does not furnish the men, I do not think we are justified in furnishing substitutes of our own. I believe the bane of ministerial education in our Mexican work (and probably in our Roman Catholic missions generally) has been the taking of boys and untried men, and educating them for the work, according to our home ideas of an all around education, and with the security of a "comfortable support" out of the mission treasury—as at home we would not dream of doing.

So we have made a new departure in Texas, and the three students God has given us to begin with, together with one I hope soon to get from a Cuban prison, after eighteen months of ineffectual effort, are as good specimens of Christian manhood, and of as decided promise and natural capacity as I care to hope for. And I do not see why, if this work is of God, rather than of men, out of some twelve or fifteen thousand communicants in Mexico, our different missions should not expect to have at least fifty men a year, of equal promise, who with two years of thorough Bible training, would be able to go to work in the most effective way, more on a level with the people they belong to, and are to serve, and with far less drain on the missionary treasury.

The education we give is strictly Biblical, all other education coming in incidentally. Two hours a day and often more are spent in reading the Bible in course, the modern version of course, which, with all its present defects, competent judges declare to be the simplest and most comprehensible ever made—receiving such suggestions and explanations, the while as may be needed, an hour is devoted daily to memorizing Scripture; special books and topics are are specially studied; the Shorter Catechism with analysis and proof texts is given due attention; Bible doctrine in biblical shape supplies the place of systematic theology, while Prof. Torrey's "How to Bring Men to Christ," which has been translated and published in Spanish furnishes them with the theory of Christian work, which they put in practice among the ten thousand Mexicans in Laredo, and in the neighborhood and open-air meetings in which they lead or take part several nights in the week. Two years of constant and enthusiastic study of Bible and of practical work will come nearer the three years of training our Lord gave his apostles (the rest of them did not fare so well) then any course of theological training I know of, for our work.

Having devoted most of my life to the study of the Bible and of the Spanish language, I have experienced no difficulty in awakening the deepest and most unflagging interest of these young men in the study of the Bible, and this in turn has drawn out and unfolded their naturally good powers, as I am certain no other study could do, promoting their intelligence in every line, and developing preaching abilities such as in another year, will with the favor and blessing of God, render them pleasant and effective speakers any where.

The Rev. Messrs. McMurray and Walls published some weeks ago in "The Laredo Times" a report of their examination of my students, near the close of our first session of only eight months, in which they say among other agreeable things, "that on a strict grading they would average from 80 to 90 per cent," and add, "We are deeply impressed with the evident earnestness, zeal, good spirit and solid Christian character of these three young men."

On this solid basis, then, of Bible study and practical training we propose to send out three young men and others who shall enter, raised but little socially above their former condition of life and leave them to do the rest for themselves, by a course of self-education; which will certainly determine whether the Lord calls them to the ministry of the gospel or not. The young men educated thus at expense of Presbytery are to labor under its direction for at least three years, if it has work for them; otherwise they are at liberty to go where they please.

The cost of this kind of education has been about $6 a month for bed and board, fuel, lights and washing (or $120 for the two years of ten months each) the school being on an "industrial" basis, and everything but laundry work being done among ourselves. If young men can elsewhere be educated in the whole round of Bible truth and practical Christian work in two years time and at the like cost I have yet to learn of it. The board of students in our Tuscaloosa colored institute is reported at $8 per month and the course is perhaps five or six years. Our foreign missionary committtee expends seven or eight thousand dollars on its Mexican work and that is little enough, but Dr. Craig writes that that committee could not see their way clear to promise us more than $1,900 the current financial year for our work among the 100,000 Mexicans on the Texas side of the Rio Grande; identically the same work, and for the same people except that that goes under the name of Foreign Missions while we call this Home Missions! Let then our people hear this earnest appeal, and come quickly to our help. We need a house of our own with room for the students who desire to qualify for work along the lines indicated. We need books, wall maps, and other conveniences. We need a day-school for our own children and to attract the children of outsiders and their parents as well. We ask help in our Master's name and for His work. To all who desire to do the most good for the least money the work presented ought to be an attractive one.

CENTENNIAL OF BUFFALO CHURCH.

The Centennial of Buffalo church, Fayetteville Presbytery, celebrated August 12th and 13th, was an occasion of note, enjoyable and edifying, beyond the expectation of the most sanguine. A very large crowd, representing almost every condition and age of life, assembled to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the venerable church. It was a great gathering of the Scotch clans. The spacious church was crowded and many, unable to get seats, spent the time socially in the magnificent grove. The weather was beautiful. General good feeling and fraternal love and greeting prevailed. Here families met after long separation, and friends in youth here again clasped hands as yet friends in age. After an address of welcome by the pastor, Rev. H. G. Hill, D. D., preached the centennial sermon. His theme was, "God's Love for His Church," from Isaiah 43 and 44. The speaker was at his best and preached with great clearness, eloquence, pathos and power.

Rev. K. M. McIntyre followed in the afternoon with a scholarly, concise and logical address on "The Polity of the Presbyterian Church."

The next speaker was Prof. Alexander McIver, a venerable and learned father in Israel with a vivid recollection of the past. He carried us back even to the days of "camp-meetings" at Buffalo and interested us in many reminiscenses down the decades. The first speaker for the second day was Rev. J. M. Wicker. He handled his subject, "The Distinctive Doctrines of the Presbyterian Church" in a very comprehensive and effective manner. He was followed by Rev. W. S. Lacy, D. D., who delivered the historical address. This is a glorious history briefly and charmingly written. The writer's diction is beautiful, his method of arrangement excellent and his delivery of this production, in which he has done the church an invaluable service, was in a most effective manner. This address will be published in pamphlet form. The last speaker was Rev. D. N. McLauchlin on "The Glorious Past and the Hope for the Future." He recounted briefly but graphically the glorious past of the Presbyterian Church. His eloquence of speech, earnestness of manner, and attractive presentation of facts held the large audience in rapt attention from first to last. Among the visiting ministers were Revs. A. N. Ferguson, M. N. McIver, D. M. McIver and W. F. Thom. We mention among distinguished educators present, Prof. Jno. E. Kelly and Dr. Chas. D. McIver, President Normal and Industrial College.

A CLOUD RECEIVED HIM.

Our Lord withdrew from visible presence among His disciples and His ascending majesty was enveloped in a cloud that received Him out of their sight. Thus He parted from them plainly till a glorious robe veiled Him from the eyes of the wondering men of Galilee assembled on the mount of Olives. His ascension was open, a real transaction for mortal eyes to behold. Had He secretly left the earth at some time and place where there were no human witnesses there might have been more room for uncertain conjecture and imaginative speculation as to what had become of the risen Christ. In open day, before His chosen ones, He stood and with outspread hands, while in the act of blessing them, finally He leaves the scenes of His earthly labors, sufferings, teachings and triumphs.

Fit ending, indeed, was this to all that was to be witnessed! Clouds are emblems of glorious majesty. They robe the heavens with tracery of ineffable glory. You have seen the indescribable beauty, the grandeur, and amethyst radiance, and tinted splendor of the cloud-banked sky at sunset. Nothing else can so much remind you of what you imagine must be the entrance gateway to the beautiful city of God, who clothes Himself with such clouds of light as with a garment. Great mysteries lie behind the clouds of heavenly covering that shut out from our view what is beyond as yet unseen and eternal. The cloud that received our ascending Jesus was a wonder to the gazing disciples, and it has not lost its winning power to beckon our expectant souls towards the throne of the great Victor, the Captain of our salvation.

The overwhelmed followers of Jesus stood disappointed at first, while they looked vainly for the immediate return of their Lord to the earth. Like the astounded sons of the prophets, when they saw the chariot of fire take up Elijah, and expected to see the vision completed in his coming down again, so the disciples were not prepared to accept this miraculous ascension of Jesus as the end of their earthly intercourse with Him. A special embassy of angels was required to tell them that He was gone into the heavens, there to remain till He shall come again in like glory arrayed to judge the world at the end of time. At the birth of Jesus the heavenly visitants had a message for men. And now another commisson is given them to notify these men that Christ had really ascended to the exalted throne of the King of glory.

Behind the cloud there is much of interest for our souls. He is not there as a disinterested absent one for those that He left on the earth. There our dear Redeemer dwells with full purpose of meeting all His promises to the members of His Church. Thence, He is giving gifts unto men. He is there preparing a place for us in the many mansions of our Father's house. Our glorious High Priest has entered within the veil with all prevailing intercessory power. Jesus, our forerunner, is more for us there, since the cloud received him, than He would have been if He had not transcended the bounds of human vision. In the highest honor and power, He reigns head over all things, for the sake of His body, the Church. The enrobing cloud received our ascending Saviour till He comes to judge the world.—German Reformed Messenger.

LITTLE THINGS OF LIFE.

Why is it that we so easily forget that the little things of life are what make it easy or hard? A few pleasant words, a warm handclasp, a cordial letter, are simple things, but they are mighty in their influence on the lives of those about us, adding a ray of hope to many disconsolate hearts, giving a bit of courage to disappointed, weary ones, and helping to make our own lives sweeter at the same time. Few people realize how much the little attentions of everyday life mean to their associates in the home, the church, the business place. It is generally a lack of consideration which makes one forget the tiny pleasantries, but lack of consideration is really one form of selfishness, and selfishness is not considered a desirable quality. Remember that the little things in life, whether good or bad, count for more with those we love than we ever know, and we should be watchful of our actions and our words.—Sel.

A man lives by believing something, not by debating and arguing about things.

Do live the life of faith. Begin to live it now, looking out for, and making use of, God's supplies, and learning day by day how rich and strong and glad that life is, which goes without scrip or change of coat, because it, gathers up as it goes the things which God hath prepared for loyal and loving hearts that wait for him.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Duncan Rose, than whom there are few pleasanter writers or more careful delineators of striking or important incidents, or writers more exact in statements of historical facts, gives the public thro' the American Historical Register an article entitled "Flora McDonald and the Scottish Highlanders in America." In the article which is illustrated, we have views of Cross Creek, interesting of itself, but specially famous as the locality of the first residence of Flora McDonald in this country—of old Barbeque church, where Flora and Allan her husband worshiped—and other views, which with appropriate notes accompany and verify what we have said.

We read the article with special pleasure, because it told what every Scotsman and his sons and his grandsons ought to know and never to forget of one who was—we will never believe otherwise—one of the grandest heroines that history records; notwithstanding the life she saved was hardly worth the saving. Mr. Rose may think what she did was "not very remarkable, nor very unselfish, nor extremely dangerous," but not so have we learned it and we can truly say—if it is an illusion we are under, we do not want it dispelled. Not very unselfish! we cannot think it!

But despite disagreement with our author here, we find ourselves in full sympathy in the vindication of the record of the Highlanders in the Revolutionary war—a vindication which necessarily ennobles them, as a people who having sworn to their own hurt would not change, who having vowed allegiance to their persecutors yet would not forswear themselves and would even risk life itself that they might be true to their words, counting this their greatest title to honor that they never proved false to any engagement.

We trust Mr. Rose will give us more sketches for he wields "the pen of a ready writer."

Sir John Skelton, the author known by the nom de plume of "Shirley," is dead. He was born at Edinburgh, in 1831, and was educated at St. Andrew's and Edinburgh University. He was an advocate of the Scottish bar, but retired on account of ill health and accepted the office of secretary of the Poor Law Board for Scotland, which office he held from 1868 to 1891. Since 1894 he has served as Vice-President and Chairman of the local Government Board (Scotland). After his retirement from the Scottish bar he was a constant contributor to periodical literature. Wilmington Churches:

First Church:—Rev. Dr. P. H. Hoge, the pastor, preached in the forenoon of of last Sabbath.

St. Andrews:—Rev. A. D. McClure, who has just returned from Northfield occupied his pulpit morning and evening.

Immanuel Church:—Rev. Byron Clark, of Mt. Washington, Md., preached here last Sabbath. Rev. P. C. Morton holds special services during the present week.

The Rev. W. F. Thom, pastor.

Pineville:—We have just closed one of the most successful meetings held in Pineville in years. The latter part of July, "Uncle Joe" Hopper, the well known evangelist of Kentucky, came to the assistance of the pastor (Rev. W. K. Forsyth) and for two weeks preached morning and night to large congregations. His preaching was the old story of sin and grace, plain, practical, pungent and the spirit honored His word. No "modern methods" were used. There were twenty additions to our church and one to the Methodist. Three infants were baptized at the closing of communion service. The other denominations of the town as well as our church were greatly revived. The Lord has done great things for us. To Him be all the praise.

Steele Creek:—The midsummer week of worship began at this church Sabbath, August 1st. The Rev. M. McG Shields of Gastonia assisted the pastor, preaching twice a day until Friday morning. His sermons were clear, forceful and Scriptural, delivered with great earnestness and enjoyed by the large congregations present. The pastor took up the work Friday morning The meeting closed with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper on Sabbath, August 8th. Four was added to the church on profession of faith.

Beatie's Chapel:—The pastor commenced a week of worship at this outport of Steele Creek church Sabbath night, August 8th, preaching twice daily to good-sized congregations. Considerable interest was manifested. The meeting closed Sabbath, August 15th, with the administration of the Lord's Supper, the addition of nine to the roll of the church—the baptism of four infants and two adults.

There have been sixteen additions to Steele Creek church since April 1st, and in spite of severe losses from death the membership is now 602.

Mecklenburg Presbytery:—A called meeting was held in Charlotte on Tuesday of last week. Rev. A. J. Dorritee was received into the Presbytery and Rev. J. H. Grey dismissed to Orange Presbytery. Mr. Walter N. Walsh was received as a candidate for the gospel ministry.

Ellisville:—The church here had four additions on the first Sabbath, inst., two of whom came from the Methodist church. Rev. R. F. Campbell, pastor.

LOUISIANA.

New Iberia:—Rev. W. J. McMillan has resigned charge of this church.

TENNESSEE.

Davis Chapel:—A meeting held by Rev. Wm. Thorne, of Tiptonville. Thirteen professions.

New Hope:—A meeting here conducted by Rev. J. C. Garth and Rev. J. T. Rothrock. Six additions and the church greatly revived.

Second Church, Bristol:—Within a few weeks past there has been a revival of interest here and ten persons have united with this church—seven upon profession and three by letter. Rev. Cochran Preston is pastor.

Bethel Church, near Lexington:—Three persons added to the membership recently. Fruits in part of a preaching service in which Rev. R. E. Douglas assisted the pastor, Rev. C. T. Thomson.

KENTUCKY.

Jellico:—The new church recently organized in Jellico, Transylvania Presbytery, has now thirty-four members. It was organized about a month ago by Synod's evangelist, Rev. Henry Miller, assisted by Revs. Wm. Crow, J. H. Hopper and W. K. Forsyth. For the present it will be under the charge of Mr. Forsyth.

GENERAL.

The last annual report of the Mission to Lepers in India and the East, says that more 200 of the inmates of the different leper asylums have been baptized, and that there are now over one thousand professed Christians in these asylums. There are 900 adults and children in the homes of the mission, and about 1,700 in institutions under the care of other organizations but assisted by it.

The Baltimore Sun gives us this piece of time news: Two missionaries of the Presbyterian Church have sent to the Klondike gold fields. They are the Rev. S. Hall Young, of Wooster, Ohio, and the Rev. George A. McEwen, of Farmington, Mo. Soon after the rush to the newly found region of gold mines began, the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions considered the advisability of sending ministers out to the Yukon territory, and as a result of those deliberations the two missionaries started upon their journey through the wilds of Alaska on Friday last. The selection of the two men best fitted for the undertaking was left to the Rev. D. J. McMillan, the corresponding secretary of the board, and in the Rev. Messrs. Young and McEwen he has alighted upon two vigorous and aggressive ministers of the church, who have both had many years' experience in Alaska in teaching the Gospel to the natives. The missionaries will proceed by way of the Chilkoot Pass to their destination.

During the last twelve months so the news comes from the veteran missionary, Rev. John G. Paton—there has been an ingathering in the New Hebrides of eleven hundred and twenty souls.

By the death of Mrs. Pringle, of Inverness. several large charitable bequests under her husband's will now become payable, including about £2,000 to the Presbyterian Orphan Society, Belfast; £500 to the poor of the First Presbyterian church, Larne; £500 to the poor of the Second Presbyterian church, Larne, and £1,000 to the Society for the Orphans of Presbyterian Ministers and Missionaries.

WAY AND AIM.

Life and its relations to-day are often very complex. The command of the Scriptures to Christians is: "Be ye separate." Yet true children of God, because of the complexity of life and its varied relations sometimes "get things mixed" instead of always keeping separate. They are often in doubt, and sometimes in delusion, as to just what they may or may not lawfully do. Some allow and encourage what others condemn. Now in such a case what are we to do? How are we to settle the matter as to whether or not such and such a line of conduct is right?

Remembering that every true Christian wants to know the right and do it, I believe that a single sentence in Matthew Henry's Commentary (on the 14th chapter of Romans) contains a principle which, properly applied, will solve every such problem for those who are true Christians. "If we would know what way we walk in, we must inquire what end we walk toward," he says. We walk in the right way, when we walk toward the right end; and we walk in the wrong way, when we walk toward the wrong end. And the right end toward which we must walk is the glory of God our Father, and the way and path in which we walk must agree with the end toward which we are walking. "Do all to the glory of God." And what you can't do to God's glory you'd better not do at all. D. J. C.

THE SUFFERING IN INDIA.

Owing to the diverse reports sent out by the different agencies in India, in regard to the true condition of that country, the Cosmopolitan determined to send a trustworthy representative out there whose mission should be to give to the public accurate information regarding the situation. Mr Julian Hawthorne accepted this dangerous post, and last February sailed for India. For three months he was there in company with the officials of the British government and the missionaries. He went with them in their regular rounds, into the dens of the cities and the villages of the districts. He was thus enabled to acquire accurate knowledge of the plague, and of the way it is being treated by the two agencies, viz: The State and the Church. Mr. Hawthorne declares, that the natives hide the true facts of their condition from the government agents, and therefore the agent cannot give a correct estimate of that condition. "What he sees is never the whole truth, or the worst side of the truth, and often is not the truth at all. The only persons of white blood in India who know what is going on, are the missionaries, for they go about quietly everywhere, see everything and cannot be deceived or put off the scent by native subordinates. Nor are the latter much concerned to deceive them, for they know that what a missionary says would not be accepted by the government if it contradicted the report of its own agent. A missionary in the eye of the government is a worthy, but sentimental personage, whose sympathies are readily worked upon, and who knows nothing of political economy. The weight to be attached to their assertions is therefore, the government thinks, entitled to the respect which belongs to good intentions, but little more. Now anything further from the truth, than is this prepossession, on the part of the government, would be hard to conceive. It was my great, good fortune, to be thrown with the missionaries from the start, and I was able to compare their methods with those of the government people. It was as if you should sit with the audience in the front of a theatre and witness the performance from that point of view and then should go behind the scenes and see the reality. The first is the position of the government, the latter, that of the missionaries. "It is not the government's fault, but its misfortune."

He then tells in graphic language of the sufferings of the starving, plague-stricken millions, of whom more than eight millions have perished already. For the relief of those who have not yet succumbed, he says:

"There is one thing we can do to help India, and one only. We can send money. If we would (and how easily we could) raise a hundred million dollars, and cause as much as possible of it to be distributed through the various missionaries on the ground—if we do this, we would almost dispose of any further dauger of starvation in India. The missionaries do not work through the native officials; the money they distribute is given by them directly into the hands of the starving persons themselves. Of course the number of missionaries is very limited, and the number of persons they can reach, correspondingly so. Send money and it will enable those who need grain to buy it. If we wont send a hundred million dollars, let us send fifty, twenty, ten or one. Let us remember that one dollar properly applied will keep a human being alive in India a month. How many of us can afford to let that dollar stay in our pockets, or let it go in tips to the waiter or in peanuts at a base-ball game, or in cigars? A score of persons have died in India while you have been reading the above passage."

After a days tour with the resident American missionary Mr. Hawthorne says:

"I went home with the good missionary who had invited me to spend the night at his bungalow, and when before we went to bed, he knelt down and asked God to bless the poor heathen, I silently joined in the prayer with all my heart."

Are these voluntary words of praise not brave and staunch?

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions met in regular session in the Secretaey's office, Nashville, Tenn., Tuesday morning August 10th.

Present: Dr. R. C. Reed, Chairman; Mr. W. H. Raymond, Second Vice Chairman; Dr. J. W. Bachman, Mr. G. H. Baskette, Prof. J. D. Blanton, Mr. R. J. Gordon, Maj. Joseph Hardie and Dr. James H. McNeilly, members.

After prayer the docket was taken up. Rev. D. W. Snyder's plan for returning to the Congo Mission, Africa, in October, 1897, was approved: and it was ordered that he be requested to visit the Committee in Nashville, Sept. 14th.

The Treasurer's report showed $12,854.20 received during July, 1897, and $11,431.29 paid out for the Missions, during the same month. Of the receipts $4,540 41 were from legacies.

Ordered that Miss M. Blanche Dunlap be instructed to go to Southern Brazil (to relieve Mrs. F. A. Cowan, at Araguary) as early as she can; and that the bequest of Miss Martha E. Harmon be appropriated for her traveling expenses, as far as necessary.

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Skinner having received an appointment by the Northern Methodist Board, with a prospect of being sent to China at an early date, their names were ordered to be dropped from the roll of appointees, of the Executive Committee.

Ordered that Rev. D. W. Snyder be requested to visit Missouri, before coming to meet the Committee in September.

The Committee was informed of the agreement of SteeleCreek church, Shopton, N. C., to support (temporarily) L. L. Moore, M. D., who is now en route to China as a medical missionary.

The request of Rev. J. L. Stuart to return with Mrs. Stuart to China, on or after September 15th, 1897, was granted. A report of his work in this country was read and approved.

The Committee approved the action of the Directing Committee in declining the applications of those whose papers showed their lack of experience, and insufficient age. This action did not in any wise reflect, however, on the good intentions and commendable zeal of the applicants. One great need in our Mission work is for Ministers of the Gospel, and experienced workers. The Manual states that "except in extraordinary cases, of which the Committee shall be the judge, applications for appointment should be made at least one year before departure for the field." This being the case, ministers and others who wish to go as missionaries, can send in their applications regardless of the state of the treasury, with the assurance, that if called to the foreign work, God will certainly, through His Church, or otherwise, provide the means.

Ordered that Rev. Harry W. Myers, under appointment as a missionary, be instructed to make his arrangements to go out as soon as possible, to the Japan Mission.

Rev. James E. Bear, who, in company with Dr. S. H. Chestar, Secretary, and a party of missionaries, is now en route to the East, sent word from San Francisco, August 5th, "We are now on the eve of embarking. All have stood the trip so far very well. While there have been several railroad wrecks before and behind us, we were brought safely by God's goodness.

NOTES FROM CHAUTAUQUA.

In writing from Chautauqua, the original mother Chautauqua, one scarcely knows where to begin, or where to end.

Chautauqua takes its Indian name from that of a beautiful lake in western New York, upon whose shores it is situated.

Twenty-five years ago it was a Methodist camp-ground, but a company of large-hearted, long-headed men bought the land, about three hundred acres beautifully diversified with hills, rills and natural groves.

The original distinguishing feature of Chautauqua was its normal class, for the instruction of Sabbath-school teachers. This however rapidly extended and developed itself into summer schools for instruction in all the departments of learning, including ancient and modern languages and history; the arts and sciences putting special emphasis upon music, and not neglecting the more utilitarian and practical things such as penmanship, bookkeeping, shorthand, telegraphy, photography, cooking, &c. I. T. Robert is now teaching a class in "Parlimentary Laws" making plain the standard work of his brother on that topic. The great characteristic feature of Chautauqua is however its reading course extending over four years and including some twenty-five volumes of general literature. This course, familiarly known as the C. L. S. C., Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, numbers its readers by the hundreds of thousands, and every summer hundreds of diplomas are awarded to those who have completed the four years course of reading.

Age seems to be no barrier in taking this course and graduating from this large and widely scattered college. At the head of a graduating class I noticed a lady eighty-six years of age leaning upon the arm of the class president while a man of eighty-four walked just behind the Vice-President. It is said that this keeping abreast of the times in the moving current of literature tends to prevent one from getting, or rather feeling old, and that one of these octogenarian ladies when purchasing material for a gown, was advised by the young sales-woman to select a more subdued color with the question as she pointed out a dark material. "Do you not think this would suit an old person better than that bright stuff?" "Yes, was the reply of the maiden of eighty-three, that would suit an old person, but this (the bright) suits me the best."

Chautauqua is altogether undenominational and yet the different denominations are represented and, to some extent, separated. On Wednesday evening, the different denominations meet at their respective headquarters, where we are reminded of similar meetings of our various home churches and our prayers uniting with theirs ascend to a common throne of grace.

Sunday, the beautiful Sabbath we have just passed, for instance, is unique, and well nigh ideal at Chautauqua. The world is shut out. The city of ten thousand is shut in. Of the beautiful steamers which have been arriving at, and departing from the pier every hour, not one touches. No trains, no stores, no mails. All gates are locked. No one can go out, no one can come in. The Bible is studied in some way almost all the day, including the public service in the ampitheathre where some seven thousand people assemble, taking part in the devotions and hearing an earnest, practical sermon.

But as I feared, my letter is growing too long. Why have I said so much about a place which has afforded me such delightful retreat for a vacation for many years? In order that I might persuade all others to do likewise? Certainly not that we should all come from our dear old North State to this distant point. But can we not develop out of our beginning at Asheville, a genuine Chautauqua? One which may be kept open for at least two months. Our theological seminaries give long vacations and the professors would not hesitate to give liberally of their time during the vacation for the education of the people in the Bible and kindred topics. Could we not add to this instruction in various directions under the management of specialists in their several departments? It is thrown out as a leader. Let us ruminate and act.

CATECHISM.

Question 56. What is the reason annexed to the Third Commandment?

Answer. The reason annexed to the Third Commandment is, that, however the breakers of this commandment may escape punishment from men, yet the Lord our God will not suffer them to escape His righteous judgment.

Time. A. D. 57 or 58.

Place. Probably Philippi.

INTRODUCTORY.

After the great uproar in Ephesus of which we studied in our last lesson, Paul left that city for Troas, 150 miles to the northwest. Titus did not meet him here, as he expected. So we learn from 2 Cor. ii : 13. Paul therefore went on to Macedonia. Here Titus rejoined him. He reported good news, but also reported such false charges that Paul immediately wrote to the Corinthians this second letter. He sought to remove, as far as possible, every hindrance to the Gospel.

This epistle has much of the personal element in it. Paul had been bitterly attacked at Corinth with every weapon of fanatical religious hatred. His character had been slandered. Paul was human and did not pretend that such slander did not hurt his feelings, though in reality they did not harm him. Slanders harm those that utter them, not those against whom they are directed. These stung Paul because they came upon him at a time of great discouragement and physical prostration. Satan seeks such occasion against Christians, but God overrules all for their good. This Epistle so rich and helpful was called forth by the slanders, and Paul can understand now. It was written from some place in Macedonia, probably Philippi. It was sent by Titus who was accompanied by two noted brethren, to complete the collection already begun. It was near the end of Paul's third missionary journey.

LESSON NOTES.

We learn from 2 Cor. 1 : 8, that Paul was in ill health and depressed in spirit. Still he did not forget the needs of others. He was 55 or 56 years of age.

Vs. 1. Ministering to the saints. This refers to the collection Paul was taking in Macedonia and Greece for the poor saints at Jerusalem. He had gone to Jerusalem before with contributions from the Gentile church at Antioch. (Acts xi : 29, 30.) This had been suggested again at the conference (Acts xv.) Paul had set this in motion (Gal. ii : 9-10) by means of weekly offerings (1 Cor. xvi : 1). Timothy (1 Cor. xvi : 10) Erastus (Acts xix : 22) and Titus (2 Cor. viii : 6, 16, 17,) were sent to carry on the work. It is superfluous for me to write to you of a duty you are performing so well. (Vs. 2). But he needed to make brief remarks concerning it.

Vs. 2. Achaia. Greece, of which Corinth was the chief city, in which was the principal church, was ready a year ago having decided to raise the money and begun with enthusiasm, but having apparently lost some zeal and moved slowly. Provoked. In the good sense of having stirred up, or awakened similar interest.

Vs. 3. The brethren. Titus and the two companions mentioned in chapter viii. Lest our boasting : praise of your generosity, should be in vain. It would be a shame to then give Paul pain, and be a bad example. Ye may be ready. With the money collected from week to week as the Lord had prospered them. (1 Cor. xvi : 1-4.)

Vs. 4. They of Macedonia. Travelling companies such as conducted him on his way and ministered to him. (1 Cor. xiv : 6, Rom. xv : 24. Should be ordained. Notice the delicacy of the words. We, that we say not ye.

Vs. 5. To exhort. Entreat the brethren to work they did not like to do. Your bounty. Literally "your blessing" expressed in your gifts. "So in English, a blessing is either a prayer for good, or the good itself." Hodge. Bounty. As above "blessing" of free-hearted giving, not as of covetousness or "extortion" wrung out unwillingly from covetous hearts, "by such obstinacy as covetous people themselves use when their own gain is concerned." Doddridge. Or given to get more, selfishly.

Vs. 6. Soweth sparingly. Universal law. Bountifully. "With blessings. The plural denotes a variety of blessings." Beet.

Vs. 7. Purposeth in his heart. As his heart with liberal impulses of generous sympathy decides. Giving should be more of the heart to help, than the head to count. Not grudgingly. Literally "out of sorrow," constrained to give when he would rather not. A cheerful giver. "The word is hilarious. There is no mistaking its import. God loves a whole-souled 'hilarious' giver—one who is not ashamed of the cause for which he gives—one.... who gives freely, heartily and with a serving." Pres. Merrill E. Gates.

Vs. 8. Grace. Favor, gift, the means of giving as well as cheerfulness in the act. "Here the reference is clearly to earthly good ; that kind of good or favor is intended which enables those who receive it to give abundantly." Hodge. Abound, Make to overflow. "He can make your wealth to overflow so that having a sufficiency for yourselves you may overflow in good deeds to others." Stanley. Success in life depends largely on things beyond our control, but God can control them, and will. All sufficiency. "All kinds of sufficiency." May abound to every good work. God deals bountifully with us that we may be able to be bountiful in dealing with others. We long to see the vast money power of Christians consecrated to the service of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Vs. 9. It is written. Psalm cxii : 9, describing a good man. He hath dispersed. Scattered his good things as the sower scatters seed. His righteousness. The spirit of benevolence and the means to give.

Vs. 10. He that ministereth. God who supplies the wants of the sower and consumer in the natural world will supply yours also. Stanley. This is not a prayer, statement of fact.

Vs. 11. Being enriched in everything. Temporally and spiritually. Bountifulness. The apostle loves the words that express large-heartedness.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. Paul had a hard time, more than we, to gather the gifts of God's people.

2. Giving should be systematic. Christians ought not to give less than a tenth of their income, not as under law, but under grace.

3. God does not need the gifts. He only wishes His children to know by experience, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

N. B.—He will never suffer His children to lose anything by giving liberally for Christ's sake.

God gives from the store-house of nature alike to just and to unjust, the light and the warmth, the very air by which we breath. These he gives unstintedly alike to all. He gives food to every living thing so that even the young lions do roar and seek their meat from God. From the springs and the valleys He gives drink to every living thing, and so to man—to all men—through God's hand—nature yields her stores But for those that love God are reserved the richest gifts of His limitless love. Every good and every perfect gift cometh down from Him ; every motive actually to a deed of good ; every inspiration to a holy thought ; gifts of every diversity of nature, whereby man may profit withal, to the strengthening of his own soul or of helpfulness to the spiritual life of others.

But what is God's greatest gift to man ? Is it not that love that prompted the eternal Trinity to enter into covenant for the salvation of sinful man —that love of God through Christ Jesus our Lord from which no power of earth or hell can separate the believer—from which, as God is true, no power of heaven, or earth, or hell ever shall. The concrete expression of which love is this : "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." And shall He not with Him freely give us all things ?

And what is the greatest gift of man to God ? The gift God prizes over and above all else ? It is our love. Man's gifts to God can never be aught else ; or other, than return of God's gifts to man. It is our love in return God craves. "My son, give me thine heart," is a Father's appeal. That is the gift which represents loving submission to every command, and patient submission to every phase of providence, however seeming ill, as well as joyful recognition of all we are wont to call life's blessings. When the heart surrenders all else goes with it, the means which enable others to God's service, and the personal readiness which finds in God's work a delight ; which immolating self upon the altar of love to God finds exercise, full and free, in helpful service to our fellowman.

McKELWAY.—Fell asleep in Jesus at the Manse in Fayetteville, N. C., in the early morning of August 30th, after a brief illness from pneumonia, Kate Comfort, little daughter of Rev. Alexander J. and Ruth Smith McKelway, aged five years and four months. A sunny happy little life has gone out—a little voice like a bird's is still—on earth. "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

JOHNSON.—On August 16th, 1897, at her home in Madison, Rockingham county, N.C., of paralysis, Mrs. Sarah A. Johnson, in her 62nd year. She made a profession of religion at the age of sixteen. She united with the Presbyterian church, August, 1891.

She leaves an aged husband and a loving son to mourn her loss. Mrs. Johnson was regarded by all who knew her as a faithful Christian. "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face."

McDONALD.—In Charlotte, on 28th of June, 1897, Mrs. Nona Caldwell McDonald, aged 24 years. She left a sorrowing young husband, three little children, (one who has since passed away) a tender mother, a devoted brother, a host of relatives and friends. She was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church. Ours is a bitter grief, but our consolation is,

"To us the emptiness and gloom,
To her the heaven's completeness."

BARNWELL.—At her home near Pleasant Grove, N. C., on Thursday, August 5th, Miss Dora E. Barnwell, just in the morning of young womanhood, having completed her 21st year only a few days before. The heavenly birthday had almost fallen upon the earthly. After a year at the Normal and Collegiate Institute, Asheville, N. C., she returned home only to sicken, linger for a while and die. She had been a member of Cross Roads church for about ten years —a quiet, earnest, thoughtful Christian. Her last days were full of pain, but we trust that God Himself has wiped away all tears from her eyes.

BROWNING.—At his home near Pleasant Grove, N. C., on Thursday, August 12th, Mr. Wm. Porter Browning, in his 67th year. Mr. Browning had been a member of Cross Roads church for nearly forty years, known of all men as an earnest, devoted Christian. Doubtless through all these years he had been growing in grace, and the roots of his faith striking deeper in the soil of God's truth. But the last year especially had been one of growth and ripening, as it was of affliction. Borrow upon sorrow fell upon him. Up to this time death had never invaded the large family circle. But now, first the beloved wife, after a lingering illness, was taken. Then one son, just ready to begin practice as a physician, then another, a teacher in Oak Ridge Institute, followed in quick succession. The husband and father (like Job of old) only bowed low and said : "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." Within a few months the call came to him also. It found him ready and at peace. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

"How blest the righteous when he dies !
When sinks a weary soul to rest,
How mildly beam the closing eyes !
How gently heaves the expiring breast !"

So passed our brother from earth.

LOST.

Lost—A day from a box of gems,
Whose morning fair was jewel set,
Whose evening, shot with golden bars,
And crowned with heaven's holy stars
Whose winds breathed thro' white lily stems
Sweet as a magic flageolet.

Lost—A day in the chasm of Time:
Whose hours fell light as the trip of a rhyme,
Whose moments throbbed with a music mute
As the perfect theme ere it strikes the lute.

The shuttles of fate fly back and forth,
But the web they weave is dull and gray;
For the cloth of gold of priceless worth
Is sealed in a secret crypt away.

And the dawn may come on soft and sweet,
And the lily bloom, and the lute may play,
But Time's wings, cruel as they are fleet,
Bring never again that perfect day.

"POOR MATT,"

OR "THE CLOUDED INTELLECT."

The background of the story is a lonely sea-coast, somewhere off the British Isles, where are scattered a few fishermen's cottages. A lady from a neighboring resort comes upon it one day, in her wanderings, and is attracted when quite a distance away by the figure of a boy standing motionless and gazing up into a rift in the clouds. So intent, so immovable was his attitude that she goes up to him and asks what he is doing. But not until she takes hold of him and repeats her question several times does he finally look away from the sky, and turn to her. Then with distressful earnestness, he says:

"Matt was looking for God—Matt wants to see God."

She was astonished and shocked at such an answer, but she soon saw that "the clouded intellect" meant no disrespect or irreverence in thus "looking for God." Great clouds were rolling up in the heavens, and he explained, "There was a great hole—Matt wanted to see God.

The lady at once became interested in the boy. She learned that his parents had died when he was an infant and that he had been reared by his great-grandfather and an old aunt. A little neighbor girl who was very kind to him, said to the lady: "He's a natural, ma'am; he don't know how to get into mischief like us that have sense." In answer to her many inquiries this new friend also learned that it was hard to get anything into his head; but when once that's done, there was no fear of his ever forgetting it.

So interested did she become in this singular child, that day after day she would come and sit and teach him. One of the things he learned was that a penny would get five apples, (of which he was very fond) and that if people didn't pay they were "bad men, bad men—put 'em in prison."

This idea of "not paying" took fast hold of him, and led to the next step in his dim mind towards his comprehension of God and his plan of salvation. One day the "parson" for whom he had great reverence, read the parable of the "king that would take account of his servants." The boy was so intensely interested that he begged for more. So the minister to make it very plain and vivid, told it over in his own words rather than read it. When he came to the part where the king said he shall be put in prison and never come out "until he has paid all this money," poor Matt became so distressed that he fled from the cottage. The lady who was present at the time followed and found him lying on the beach "talking to God" he said.

"And what did Matt say?" she asked. His reply was:

"God, God—Matt has no money to pay."

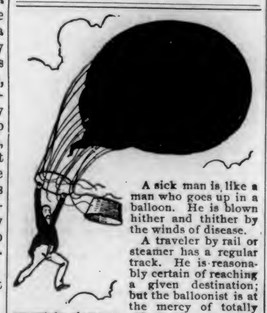
She took both of his hand in hers, and looking at him, said cheerfully: "Jesus Christ has paid for poor Matt." Then she added, the child repeating it after her, very slowly: "God will not put Matt in prison now. Jesus Christ has paid for poor Matt." This good news gave him great satisfaction, and after hearing it over and over again, he walked a little way off, and lifting his arms and face to heaven cried in a clear voice:



"Man that paid, man that paid, Matt says, thank you, thank you."

A strange sight, and strange words to hear!" "The clouded intellect" had grasped the whole plan of salvation. We cannot follow out the whole of this little story, but there is one more incident that we must mention.

The old grandfather died, and Matt was told that "God had sent to fetch him." He at once wanted to go too. The friend then assured him that God would send for him some day. But that some day did not pacify him, he must know what day. So, with much difficulty, she made him understand that she could not say when, but that it might be any day. This he understood, and at once got up and went towards the cottage. When the lady asked what he wanted, he looked at his hands, and said:

"Matt must have his hands washed; Matt must be ready."

And ever after that he was always striving to be ready.—Jean Ingelow.

A sick man is like a man who goes up in a balloon. He is blown hither and thither by the winds of disease.

A traveler by rail or steamer has a regular track. He is reasonably certain of reaching a given destination; but the balloonist is at the mercy of totally uncertain elements. No track, no course, no rudder, no certainty that any breeze may not bring destruction.

So with the sick man. His disordered constitution renders every natural operation uncertain. No organ can be depended on to do its normal work. The stomach will not digest food; the liver will not filter bilious poisons from the blood; the kidneys and skin will not excrete the waste. No regular nourishing or purifying process is going on. There is no certainty except the certainty of suffering.

In all dyspeptic, bilious, debilitated conditions, what is needed is to change the abnormal, erratic operations of the system into a natural, regular, straightforward progress in the right direction. Nothing in the world will do this so rapidly and certainly as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It directly regulates the vitalizing functions. It sets the stomach and liver into natural, healthy operation and gives the blood-making glands power to manufacture an abundance of pure, rich blood.

It creates appetite, builds up muscular strength, and banishes nervousness and neuralgia. As it can be assimilated by the weakest stomach, its nourishing properties are far superior to nauseating cod liver oil in severe coughs and all wasting diseases.

The druggist who recommends something else as "just as good" is thinking more of his extra profit on the "just as good" kind than of your welfare.

ONCE UPON A TIME.

"Oh dear!" sighed lonely little Bess, "it must have been such fun
To be living 'once upon a time,' when the world was just begun;
When all the nice things happened—that grandma says are true.
I wish I had been living then. Don't you?

"Grandma was just a little girl about as old as me.
She had a swing where she could touch the top branch of the tree;
She used to go to pasture to drive the old cow home,
And get a cup of milk with warm, white foam.

"And when they baked, she always had a little apple tart,
And sugar cookies scolloped, or else cut in a heart
The robins built a nest in the lilac-tree so low
She could see the eggs standing on tip-toe.

"And once she was awake when her ear ached 'most all night,
And heard the katydids sing out in the pale moonlight.
A big white owl lived in the top of the old hollow tree,
But when the sun shined bright he couldn't see.

"Oh, yes, and when they cut the grass and made it into hay,
She had a little rake and used to help them every day;
And when she went to church she always took some dill,
To eat in sermon-time to keep her still.

"It seems so lonesome nowadays—we never have such fun;
'Once upon a time' is gone, all the nice things have been done,
And nothing happens any more; and, oh dear me! I do Wish I had lived when grandma did. Don't you?"

GUESSING AT HEROES AGAIN.

TWO BIBLE HEROES THIS TIME.

1 Chapter 1.

I hope that the children who read the stories in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN have not forgotten dear old Grandma Bright and the Allan and Barker children who loved so well to gather around her and play Guessing at Heroes?

They may remember that the last time we heard of them, grandma was going off on a visit. She was gone several months, instead of a few weeks as she first expected, and when she came home the children were getting ready for a month's holiday in the mountains, and after they had settled down again after their holiday, there was so much for grandma to tell about her visit, and so much for them to tell about their wonderful trip, that grandma waited for the first cool evening in October, when she could have a bright fire burning to welcome them. Then she blew a little silver whistle that used to belong to grandpa, and Artie and Nita, aunt Martie's little girl, who had been playing together on the porch, came running in.

"Vat's it Gamma? asked Artie. Why, I want all the children for a little while, I have something to propose."

Now, neither of the little folks knew what that big word meant, but they both knew that when grandma wanted all the children, there was something nice in store.

Artie clapped his hands gleefully, saying: "All yite," which he thought a great improvement on "All wite."

"Chillen! chillen! oh! ugh! Dack! Come on! come on! Gamma is callin' er'y body!"

Hugh was just finishing a lesson and Jack was playing one last game of marbles with Will in the back yard, but they all pricked up their ears and were ready to go.

"Somebody run across the street and asked Nellie if she wants to come too," said grandma when they all came bursting into her room.

Artie, always willing to run on gamma's errands, pushed through the group, saying:

"Me, gamma! Me—I, vant to go!"

Artie was trying hard to talk English, his papa said.

Away he ran, calling out as he burst open Mr. Barker's hall door.

"Nellie! Nellie! come kick, Gamma's got somefin' to—to—pur—pose. Come on!"

Mrs. Barker heard him and smiled, but she called out:

"Nellie! Nellie Barker! run over and see what Grandma Bright wants."

Nellie did not even wait for her hat, but crossed the street, and running quickly to grandma's door, tapped softly.

"Come in! come in! come in!" came from all the children, and in a moment she was in her place, too much out of breath to speak."

"Well, children, this looks like old times. And now, let's come to business," and grandma wrapped on the table, for order.

"I called you together to see if the Guess Club was ready to meet agai n All in favor, hold up a hand."

All the hands were up!

"Well, now suppose we take Bible Heroes this time. I think it would be very pleasant, and besides that, I think it will make us all read our Bibles more carefully."

"Nita shall have everything explained to her, and mama will help Artie, if he needs it, but I believe he knows a good many heroes in the Bible now."

Artie patted Gamma's hand, highly pleased at this praise.

We will have only one meeting a week—on Friday—if nothing prevent and I will give a prize at the end of two months, for the one who has guessed most correctly, and we will invite Mr. and Mrs. Barker, and papa and mama."

Then the dear, wonderful old grandma opened her table drawer, and drew out a little square box.

"Here" she said, "are the badges for the members of the Guess Club," and she took out the cutest little rosettes of red ribbon with a silver pin to stick them on, and the figure on it looked just like a question mark!

After she had pinned on all of the badges, there were two left in the box. "Who for Gamma?" asked Artie. "Why, we want to make papa and mama honorary members so that they can help some time."

"Vat's dat Gamma?" of course Artie was going to ask, Grandma was certain of that; but from the frowns on some other faces, she thought there were others who would like to know too.

"Honorary members are those who are allowed to join just as a compliment to them. They are not obliged to come every time; nor to try for the prize, but we like to have them with us." "Does my little man understand." He nodded his head again and again very confidently, and then Grandma said:—

"I will have a hero for you to guess on Friday evening, and you must be here by seven."

She had just finished in time for supper bell rang, and she put down her knitting and went right off to supper. D.

POWER OF A JUST PRESENCE.

Virtue is stronger than vice. Virtue has a commanding presence, which vice has not. With all its braggart effrontery, vice feels a restraint when in the simple presence of virtue. The vicious man does not like the restraint. "Men always hate the one they lie to," says Hugo. When one finds himself thus hated for righteousness' sake, he may know that he is not taking a right stand for nothing. By simply being rigorously right one may at least cripple, even though he cannot wholly overthrow, wrong.—Sunday School Times.

THINGS USEFUL.

A soft cloth wet with milk and rubbed over boots and shoes three or four times a month will improve the appearance of the leather and help to keep it soft, and thus make it last longer.

Lettuce and Lemon Salad — Wash the lettuce and chop rather fine. Slice a lemon very thin after peeling, removing all the seeds. Mix the sliced lemon thoroughly through the salad, with two sliced hard-boiled eggs. Sprinkle a handful of sugar over the top and serve very cold.

Fruit Filling.—Take four tablespoonfuls of very fine chopped citron, four tablespoonfuls of finely chopped raisins (seeded), half a cup of blanched almonds chopped fine, and a quarter of a pound of finely chopped figs. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, adding half a cup of sugar, then mix in the chopped ingredients. Put it between the layers of cake while the cake is very hot, so that the egg may cook a little. This filling is delicious.

DR. DABNEY'S REPLY.

MR. EDITOR:—It has come to my knowledge that objections have been made to the speech which I uttered in the Charlotte Assembly upon the question of the annual election of the Assembly's Secretary of Home Missions. It is intimated that I was discourteous and unjust to the venerable Synod of North Carolina, in imputing to the Synod as such, factious opposition to the Assembly's secretary, and in charging her with disobedience to the Assembly's rule. I did make the latter charge: I entirely disclaim the former.

As to how I came to make those brief remarks, I wish to state a few simple facts; 1. I had not the faintest surmise or suspicion that the attacks so unfortunately made upon the Assembly's secretary, in previous Assemblies, would be renewed at Charlotte, until the Rev. A. A. Little of Mecklenburg Presbytery, proceeded with his speech to my equal surprise and regret. Therefore there could be no previous conference or preparation as to what I should say. 2. I had not one word with the Assembly's secretary on the subject either before or during the whole Assembly. He is as absolutely irresponsible for my speech and everything in it, as King Melchizedek. 3. "But where did Dr. Dabney get his facts?" Not one of them from the Assembly's secretary. What call is there to raise that question when every fact which I used was a perfectly patent and public fact, open to the eye of every Presbyterian minister, in the church journals, and the Assembly's statistical reports? 4. I did not charge opposition to the Assembly's secretary upon your Synod. There was abundance of gratifying evidence before the eyes and ears of the Assembly that day that the Synod as a body, was not and is not in sympathy with this opposition: evidence consisting in the voice and prudent remarks of a leading member of the Synod, and in the votes of other excellent members against the agitation. I did point to the fact that the opposition came from persons in that Synod, and is that not a fact? Who led the assault on the Assembly's Secretary in the Assembly at Nashville? An able member of your Synod. Who led it at Dallas? Another such member of your Synod. Who led it in Charlotte? Another able member of the same Synod, formerly a favorite pupil of my own. I said that the assault came from North Carolina. Was not that true? I did not say it came from the Synod of North Carolina. I never heard that the Synod endorsed it. 5. I did not express opposition to the present plan of Synodical Home Missions. I approve of it. I rejoice in all its legitimate successes. I was aware that the Assemblies, after some years of uncertain action and several changes, have settled down upon the permanent sanction and approval of the plan of Synodical Home Missions. And while they enjoin upon their preachers to ask of every congregation five monthly collections per year for this great work, they generously give to the Synod three of them, requiring two for their own central committee, to sustain the work in weak Synods and our frontiers. I do not wish to disturb this plan, so wisely and deliberately adopted. I wish to see it faithfully carried out by everybody. 6. After this distasteful debate began, it was still my purpose to take no part in it. While it proceeded, I was more than twice approached with whispered entreaties to take part in it, entreaties coming from ministers of high standing, from remote parts of the Church, having no connection with the Atlanta committee. My reply was, that I wished not take part in it, personalities being very distasteful to me. And I trusted that it would be unnecessary. Thus, my purpose to speak was nearly as impromptu as the speech itself. Then, what prompted me to speak? Simply a strong sense of justice. My remarks had virtually two connected points: That these assaults came with bad grace from members of the Synod of North Carolina, seeing that that Synod was itself in delinquency to the Assembly's rules concerning the Home Mission work. And that it was very unjust for gentlemen in this Synod and sustaining the Synod's delinquency to charge the Assembly's secretary with a crippled work, while their own delinquency was one of the very things that crippled it. Our Saviour's judgment was certainly a fair one: "Let him who is without sin among you first cast the stone at her." Let other people do their duty to the Assembly's Home Missions; and then, if any of the Assembly's officials are found inefficient, we will justly drop him. If that is any more than plain justice and common sense, then I never knew what they are.

My charge upon the Synod was and is simply true: it was declared so upon the floor. The Synod's own records of October, 1892, contain a formal resolution, allowing to the General Assembly's Committee only one annual collection, where the Assembly had ordered two. Mr. Little's Presbytery expressly refused it any collection at all, until 1896. If this "go-as-you-please" disobedience to the supreme court is Presbyterianism, then I never knew what Presbyterianism was.

It has been pleaded that while technically the Synod had not complied with the rule, virtually it had done so, because in its last collection it had given the Assembly's treasury considerably more money than in the previous one. This is well: we hope that it looks towards a righteous repentance for its wrong doing. But we submit that it is not full justification for the disobedient child to say: "Well, I didn't do as ill the last time as I did the time before."

It seems to be intimated that Dr. Dabney's contention was very unwise and unfortunate, because it is going to produce a permanent antagonism of the Synod assailed against the Assembly's Committee. I need no other reply to this than the inspired words of the Apostle: "Am I your enemy because I have told you the truth?" Did I slander the Synod? Show me that I did, and I will endeavor to creep to its next approaching meeting, in spite of my blindness, and wretched health, and I will there ask its pardon on my knees, and the pardon of God. But if I told only the truth, and any brother is pinched by it because it is true and puts him in the wrong, and is thereby prompted to a further rejection of duty, and to resentment against the Assembly's long-established and lawful agency which had nothing on earth to do with bringing about the disclosure, this would be another and a worse injustice. There is a better way. Let us all say: "Faithful are the wounds of a friend;" and let us all resolve to be good Presbyterians in action as well as in name. R. L. D.

[Dr. Dabney we consider entitled in simple justice to the opportunity to reply through our columns. We regard it as well that the matter of disagreement has been fully brought out, and that it has been presented so forcefully and yet so courteously on both sides. Here we presume the discussion will end, but if any one can present a reasonable grievance as having resulted from these publications, our columns are still open—it being premised always that further discussion will be properly conducted.—Ed. N. C. P.]

BY THE WAY.

This caption is not meant to introduce an illustration or to brighten a sentence with an aside, but to describe the general situation in which these notes are written. In the shade of the oaks, surrounded by blue-grass and clover, with peach-trees and vegetables in sight, in the garden, growing, this home in Tennessee is bright with the presence of mother and kindred, in the town which must ever be dear to our Dr. Egbert Smith, as he found his wife here, and to our honored secretary, Dr. Chester, as he had a pastorate here. Beyond that the place shall be nameless.

It is near enough to the city of Nashville to spend the day at the Tennessee Centennial and see the great Exposition which is an honor to my native State and believed by every loyal native to be greater than Atlanta's great trades display. That is high praise. If there is any doubt as to its truth the railroads of the South have such low rates for ten or twenty days excursion tickets that your readers can come and see for themselves. All the ways have their claims. The Seaboard Air Line offers every reasonable inducement to the traveller. The trains are complete in appointments, of rapid rate of speed, and over a good roadbed, with most courteous service. The connections are good. The best of all is the through car service from Portsmouth, Va., to Nashville, with which our train, and the parlor car through to Charlotte, makes pleasant connection at Hamlet.

This grain and grass country, with more and severer cold than we have by the sea, has many things to be desired. But the heat of this summer time is more severe than ours at Wilmington and our resorts at the sea-shore. Our people ought to realize that we have a superior summer climate. Saratoga, for instance, has its springs and waters, not to be found elsewhere, but it has not our sea-shore. The season at Saratogo is short, saving the Sanatarium of Dr. Strong or others, being little more than two months.

The scenery of the way from Atlanta to Nashville is varied and delightful. A soldier of the civil war will be much interested in the battlefields and the great height and strength of Lookout Mountain in the shadow of which the great battle of Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge was fought. The fruitgrower will be pleased to find the pears and peaches of Georgia so juicy and sweet. The cattle-raiser will see cows, horses and mules to his heart's content. The farms yield great harvests of corn and small grain. Minerals and mineral springs call for miners and offer health to all.

The news dealer on the train offered for sale the printed lectures of the now famous Governor Bob Taylor, who is said to have won his way with the people by being a fine fiddler. This book is better than the trash or even readable books commonly sold on trains. But better than these for our people to take with them are the books being published by The Colportage Library Association of Chicago and East Northfield, Mass. A postal card to Mr. A. P. Fitt, East Northfield, Mass., will secure a list of the publications. The story of "The Probable Sons" issued by this association has been sold by tens of thousands of copies and read by multitudes. These books bound better than many more costly publications can be had postpaid two copies for twenty five cents or ten copies for one dollar. Many Sabbath-schools or Young People's Societies would do well to get these books for personal or general reading or free distribution. Better still would it be to take copies of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN and read, ponder, and inwardly digest the contents. The pastor of the First church, Richmond, Va., recently spoke most cordially of your paper. Not counting my contributions as of much moment or value, this paper is very excellent and much read and appreciated. The parents who will put this paper in the hands of their children for weekly reading will be molding their characters and purifying and elevating their tastes more than they think. Many ministers owe to such papers their earliest acquaintance with the great work of the Church, the great needs of the work, the great opportunities to work for Christ and the great possibilities of life. The stories interest children sooner than we think. It is to their credit that they write, and read the contents of their column. The housewife has her part which is always good and useful. In short the contents are all good and will not leave the taste for such stuff as the newsdealers offer, any place or power.

If it were not that the statement would advertise the corrupting publication sit would be well to give a sweeping condemnation of the illustrated papers too often sold and read on our trains. Let the day come speedily when pure papers and periodicals put down the impure and corrupting. A. D. M.

MRS. DR. GEORGE C. WORTH has kindly sent us the following slip from the Yokohoma Gazette, relative to the funeral obsequies of Mrs. Lacy L. Little. We omit such notes as have already been published:

The funeral obsequies took place this morning [July 27th] at the Union church. There were not many of the residents cognizant of the event and so could not be present; but those who were there must have been impressed with the appropriateness of the musical and liturgical service, there being no address. The Rev. Mr. Price came up from Kobe to officiate. Mr. F. Whitefield, assisted by Mr. Gale, kindly led the musical parts of the service, the former playing at the close the "Dead March in Saul" with much feeling. The Rev. R. E. McAlpine of Kobe, an uncle of the deceased on her mother's side, arrived in time for the service. Six young missionaries acted as pallbearers, carrying the casket out of the church and walking beside the hearse the entire distance of the Bund and up the Camp-hill to the missionary plot near the entrance of the cemetery. Here a number of friends with floral tributes were in waiting. The services were again as at the church, simply Scripture selections, with the hymn "Asleep in Jesus," closing with doxology and benediction. Another feature of the interment unusual in the East, but common in the Southern States of America, was that the pall-bearers filled up the grave, they not regarding it respectful to the deceased to delegate it to other hands or employed labor. A friend of the deceased and resident here, whilst this work of love was taking place improved the opportunity to point out the providence that brought this young yet esteemed sister from China to lie down with the honored dead who lie buried in this little plot, among whom is the veteran pioneer of the American Baptist Mission, Dr. Nathan Brown; also a young wife, like herself, near by; then Miss Sarah B. Higgins, the pioneer lady of the Methodist Episcopal Mission; Mrs. Dr. R. S. Maclay, and several little children, whose graves and memory are still kept fresh with flowers. Sweetest of all was the light and love that robbed death of its gloom and the grave of all victory.—Communicated.

In her letter Mrs. Worth writes:

We are spending our summer with Miss Leete in a delightful, cool mountain town in Japan. The thermometer has not been above 80° and we sleep under blankets nearly every night, while in Shanghai the thermometer is standing at 100° in the shade day after day, and very little better at night. We are taking long walks and climbs and growing stronger and better prepared for our work in the winter.

THE CENTENNIAL OF BUFFALO CHURCH.

The two days spent at Buffalo church in Fayetteville Presbytery, Thursday and Friday, the 12th and 13th of August, in commemoration of its centennial, constituted an occasion worthy of special chronicle and enduring remembrance. Providence smiled on the celebration of a hundred years of useful and honored life; for the days were lovely and fair, albeit somewhat warm, and great crowds were enabled to attend. The committee of arrangements had chosen a fortunate time—with cessation from the toil of the farm and propitious weather. And the programme that had been provided was carried out, with but one exception: one of the speakers who had been asked to speak on Home Missions being unable to be present.

You have been to Buffalo? No? Then your education is so far neglected. It is a dear typical country church, where old-fashioned hospitality still abounds and the simple hearty ways of true people still charm the soul. The present building, which is the fourth building on the same site, stands on a gentle acclivity—from which in every direction the water flows—and is surrounded by a fine grove of native oaks--some handsome trees among them. The grounds are spacious and undulating--here and there level spaces--and a well laid-out graveyard some distance in front and to the right—to the left and in rear, rolling ground, declining to a bubbling spring that furnishes the water for the insatiable thirst of the young people who for a hundred years have strolled thitherward. I hardly know a prettier churchyard—of twelve or fifteen acres, without the adornments of art. The building itself erected in 1880 is modest and comely, a handsome and substantial country church, needing now to be painted without--though within seeming still daintily fresh and neat. Such was the place selected by the good Scotch settlers in the last century, where they erected a log building for the worship of God—before 1797, when the first pastor was called and ordained.

Evidently company was expected, and the old mother had put on a fresh cap to welcome the scattered children to the homestead. The grounds had been cleared off, the paths in the cemetery put in order, and there was a look of smartness and expectancy everywhere. And the company came! Carriages and carts, wagons and buggies, jerseys and daytons, on horse and afoot, the happy thronging people came till the grove swarmed with people, looking like the good old times indeed. The sky was without a speck or stain. The golden August sun shimmered through the forest leaves and strewed its lavish wealth upon the fresh sweet earth. The soft west wind stirred gently—and the serene beauty of the late summer, with golden rod and asters in fence corners, dark green oak leaves, and scarlet and bronze sweetgum foliage in the forests, added its inimitable glory—the imperishable splendor of the perishable garlands of nature.

And these were but fitting accompaniments of the sacred and indescribable delight that mingled with the meetings and greetings and welcomes of this auspicious time—some indeed, like the music of Ossian "mournful and pleasant to the soul." More than nine years had passed since I had left these hallowed precincts. Of the body of elders that greeted me when I came in 1873, me, young and inexperienced, and prayed with me and for me—and upheld my hands--six good men and true--not one was here to meet me at this memorable festival, one only living and he in another charge. And the changes in the diaconate and in the private membership were as many and as saddening. Yet with the sadness there was unspeakable pleasure. There were the children grown to maturity--occupying positions of usefulness and service in the church—some at the head of happy homes and taking the places of their fathers. As among the hundreds whom I met and shook hands with, I could recognize the child of some dear friend of days in the family likeness, or see how others had grown in grace and knowledge, I wondered if there were not some foretastes of that bliss which is beyond in this glad gathering.

> "Ah! then what raptured greetings
> On Canaan's happy shore!
> What knitting severed friendships up
> Where partings are no more!"

The exercises were carried out according to the programme. On Thursday, at 10.30 a. m., after a brief service of prayer and praise, the pastor of Buffalo church, Rev. M. D. McNeill, gave an address of welcome, earnest and cordial, which went to the heart of every one of the vast audience present. These were the words that came to visitors like cold waters to a thirsty soul. The Centennial sermon was delivered by the Rev. H. G. Hill, D. D., of Maxton, from Isaiah xliii: 4. "Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honorable, and I have loved thee: therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy life." His theme: "Jehovah's Love for His People." How this love was shown and proven Dr. Hill went on to illustrate by what God has done to redeem, preserve and develop His people. Many thought it the best of the many good sermons they have ever heard from this able and beloved minister. It was certainly a nourishing exposition of divine truth--full of rich consolation as well as practical suggestion, and most appropriate to the occasion. Dr. Hill never does anything in a shipshod way. The discourse was carefully wrought out in thought and expression, and delivered with impressive earnestness. A good brother said to me (you may guess his business) "Wasn't that a fine sermon, every part dovetailed, every nail clinched."

In the afternoon, the Rev. Kenneth M. McIntyre delivered a discourse on the Polity of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. McIntyre believes in and maintains a jure divino Presbyterianism—and pressing the principles of the Book of Church Order to logical conclusions, and the teaching of God's word on which the government of the Church is based, would eliminate all the other agencies for the support of the Church, and the work of the Church than the Scriptural—all fairs, suppers, &c., and all societies. The Church itself is the divine institute, with its officers and means of grace. Following Mr. McIntyre, Professor Alexander McIver gave personal reminiscences of the church, its ministers and members, its methods and meetings, more than fifty years ago. He told of the camp-meetings that used to be held when he was a boy, of the preaching of Mr. McMillan and Mr. McCallum which he remembered, and of some of the prominent members of the church of that day.

On Friday, Rev. James M. Wicker spoke on the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church. I remember well hearing that George Francis Train once at dinner, sitting by a distinguished friend said: "I have five minutes. Tell me all you know." People clamor to-day like Mr. Train for multum in parvo—or what Mr. Ruskin calls the modern lecture, "wisdom bottled up." Mr. Wicker in the brief compass of an hour gave an unusually clear, succinct, luminous and compact system of theology. What he said, without sign of note or scrap of paper, in perfect and accurate diction, would make an admirable tract on "What Presbyterians Believe."

After Mr. Wicker came the present writer, for fifteen years the minister to this church, who delivered the "historical address." Do not feel alarmed lest I give you an outline of a discourse that occupied considerably over an hour. I have the satisfaction of thinking that the audience was not tired. Certainly if the tribute of attention is satisfying to a speaker I am more than satisfied.

A log building was raised, and a minister was called in 1797. This argues that a church existed anterior to that date. But the chronicles of the church only go so far. The first minister was Rev. Wm. D. Paisley from 1797 to 1801. The Rev. James Gillespie after an intermission of a year from 1802 to 1804. The Rev. Murdock McMillan became pastor in 1804 and so continued for twenty-six years. The Rev. Angus McCallum served as pastor from 1831 to 1838. The Rev. Samuel Paisley till 1843. The Rev. Neill McKay from 1845 till 1870. The Rev. Martin McQueen as supply till 1872. I came in June 1873 and left in June 1888. The Rev. W. S. Friend for less than a year, the Rev. D. N. McLauchlin for two years, and the Rev. M. D. McNeill since 1894 have been in charge.

Out of Buffalo have gone—chiefly or largely made of members of Buffalo—the following goodly array of churches: Euphronia 1821. St. Andrews 1863. Salem 1864. Gulf 1880. White Hill 1881. Jonesboro 1885. Pocket 1890. Sanford 1893. (My Mss is not before me and I am giving dates from memory.)

Buffalo has given the following ministers to the Presbyterian Church, besides others to other churches. (May I ask you to note these names, their evident Scotch ancestry?) Rev. Alexander McIver, Rev. Peter McNab, Rev. Daniel McGilvary, D. D., Rev. Kenneth M. McIntyre, Rev. William Malcom McGilvary, Rev. Evander B. McGilvary, Rev. James McIver Wicker, Rev. Malcom N. McIver, Rev. D. M. McIver, Rev. Jesse L. Wicker—besides two who died while in the course of preparation, Mr. Duncan M. Phillips and Mr. John D. Arnold.

The following who have attained eminence as educators were reared in Buffalo church: Alexander McIver, A. M., for many years professor in Davidson College and in the University of North Carolina, and at one time Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of North Carolina; Charles D. McIver, A.M., D. Litt., President of the North Carolina Normal and Industrial School for Women; Evander J. McIver of Union Springs, Alabama Evander B. McGilvary, Professor in the University of California.

Among eminent lawyers and jurists are the late Hugh McQueen, the late Kenneth McIver, Judge James D. McIver of North Carolina, and Judge Alexander McIver of Texas.

And what shall I say more! Time (and space) fail me! But it is well to treasure the names and memories of those whom Buffalo has trained for usefulness, and to chronicle her services to the world. Shorn of her members on every side, with a flock of churches who have gone forth from her on every side, shorn of her magnificent domain that once swept with Buffalo as a centre for twenty miles in some directions and ten in others, the old mother is enfeebled and unable to maintain her ancient power in the Presbytery. Still the same blood is found on the waters of Buffalo, and many of the same names abide to govern its destinies, and we cannot but believe that the old church has still a future and a sphere of honorable usefulness.

The closing exercise was the noble and inspiring address of Rev. Dugald Neill McLauchlin pastor of Buffalo from 1890 to 1892. Mr. McLauchlin's theme was "The Glorious Past and the Hope of the Future." The torrent of his oratory swept every one before it, as he depicted the work accomplished by the Presbyterian Church and its place in history. Mr. McLauchlin is not one of the "coming" men. He has come! Impetuous in delivery, forceful in thought, finished in diction he has all the elements that go to make up the orator, and he is one. Some of his passages and especially his peroration thrill one like the fanfare of a trumpet.

This chronicle would be incomplete if no reference is made to the lavish, sincere, enjoyable hopitality extended the muiltitudes in attendance. The noon repast served by fair and willing hands under every green tree to the soft music of nature, the profusion and elegance of the supplies, the glad welcome that made the feast the more delightful, all added to the social pleasure of those days. Nor should the narrative close without allusion to the music. The hymns were old and familiar—the singing congregational, hearty and enthusiastic. What an inspiration in the vast volume of sound from a great congregation!

The question may be asked cui bono? Well, the centennial gave an opportunity to recount God's goodness in the past and make mention of His doings among the people. A thousand happy worshippers met, and their religious fervor was rekindled. Friendships were renewed and cemented. And to some of the old it was a precious season of memorial. Ten Presbyterian ministers were present, and uncounted elders and deacons. And all felt that it was good to be there.

GOLD DUST.

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair,
When I have time.
Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear;
They may not need you in the coming year;
Now is the time.

RIGHT A BETTER MOTIVE THAN HAPPINESS.

The natural effect of a course of conduct may be very different from the right motive to adopting it. Men acquire strength by the use of food, but the healthy man eats to satisfy natural hunger, and lets strength take care of itself. So the natural result of right-doing is happinesss, but no man in sound moral health does right in order to be happy. He does it because it is right on instinct, on reflection, or because it conforms to the will of God. If he acts on any lower motive, occasions are sure to arise in which the lower motive will fail him. He will come to situations in which the balance of happiness will appear so distinctly on the side of wrong-doing as to leave no doubt of his going wrong if he goes in search of pleasure. The basis for a solid character is to do the right, and leave happiness to take care of itself.—Sunday School Times.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Hopkinson Smith, who treats of the Tennessee Centennial Exposition in the September Scribner's, went to Nashville as one of the art judges for the Fair. He made the illustrations on the spot and writes with enthusiasm of what he saw.

The Bookman states that George Meredith has written a long poem on the French Revolution, which will probably be published very soon in a volume by itself.

Prominent among the articles of special interest in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly for September will be one on Spanish Experiments in Coinage, by Henry C. Lea, which describes the result of that country's continual tampering with the national currency, and points a very obvious moral for our government.

An edition of the Scriptures in the Uganda language has recently been issued by the British and Foreign Bible Society, of very unique proportions. It is only three inches wide and three inches thick, but very long. This size is adopted that, to protect it from the destructive white ants in Central Africa, it may fit into a certain size of tin cracker-boxes of an English firm, which are extensively used in Uganda families. The box is just large enough to take in this Bible, with a small prayer-book and hymnal, and a little Biblical history. This little library is certain to have a powerful influence in the development of Ugandese Christian character.—Church at Home and Abroad.

In the summer of 1896, when John Muir, the explorer of Alaska and Sierra, and godfather of the Muir Glacier, came east to get an honorary degree from Harvard, he delighted his friends in New York and Boston with a certain "dog story" the fame of which had preceded him. The editor of The Century has prevailed upon Mr. Muir to write out this tale and the hair-breadth escape—for such it is—will appear in the September number under the title, "An Adventure with a Dog and a Glacier." By a coincidence the same number of The Century will contain an episode with similar dramatis personæ in Mrs. Marion Manville Pope's "Up the Matterhorn in a Boat"—one of the characters of which is a dog, which by an extraordinary series of incidents is brought into relations with a glacier.

Mark Twain's English publishers state: "Twain's new book, 'More Tramps Abroad,' will be issued either in November or December. The edition is a large one and the book has over 500 pages. The book is fully up to the author's former writings, and develops a vein of seriousness which we expect will attract a new class of readers. A large portion of the work is devoted to the present condition of India, and Twain gives forcible expression to his opinions on religious life there."

TWO NEW BOOKS.

Close upon the publication of "Waiting Upon God," by Rev. Andrew Murray, Fleming H. Revell Co., have issued two books of the same style of cloth binding and of the same size, being from 140 to 150 pages each 16mo., at the same price fifty cents each. The covers are neatly ornamented, silver and black. But the excellence of the binding and press-work is not comparable with the rich Scriptural and spiritual material in the contents. The first is under the title, "The Holy Life," by Rev. H. G. C. Macgregor, who is a Presbyterian and holds fast to the standards in all his teachings. This is a sequel to "The Great Salvation" a small 12mo., and carries forward the truth, taught therein. This volume is complete in its statement and will greatly help those who wish to be more like Christ and to live a more holy life.

The other volume is by Rev. F. B. Meyer, of London, already favorably known on both sides of the Atlantic. His subject is "Saved And Kept," in twenty-three short chapters, being the study of as many texts in connection with the solemn reflection of having passed his fiftieth birthday. The volume is equal to the best of Mr. Meyer's many excellent, practical, devotional books.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. A. E. Baker, from Baltimore, Md., to Sykesville, Md.

Rev. B. E. Wallace, from Soddy, Tenn., to Belle Haven, Va.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Immanuel Church, Wilmington:—Is enjoying a season of grace. Thus far several persons have professed. There have been two accessions and a number have asked for prayer. Believers have been strengthened and unified. They had a precious communion season last Sabbath night and the interest manifested called for a continuance of the meetings through Wednesday night. The Morning Star says: Rev. P. C. Morton, who is conducting the services, was a chaplain in the Army of Northern Virginia, and his varied experience lends great interest to his preaching. His sermons are especially liked by the young.

White Hill Church, Fayetteville Presbytery:—This church has just been greatly refreshed by a gracious baptism of the Holy Ghost. Rev. D. M. McIver preached for us on the third Sabbath in August a most excellent sermon; his many friends were glad to hear him again. The service was continued by the pastor who is indebted much to candidate Allen Jones, Jr., for his efficient aid, especially for the two good sermons he preached on Wednesday. All God's people were strengthened and edified. Several professed faith in Christ. Ten were added to the church by profession and one by transfer.

Sanford:—Sanford Presbyterian church was dedicated to Almighty God, August 22nd, 1897, by Rev. D. N. McLauchlin. His sermons morning and night combined, in a happy degree, the elements of brilliancy, learning and consecration. Rev. M. D. McNeill, pastor.

Patterson Mill Church:—During a recent meeting conducted by Revs. W. C. Alexander and Charles F. Rankin there were fourteen additions to the membership, all on profession of faith.

Concord:—Work has begun on the new Presbyterian chapel at Connorsville. The building will be of brick. A fine site has been secured and the building when finished will be handsome and commodious. We have a fine Sabbath School at this point.

Rutherfordton:—This church and community have just passed through a very precious season of grace. For twelve days, Rev. T. M. Lowry preached twice a day; his preaching was Scriptural, doctrinal, practical, simple, earnest, and in the power of the Spirit. God's blessing follows him. No "methods" were used; the Holy Spirit was honored and He wrought powerfully in the hearts of the people. Rev. G. A. Hough and Rev. M. A. Henderson were with us and worked faithfully, God using them to bring a number of souls to Christ. Many Christians were awakened and stimulated and strengthened in their faith and life, and moved to do much "personal" work. The burden of the unsaved was rolled upon God's people; they took it to the Lord in prayer and in many cases the burden was removed by the salvation of the unsaved. There were two additions by letter and twenty eight on profession of faith. The scene this morning, when these twenty-eight souls stood before the pulpit and said to the world "I here and now take Christ as my Saviour," will not soon be forgotten by this old town. Among that number was the mother of grown sons and daughters, and at least six others who had no past Presbyterian affiliation, also four young men, six young ladies and the other young people between ten and fifteen years of age, most of the latter being the children of the covenant. Many eyes, even of strong men, were filled with tears; not a few hearts were moved to strong emotion by the scene. It was an impressive and glorious scene. Among many beautiful incidents is this one; a little girl of fourteen from South Carolina who with her mother was visiting the native home of her departed father, was herself visited by the Holy Spirit and brought to confess Christ. Another pleasant featnre was the attendance of the members of the sister churches and their heartily entering into all the services.

Our little church is greatly encouraged and uplifted; looking backward we thank God, looking forward we take courage and press on. To His holy name be all the praise and glory.

W. R. M.

Rockfish and Duplin Road:—We have just closed an eight day's meeting at Rockfish in the a. m. and Duplin Road in the p. m. We had large and attentive congregations and the singing seemed soul inspiring, and resulted in eight additions to to the former and sixteen to the latter, greatly to the glory of God. The meeting was conducted by Mr. Robert M. Williams, one of the Seminary students, who has supplied these churches very acceptably during his summer vacation. He was assisted by Brother R. V. Lancaster two days and by Brother Forbes, of the Methodist church, whose able discourses were highly appreciated. On next Sabbath, September 5th, Mr. Williams closes his service here in this field and returns to the Seminary, leaving the churches of this group vacant. We hope the brethren from the churches of the group will go to Presbytery at Kenansville prepared to talk in regard to a supply and that the way will be clear for us to get a supply.

TEXAS.

Rev. S. F. Tenney writes:

Protracted Meetings:—Have lately been held at Concord, Beulah, Lovelady, Oakland, and Nevill's Prairie churches. Rev. W. J. Sechrest assisted in these meetings, doing most of the preaching. Mrs. Sechrest also rendered valuable assistance by her sweet singing. Brother Sechrest is not only a good preacher, but also a fine musician, and he and his wife sing nicely together. These services generally were attended by large and attentive congregations. One member was added by profession to each of the last named churches.

Crockett, Tex.

Corpus Christi:—The Rev. A. Walker White has requested the congregation of the Second Presbyterian church, Corpus Christi, Texas, to unite with him in asking the Presbytery of Western, Texas, to dissolve the pastoral relation existing between him and that church. He has been led to make this request by the opinion of his wife's physicians, who say that she should not go back to the immediate coast for quite a long while at least. If this relation is dissolved, a desirable field, in good healthy, spiritual condition will be left vacant, and Mr. White will want work somewhere away from the immediate coast.

PERSONALS.

Rev. Harry W. Myers will visit his home at Lexington, Va., before sailing for Japan, to which field he has been assigned by the Foreign Mission Committee.

Rev. O. B. Wilson, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., is visiting churches in the Valley of Virginia and presenting the cause of Tuscaloosa Institute.

Rev. B. E. Wallace entered upon his duties with Belle Haven and Powelton churches, in Norfolk Presbytery, on Sunday, August 22d, preaching to crowded houses. He writes that the country is fine; most excellent people good churches and a fine field to work. He is more than delighted with the outlook. At Belle Haven there is a pretty manse where he and Mrs. Wallace make their home. The people gave them a most cordial welcome. They are solid, substantial Presbyterians. Mrs. Wallace is supremely happy in the new field.

Rev. Chas. F. Rankin, of Concord N. C., is supplying the pulpit of Rev. J. E. Thacker, of Alexandria, Va., until Sept. 15th.

Rev. J. I. Vance, D.D., of Nashville, is spending his vacation at Alexandria, Va.

Rev. C. A. Munroe will assist Rev. W. C. Brown in a protracted meeting at Clio, N. C., embracing the second Sabbath in September.

Rev. A. J. McKelway was to have begun a series of services at Rockfish and Wallace churches on the 26th, assisting Mr. R. M. Williams.

A protracted meeting began at Hopewell, Mecklenburg Presbytery on the 28th. Rev. Wm. Black is conducting the services.

Rev. D. W. Snyder will sail for Africa on Oct. 6th.

Rev. Jas. E. Green formerly of Springdale, Ark., has entered upon his labors at Morrillton in the same State.

Rev. C. S. Newman, of Canton, Miss., has returned to his pastoral labors. His vacation was spent at Holston Bridge, Va.

Rev. S. S. Oliver, who has been spending his vacation at Madison, N. C., has returned to Union Seminary. He writes that six of the Senior Class were present at the opening of the term.

Rev. W. E. McIlwain spent last Sabbath in Salisbury, N. C., preaching at the evening service.

Rev. E. P. Bradley, who has been serving Mt. Holly church during his vacation, visited his old home at Salisbury before returning to Hampden Sidney.

During the sickness of the pastor, Rev. W. C. Alexander, who has had malarial fever, the pulpit of the First church of Concord was kindly supplied for three Sabbaths by Dr. J. Y. Allison, of Baton Rouge, La. Dr. Allison is the son of R. W. Allison, Esq., of Concord, and his many friends always welcome him gladly to the First church. The pulpit was most acceptably supplied for one Sabbath by Rev. Prof. D. G. Caldwell, of Due West, S. C.

Rev. Wm. Black occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's church, morning and evening, on last Sabbath.

Rev. D. W. Fox, of Lumberton, who has accepted the calls to Red Springs and Antioch churches, Fayetteville Presbytery, will enter upon his labors in October.

Rev. J. G. Allison, D. D., of Baton Rouge, La., who has been visiting at Concord, N. C., is now at Roanoke, Va.

Rev. A. D. McClure is visiting his sister at Franklin, Tenn.

Rev. Alex. Sprunt returns to his labors next week after spending his vacation at Fort Defiance, Va.

The deepest sympathy of many friends is extended to Rev. Dr. A. D. Tadlock. His daughter, nineteen years old, died of typhoid fever last week in the mountains of East Tennessee, near Bristol, where they were spending the summer vacation.

The death of Rev. D. X. LaFar is announced. He has of late been serving Corinth and Richmond churches in Harmony Presbytery. He has spent a good long life of quiet, faithful service. The News and Courier of Charleston says: Mr. LaFar did noble service for his fellowman during the war by remaining in the besieged city and ministering to the bodily and spiritual wants of those who were obliged to linger here, either as home guards or non-combatants.

The Board of Regents of the Barium Springs Orphanage at their meeting last week elected Mr. Peter Marshall Brown to fill the vacancy in the board occasioned by the death of Mr. John E. Oates. The Charlotte Observer says: "It could have made no better selection."

We learn from the Baltimore Sun that Rev. R. A. Robinson, pastor of the Colley Memorial Presbyterian church, Atlantic City ward, Norfolk, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Congregational church at Williamstown, Mass.

PROF. JOHN L. DOUGLAS, M. A.

RECENTLY APPOINTED ACTING PROFESSOR OF MATHEMATICS AT DAVIDSON COLLEGE.

Prof. Douglas was born in 1864, at Winnsboro, S. C. When quite young his father, Jas. Douglas, moved to Yorkville to assume the Presidency of the Presbyterian Female College there. During the five years of his life at Yorkville, Prof. Douglas made his first acquaintance with schools and schoolteachers. For three years thereafter the family lived on a farm at Whitecak, S. C., and John exchanged the textbook and pencil for the "shovel and the hoe." In 1877 Prof. Jas. Douglas carried his family to Blackstock, S. C., which has remained the home-place of his large family ever since. John L., who was the eldest of a large number of sons, was thoroughly prepared for Davidson College by Col. A. R. Banks, at the Banks school in Fort Mill, where he spent two years of most successful study.

In 1884 he entered the Freshman class at Davidson, and took a high stand both in the class-room and on the campus from the very beginning of his course. He was a "First honor man" from the start to the finish of his college career. Lack of means, which would have daunted most young men, caused his withdrawal from college at the close of his sophomore year. He taught a year at his home, then was elected to a larger school at Hampton, S. C. His success here led to his election the next year as first assistant in the Rock Hill Graded School, where he taught two years. At the close of this period he was appointed superintendent of the Chester City Schools at an increased salary. The Rock Hill School was determined to retain his services, and there was some spirited bidding against one another, which ran the salary offered to nearly double what it had been before. Finally Prof. Douglas accepted the superintendency of the Chester Schools, and spent two years there, with growing reputation.

In '92 he gave up this desirable position in order to carry on his education, and re-entered Davidson. The following June he was graduated with the highest honors, winning the Debaters' Medal in his Literary Society. During his whole course his average grade was 98.

The following October he entered Johns Hopkins University, taking graduate courses in Mathematics, Physics and Chemistry. After spending three years of profitable and successful study here, and completing the Ph.D. course with the exception of his thesis, he was elected to the chair of Sciences in the Chatham Academy, a richly endowed institution of Savannah, Ga. Last year was spent in Savannah filling most acceptably the chair aforesaid. This year to the gratification of all who are acquainted with him and with Davidson College, he comes back to his Alma Mater as Professor of Mathematics to take up the work laid down by his old instructor, Dr. W. D. Vinson.

Prof. Douglas comes of a family noted for the gift of teaching. He has not only had long training in College and University, but six years of most varied class-room experience, beginning with a country school, and ending with the superintendcy of a city system. All who know him, and have followed his career as student and teacher, confidently predict a brilliant success for him in his new field of labor. L.

LETTER FROM DR. CHESTER.

HONOLULU, August 13th.

Our missionary party has been wending its way very pleasantly across the Pacific to this point. Some of them indulged in a little seasickness at first, not because the behaviour of the sea justified it, for it has been—as seas go—beautifully smooth and placid; but evidently just to carry out their previously arranged plans.

We have in all fifteen missionaries aboard, two secretaries, and one secretary's wife. (Would there were two of them also). We have two foreign ministers (Mexico and Norway) to Japan, two consuls, one Rear Admiral and two lieutenants of the U. S. N., and two lieutenants of the Russian navy, bound for Vladivostock, where they will assist in the designs of that Empire to put itself in practical possession of China and Korea and then to do—no one yet knows what—to Japan.

As for this island of Oahu and this city of Honolulu, it would be an unwarranted presumption for any but a poet to attempt to describe it. Surveying the landscape from the top of the Punch Bowl, one might imagine himself standing on the Delectable Mountains with the valleys of the land of Beulah spread out before him. Standing in the valley in looking at the green mountains, shrouded in mist and crowned with rainbows, on the one hand, and at the water of the harbor on the other, varying in color from emerald to amethyst, one simply has nothing to say.

The villas of the well to do lie along a thoroughfare leading down to the beach, embowered in gardens and surrounded by groves of royal and cocoanut palms, red flowering mimosas, oleanders and pomegranates. From end to end this street is a vision of enchanting beauty.

Foreigners of every nationality congregate here, the Portuguese being in the majority. But the smart New Englander has the government and with it the lion's share of the good things that are going. The native, who, though fast decreasing, still outnumbers all the others, takes with a sort of sullen resignation what his friends who have come so far to sojourn with him are pleased to give him.

The native man is a fine looking specimen, physically, with a fairly well-shaped head well set on broad, square shoulders. But he is lacking in toughness of fibre, his eyes are dull and his brain is jelly. Most of those on this island are nominally Christians; many, it is to be hoped, really so, but in no respect are they stalwart or enduring. The women are inclined to obesity, wear "Mother Hubbard" wrappers, and in spite of the beautiful flower wreaths on their hats, do not achieve much in the way of picturesque appearance. The flower wreaths are worn by the men also, some of whom are well dressed and look quite handsome.

We reached here Wednesday morning, the 11th, expecting to remain one day, but find ourselves involved in international complications over the registry of our ship, and to-day, Friday, the bulletin announces that "the sailing of the China is indefinitely postponed." Worst of all, we leave the harbor to-night and go out to anchor.

We hope however, that Monday will find us moving on. The trouble is we have no flag. The owners of the China, which was built in England, thought to get her under the American flag by first adopting the Hawaian and then coming in when annexation occurs. But the Hawaian government refuses the registration. The vessel can make time however, when it tries, and we shall probably get in to Shanghai by the schedule in spite of the detention.

But I must mail this letter now.

Yours truly,

S. H. CHESTER.

"COME TO JESUS."

In times of great awakening when the cry is heard, "What shall we do to be saved?" we are accustomed to say with one consent, "Come to Jesus." To us it seems the one thing necessary to be done; all the promises of God are conditional upon it. The assurance of pardon, sanctifying grace, rest, refuge, water of life, are given to those who "come;" and only to those. But what is it to come to Jesus?

Some of the simplest things in this world are hardest to understand. The most difficult problem in astronomy is easy when compared with the mystery of a leaf or a grain of sand. The wisest of the philosophers would have been puzzled if required to explain the philosophy of love; how it is that a new-born child finds its way to its mother's heart. So in religion. It is easier to draw up a whole system of theology than to analyze the first impulse of the soul upward toward God.

We may analyze, explain, paraphrase as we will; in a reduction of the thought to its simplest terms this after all is ultimate, "Come." There are three indispensables. They may be far apart, separated by years, or they may be simultaneous; but no soul ever yet came to Christ without them.

First. A conviction of need.

Second. A persuasion that Jesus alone can satisfy it.

Third. An acceptance of Him.

A sense of guilt is common to all classes of men. We may differ in everything else; we are as diverse in our experiences of sorrow and joy as the autumn leaves. But we are all alike in this, that we have sinned and are conscious of it. The most degraded tribe in the jungles of Africa has its days of heart trouble when all, with one consent, beat upon their breasts and utter their rude confession at the smoking altars of their fetish. We may walk about with an outward look of complacency, binding broad phylacteries upon our foreheads and blazoning our goodness at the street-corners; and in so doing we may deceive others, but never ourselves. We feel the cancer eating inwardly. The spot is on our own souls, dark as that on the hand of Lady Macbeth, which all the waters of the multitudinous seas could not wash out. There is no need to waste argument in convincing men of guilt; the white scales of leprosy are upon them; and though they be clothed in purple and fine linen they know the more appropriate garb is sackcloth and ashes. All of us have reason to walk softly before Him against whose laws we have offended, saying, like good George Herbert, "Sorrie I am, my God, sorrie I am!" But whether this be our attitude or not, we know ourselves to be sinners and feel our need of one mighty to save.

It is further necessary that in some way the Gospel should be revealed to us as the only "power of God unto salvation." So long as we are able to conceive of any other plan we are infinitely far from the Christian life. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so has the Son of man been lifted up that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." But in order to find the advantage of this Gospel of Christ we must turn our eyes away from everything else and believe that there is none other name given under heaven or among men whereby we can be saved. To believe in the atoning worth of morality is to reject Christ; to say that baptism or any other ordinance has saying virtue in it is to refuse His grace. His blood alone has power to cleanse from sin, or else it cannot cleanse at all.

The reason why all men are not Christians is not because they do not feel their need of Christ (for the whole world groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now, waiting—for what? for the coming of the great Cross bearer), but because they are unconvinced that Jesus is the only one. Every man has a Christ, i. e., every man has a more or less confident trust in something as his deliverer from the just penalty of sin. The moralist's Christ is his morality: the Pharisee's is his piety; the Universalist's is God's alleged indifference to affront. From these they derive their hopes for the eternal world; to these they look for deliverance from guilt and suffering. But they are false Christs; deceivers, anti-Christs. They cannot save any more than that Simon of old who led his followers out into the wilderness and there abandoned them. In order to reach the true, it is first required to turn our backs upon the false. We cannot dwell both in Sodom and Zoar. "Ye shall seek me," says the Redeemer. "Ye shall seek me and find me when ye shall search for me with all your heart."

Having reached this point we are ready to take the third and last step which brings us into perfect at-one-ment with God. Thus far all has been preliminary to the consummating act. Now we cross the threshold of the Father's house.

We may know that we are guilty and be fully persuaded that Christ alone can save us, and yet remain forever guilty and unsaved. A man, knowing himself to be penniless, may stand with inexhaustible mines of treasure under his feet and be a pauper still, for it is gold in the hand, not in the mine, that cancels debt. So in the matter of salvation, it is neither creed nor feeling that saves us, but appropriating the living God to be our God and Christ to be our Redeemer. The manna provided for the children of Israel was plenty for all. No toiling at the plow, no sowing or reaping, no grinding or baking was necessary; bread enough and to spare lay scattered through the camp, needing only to be gathered. So free and plenteous is redeeming grace, but unless it be gathered up it cannot satify the hunger of our souls. The bread must be taken and eaten; it must be received into the body and assimilated with the forces of life. This was Christ's meaning when He said: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you."

We may admire Christ as the most perfect man who ever walked on earth, the chiefest among ten thousand; we may revere Him as the only begotten Son of God, co-equal and co-eternal with Him; we may hold to the most orthodox view of the atonement—convinced that He bare the world's sin in His own body on the tree; and yet may be forever lost. It is said by the rabbis that when Aaron made confession of the sins of the people, he laid his hands upon the head of the sin-offering, and pressed with all his might. Would you, friend, escape from the punishment that justly follows a misspent life? There is no other way but to lay your guilt upon Him who was offered up for our transgressions. As you lay hold upon His promise, press hard. Let His love come into your life, and fill it as the rising sun fills the world with glory. This is the last step in "coming to Christ;" nay, rather, it is the only step; and it leaves us at rest in the shelter of His arms, crying with our hearts full of love: "Whom have I in heaven but thee and there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee."—Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., in Christian Intelligencer.

BLESSINGS OF AFFLICTION.

One of the heavy trials of life that comes to some is continaed ill-health. He who has been sick for a few days or weeks thinks he knows the value of health by being deprived of it, but he doesn't know it like the one who has been tanght in the school of ill-health for years. It requires far less faith and patience to bear even a severe spell of sickness than to hold up under the continued loss of health. Most of us could bear a heavy burden for awhile, but if we were compelled to carry even a moderate load on and on with no prospect of relief we should become tired and despondent.

But this is not only one of the heaviest trials of life but one of the most sanctifying as well. Severe pain does not discipline the will and purify the affections as continued suffering or weakness. Even though there be but little suffering yet being denied the pleasures and comforts of life by the loss of health tends to chasten the heart and purge us of worldly-mindedness.

We wonder sometimes at the cheerfulness and unselfishness of those who have long been afflicted, when in truth that long affliction has developed these traits of character. They are not cheerful in spite of, but because of their affliction.

Bitter experiences in life with God's grace takes out the bitter elements of our nature. If we were to look for the purest, sweetest Christian character we should doubtless find it in one whose life had been purified with long affliction and sweetened with bitter providences.—Exchange.

"IN ALL THY WAYS ACKNOWLEDGE HIM.

Perhaps we acknowledge God in spiritual things, but shut Him out of the other parts of our life. We talk to Him about our souls, but not about our daily work, our weekday life. What did you pray for yesterday? Did you men talk to God about your business, your buying and selling, your farm work, your common taskwork? Did you women pray about your household affairs, asking God to help you keep tidy homes, to train your children well, to be sweet-tempered, gentle, patient, thoughtful? Did you young people talk with God about your studies, your amusements, your friendships, your books? We make a mistake when we take God into our counsel in any mere section of our life.—J. R. Miller.

GOD ALL-SUFFICIENT.

God should be all in all to us; he is "God all-sufficient." Let us part even with common, lawful comforts, and try if he alone be not better than all. Like the child with the stalk of grapes, who picked one grape after another from the cluster, and held it out to her father, till—as affection waxed warmed and self faded—she gaily flung the whole into her father's bosom, and smiled in his face with triumphant delight; so let us do, until—loosening from every comfort, and independent of the help of broken cisterns, we can say, "I am not my own! Whom have I in heaven but Thee? and there is none on earth whom I desire besides. Thou art to me as Thou wert to David at the gates of death, "all my salvation and all my desire." After so much love on God's part to us, displayed in rich variety of type and shadow, shall we count any sacrifice hard?—Dr. A. A. Bonar.

COMMONPLACE WORKERS.

Commonplace things are the world's greatest treasures, in the sphere of mind and matter. Air and light, and heat and cold, are commonplace helps to human life, but none of us can get along without them. They are worth more than occasional meteors, and auroras, and eclipses, and cyclones, even though these attract more attention for the time being, Commonsense and ordinary sympathy and average ability do more for mankind than great talent and surpassing genius. A hundred persons can be reached and understood and influenced by an average man, where one can feel in his heart the power of a mighty mind. If we are nothing more than common, let us thank God that we can be God's messengers of love and help to the great mass of our fellows.—Exchange.

Life is not mere living. It is worship—it is the surrender of the soul to God, and the power to see the face of God; and it is service—it is to feel that when we die, whether praised or blamed, whether appreciated or misinterpreted, whether honored or ignored, whether wealthy or destitute—we have done something to make the world better and happier—we have tried to cast upon the waters some seeds which, long after we are dead, may still bring forth their flowers of Paradise. The seed dies, but the harvest lives. Sacrifice is always fruitful, and there is nothing fruitful else. * * * Out of the suffering comes the serious mind; out of the salvation, the grateful heart; out of the endurance, the fortitude; out of the deliverance, the faith.—Rev. Frederic W. Farrar, Dean of Canterbury.

Third Quarter—Lesson XI.

Sept. 12th, 1897.—Rom. xii. 9-21.

Commit to memory verses 16-18.

Subject. Christian Living.

Golden Text "Be not overcome of evil, bnt overcome evil with good. Rom. xii. 21.

CATECHISM.

Question 57. Which is the fourth commandment.

Answer. The fourth commandment is: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man-servant, nor thy maidservant nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day; wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it.

Time. Early in A. D. 58.

Place. Corinth.

INTRODUCTORY.

In the second quarter's lessons one was taken from the Epistle of Paul to the Romans, but it was out of the order of time in the Acts. This lesson is chosen both for the instruction suited to follow the last lesson and because the Epistle was written at the place to which the book of Acts had brought us. It was written from Corinth at the close of the three month's residence of Acts xx. 3, and in the "wintering" of 1 Cor. xvi. 6 Paul had never been to Rome. He had often desired to go, but was hindered hitherto. This letter was next best to seeing the Christians there and instructing them by word of mouth. This Epistle is in more logical form than any other. The doctrinal part extends to the end of the eleventh chapter. The practical part begins with this twelfth chapter, which should be read by Christians very often as it contains the great principles and chief points of daily living. It is well to read the whole book before studying the lesson.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 9. Love. Sincere love, not sentiment or sensuality, but the out-reaching and out-going of heart in affectionate desire and earnest effort to do good to the object of love, whether it be in gratitude and service to God or devotion to our fellowman. Without dissimulation, without hypocrisy or mere pretense, not a mere form, not an outward politeness, but a real love. "This brief clause is the title of the entire section Schaff. Abhor, &c. "Let you love arise from genuine deep emotion; let the basis of your character be an intense hatred of evil, and as strong an adhesion to God" Sunday.

Vs. 10. Be kindly affectioned &c., R. V. "In love of the brethren be tenderly affectioned one to another" The word used is that applied to family affection In honor preferring one another, ready to do the work, foremost in undertaking duties, even the lowly and unrecognized duties, but bestow the honor that men make on others, not seeking, not even claiming honor, but to be faithful, loving and true.

Vs. 11. Not slothful in business, R. V., "In diligence not slothful." In whatever Christian duty requires your diligence not to be slothful. Fervent in spirit, seething, boiling, like a hot spring, the human spirit should be not as natural, bnt as regenerated, for Christians are addressed The opposite of mere animal excitement is meant, in the stirring of the Holy Spirit. Serving the Lord, in whatever we do whether of play or work, whether in temporal or eternal things. In one's daily task, adapting one's self to the necessities of the hour with the self-denying discretion of love true love.

Vs. 12 Rejoicing in hope: in hope rejoicing, as the thing hoped for is the ground rather than the object of the rejoicing. Patient in tribulation Tribulation is both the school and the test of patience. All sorrow, distress or adversity is included. Continuing instant, urgent, pressing, persevering in prayer.

Vs. 13. Distributing: from a Greek word meaning having all things in common, taking part in necessities of others as if onr own: Saints, not holy as sinless, but a name of Christians as belonging, being dedicated, wholly to God.

Vs. 14. Bless them which persecute you. A quotation from the Sermon on the Mount which Paul practiced and knew the importance of.

Vs. 15. Rejoice, &c., sympathize with others both in joy and sorrow. Verse 14 gives what is proper for antipathy and verse 15 for sympathy. This last is not less difficnlt than forgiveness.

Vs. 16. Be of the same mind, exercise the same kind feeling to all, whether rich or poor, high or low. Mind not, do not give undue regard to high things, such as social distinction or objects of personal ambition. But condescend, Greek "be carried away with," them of low degree, them that are lowly whether men or things.

Vs. 17. Recompense, &c. See vs. 19. Provide, take thought and care beforehand in the sight of all men, not to gain their praise but to silence criticism and convince of the sincerity of profession.

Vs. 18. If it be possible, so far as others are concerned, but not to be one's fault, so far as lies in you, live peaceably with all men. The words "possible" and "you" should be emphasized. The R. V. says "be at peace," not merely to live so bnt have right disposition.

Vs. 19. Give place unto wrath. The wrath of God. Do not attempt to execute it.

Vs. 20. Therefore, but as the contrary, follow the proverb. Prov. xxv:21. Coals of fire must mean pangs of shame in him who is treated kindly when good is returned for evil, which may produce penitence and contrition.

Vs. 21. Be not overcome of evil, injnry done yon, or malice or hate manipulated against you—"as you will if you let the evil of others kindle wrong passions in your soul or lead you to do unheavenly things." Peloubet. But overcome evil. This is the positive part required of Christians, With good. A forgiving disposition. Prayer to God to bless our enemies and deeds of kindness and helpfulness whenever opportunity offers. As darkness is overcome with light and love conquers the bitterest foe.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

It is plain that we cannot live these teachings in our own strength. They are possible only as Christ liveth in us.

1. We must confess our failure and inability to do these things.

2. We must surrender to the complete dominion in us of Jesus our Lord.

3. We must yield our members as instruments of righteousness unto God. The Holy Spirit will make the life of Christ effectual to do in us all that is required of us.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Sept 12th, 1897.

PRACTICAL DIRECTIONS.

Text for the week:

Be ye doers of the Word and not hearers only—James 1:22.

Daily Readings:

Monday. Simple clothing. 1 Tim. 1:1-10.
Tuesday. Simple food. Num 11:1-9.
Wednesday. Industry. Prov. 10:4, 5, 15, 16.
Thursday. Sound sleep. Eccl. 5:8-20.
Friday. Use of money. Luke 16:1-12.
Saturday, Talking. Ps. 12:1-8.
Sunday. Topic. Bible directions for practical life. Eph. 6:1. (A memory meeting suggested.)

Notes:

It is not well to decry theory that we may exalt practice, for all effective, useful, or otherwise desirable practice must be founded on, even if it be not the accurate and exact working out of correct theory. It may be well enough too to note that practical means far more than practicable. Practicable signifies capable of being put into practice; but practical implies fit and proper to be used or employed in practice as well as capable of application in that way.

The Bible is the all-sufficient and proper rule for faith and for practice; it is God's revelation to man of what he is to believe and of what he is to do. It inculcates and urges the employment of the energies of body as well as of heart and soul in doing things which will enable and contribnte to our happiness here and hereafter. It tells how to live holily and so to please God; it tells how to employ the faculties of body and mind so as to secure health, physical and spiritual, and to procnre that happiness which will come from rewarded effort and which consists with a contented spirit and a conscience void of offence toward God and man.

It lays down rules for using the gifts which God bestows in the most useful way; for overcoming the temptations and trials of daily life; for regulating our social intercourse and our business intercourse with others; in short for making the most and the best of the life we are living; and for making the best preparation for the life which is to come.

To moralize upon specific applications of these general suggestions would consume space to little profit, as no Ironclad rule can be made to fit every phase of human life and conduct under the immensely diverse circumstances under which such life and conduct must exist.

THE SOUTHERN BIBLICAL ASSEMBLY.

CLOSING SESSIONS.

If any have been kind enough to read the two preceding articles on the Southern Biblical Assembly, it is due them that something be said as to what was done at the closing sessions of the Assembly.

The three schools in connection with the Assembly continued their work according to the plan laid down and with increased interest. In the adult school of Bible study Dr. Shearer gave on Monday and Tuesday two of his best lectures, "Christ's Sabbath and Other Controversies" and "Christ's Prayers." Because of pressing business his Wednesday lecture on the Holy Spirit was omitted much to the regret of the class and Dr. and Mrs. Shearer returned to Davidson on Tuesday afternoon. At the conclusion of his Tuesday lecture the Doctor thanked the class for their kind attention and in turn with unanimous and rising vote the class thanked Dr. Shearer for his able and profitable lectures. (By the way, let me say just here that somebody connected with Davidson ought to let our people know more about the splendid course of lectures that is there offered to our young men. Besides the other advantages offered there, the course of Bible study at Davidson, from which Dr. Shearer culled his Assembly lectnres, should be a strong inducement to young men to go there). Mrs. Bell's Juvenile School closed Wednesday with an enthusiastic meeting in which Mrs. Bell showed her kindly feeling to the class by giving out presents to the little ones who had attended her lectures and the children showed their regard and warm appreciation of Mrs. Bell by presenting to her two beautiful silver tokens.

Miss Nowlin conducted her school of Primary Methods by discussing the snbject of Teaching in the primary classes of the Sunday-school, showing what is the first requisite of teaching, the simple laws of teaching, the three processes of teaching, and the accessories—and by giving some general and helpful hints as to the work of the primary teacher.

On Monday afternoon the last ministers' conference was held in the Presbyterian church, and after a splendid paper by Rev. W. H. Brandenburg, of Winston, on "The Minister and his Master as a Man of Prayer," general discussion was engaged in by a number of ministers present and thus the last conference was made one of the best.

On Saturday and Tuesday nights Rev. Mr. Ennis of Washington, D. C., gave his last two illustrated lectures on the life of Christ, his subject Saturday night being "The Parables" and Tuesday night, "His Passion." These illustrated lectures were largely attended and by many the stereopticon views greatly enjoyed.

The closing lecture of the Assembly by Dr. Otts was, on account of the very stormy weather Monday night, postponed until Wednesday night, and so I did not have the pleasure of hearing it as I left Asheville on Wednesday afternoon. The subject of the lecture was, "The Incarnate Saviour, the Desire of all Nations" This was the last exercise of the Assembly.

The writer does not feel competent to sit in judgment on the Southern Biblical Assembly or to discuss its merits. He can only say that on the whole he enjoyed its sessions very much indeed. Dr. Shearer's lectures alone were worth the trip Besides it was exceedingly pleasant to meet several old friends and to have had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of some of the finest characters he has ever met.

Where the next session of the Assembly will be held has not yet been decided. For some reasons it would seem best, perhaps, to move the Assembly and so it was decided by the proper parties to negotiate with cities like Nashville, Knoxville, and Louisville, as well as Asheville, to find what inducements each would offer to be allowed to have the next Assembly. ADAMS. At the home of her parents in Statesville, N. C., August 18th, 1897, Mary Rebecca, infant daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. R. Adams. Age three months and ten days. "Safe in the arms of Jesus."

YOUNG. At Warwick, N. Y., on the 21st of August, Sarah McInnis, youngest child of Daniel Kissam and Mary McInnis Young of New York City. Aged one year and eight months. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

BOSTIAN. Mrs. Louisiana A. Bostian, of Statesville, N. C., died at Banner Elk, N. C., on August 15th, 1897. Aged 56 years, 3 months, 2 days. She was a faithful member of Front Street church. A loving mother, a kind friend and noble Christian has entered into rest. Her chief delight was in ministering to Christ's "little ones" in this world. Her death was triumphant. Ps. 116:15.

BROWN. Joseph Mott Brown, son of Mr. J. Calvin Brown, of New Sterling, N. C., died at his home on August 22d, 1897. Aged 17 years, 5 months and 26 days. Ps. 39:4.

PATTON. At her home in Asheville, N. C., July 8th, 1897. Mrs. Cornelia C. Patton, widow of the late James W. Patton.

Mrs. Patton was the daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Cyrus Johnson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Charlotte, N. C., and was born Nov. 11th, 1834.

She was a woman of strong faith and of beautiful Christian character, gentle, prayerful, patient, sympathetic. All who knew her testify to the grace of God that strengthened, sweetened and sanctified her life.

The five surviving children will carry with them to the end sweet memories of a devoted mother and the influence of a life hallowed by communion with God. May they all meet her in His presence, where there is fullness of joy, and at His right hand, where there are pleasures forevermore! R. F. C.

MRS. SUSAN SMITH HAMILTON

At her home in Hickory, N. C., August 23d, 1897, Mrs. Susan S. Hamilton, wife of H. C. Hamilton, in the seventy-sixth year of her age.

Mrs. Hamilton was the daughter of Gideon and Susan S. Massie, and was born in Lynchburg, Va., May 28th, 1822 Early in life she professed faith in Christ, and united with Unity church, Lincoln county, N. C., during the pastorate of Rev. R. H. Morrison, D. D.

August 8th, 1843, she was married to Mr. H. C. Hamilton, and thus for fifty-four years they walked together in "sunshine and shade."

As a wife she was gentle and devoted, even more watchful and solicitous for the comfort and welfare of her companion, than for her own.

As a mother she was tender and loving; earnestly endeavoring to rear her children in the faith of that Church she loved so well. For many years it was her custom every day to be alone with God pleading for the children whom He had given her.

Her Christian life was beautiful, exhibiting in a marked degree the graces of humility, love and trust.

Yet she did not escape those seasons of gloom and doubt which are common to Christians, and especially to those of her temperament.

There was no place dearer to her than the house of God; and often has there been noticed the unconscious shining of the face as she sat and listened to the "glorious Gospel of the Son of God."

In her last illness she often suffered much, but all was borne without a murmur, in calmness and patient waiting on the Lord.

Only a few hours before death, as her pastor was about to read and pray with her again, she asked that he would sing her favorite hymn, "Jesus lover of my soul," &c. She then spoke of the sweet assurance she enjoyed of the rod and staff of God supporting her as she was going down into the valley, and so in a few hours, with a mind clear to the last, she passed over the river "to rest under the shade of the trees"

An aged husband, four daughters, one son and many grandchildren survive to mourn her loss; but who, looking back over her life, must say of her, "And to die is gain."

In Memoriam

ALEXANDER. Lee Monteith Alexander, the son of W. Abner and Margaret Hampton Alexander, was born July 20th, 1879, and died May 13th, 1897.

There was something particularly sad in the manner of his death. He had left his home for a short visit to relatives near Huntersville, N. C., and in company with some of his near friends, was out in the fields engaged in hunting, when a gun in the hands of one of the boys was accidentally discharged, the entire load entering Lee's breast, causing almost instant death. The news came like a shock to the whole community. And fell as a terrible blow upon the family To the mother who had watched her boy leave home, and followed him with earnest prayer for God's blessing upon him, is brought the awful message that her son has been killed and in a few hours his lifeless body will be brought back to the home

Lee grew up in Hopewell congregation, where his brief young life was spent. He was a favorite among his associates, and made many friends, having a gentleness of manner that would win its way. He was a devoted brother, a loving and obedient son.

Almost a year before his death he made a profession of religion, and united with the church. He was a regular attendant at Sunday-school and public worship. At home he would frequently come in and ask his mother to play and sing for him some of the familiar hymns. His favorite ones being "Just as I am," "There is a fountain," "Come thou fount of every blessing" and "Why not come to Him now?"

His familiar face is no longer seen in our Sunday-school and church. A dark shadow rests upon the home where he is so much missed, but Christian faith and submission will support these friends in their trial.

"Behind the dim unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above his own."

Extract of letter from the late Prof. B. M. Smith, D. D.

I can most sincerely commend your school to the attention of the public; and for two reasons: First that the instruction given is that of conscientious as well as competent teachers, and that the pupils receive in your family that careful attention as to health and comfort which cannot be had elsewhere except at their home.

From Prof. John C. Rolfe, formerly instructor of Latin in Cornell University, now Professor of Latin in the University of Michigan.

Miss Wailes is thoroughly fitted for her position and is doing excellent work.

Somehow they seemed more loyal and more blest
Than all the rest.
Yet ever did they wonder that their names
Met loud acclaims;
And that such honor unto them was given
In highest heaven.
They had not borne the banner in the strife
Of mortal life.
Their foreheads had not felt the touch of wreathes
Which fame bequeathes
To conquering heroes, as they homeward march
Through victory's arch.
These were the souls, that when the strife was high,
Made soft reply.
The men and women who could patient stand,
And make demand
For peace, peace only, though their pride was crossed,
Their dear hopes lost.
Oft had they caught with soft and naked hands,
The flaming brands
Which anger hurled, and quenched, before it fell,
Some fire of hell.
They did not dream how great their souls had grown;
No sculptured stone
Was piled above their ashes while they slept;
But God had kept
Their faces in His sight; He knew the cost,
When, passion tossed
And sorely hurt, they patient came and went,
On peace intent.
Now they are "blessed" evermore, and lo!
Where'er they go,
The angels look on them, and smile, and say,
"God's children they!"

GOOD MUSIC POPULAR.

The women of Nashville, have commenced with renewed vigor the convocations and musicales which made their building so attractive during May and June. The visit of the New Orleans and Louisiana party, who not only made their State day a success, but exercised a pleasing influence during the whole week of their stay here, gave a new impetus to the musical interest. The several sweet singers which accompanied the party not only gave their services freely during that week, but Madamn Corinne Bouligny Nott has remained to charm hundreds of hearers on more than one occasion in the Woman's Building. Her voice has won for her a triumph.

Mrs. M. S. Lebeck, who is chairman of the musical committee, has given up her usual summer trip in the interest of her work, and has maintained a fairly constant run of attractions during the summer months. Now she is in correspondence with some of the best-known musical celebrities in the country, and her fall programmes promise a series of treats. Anton Seidl, among others, has expressed a willingness to perform in the beautiful Woman's Building.

The star attraction engaged for next week is Victor Herbert, whose Twenty-second Regiment Band is now the leading musical attraction of the exposition. Though Herbert has been here three weeks, he has not demonstrated his well-known ability as a 'cellist, and his first appearance as a soloist will be in the Woman's Building next Thursday. Miss Marie Louise Bailey, a Nashville girl, who has won great success as a concert artist in Vienna and Germany, will give a recital September 25th, when a party of titled Germans will visit the exposition. Miss Bailey has lately announced her engagement to an officer in the Austrian army, and this facts lends a new interest to her next public appearance at her old home.

The music committee has worked with the convocation committee of the Woman's Department with the end in view of making each convocation more attractive by the addition of appropriate musical features.

Blind-fold.

A woman has no right to "go

it blind" in matters of life and health. She has no right to shut her eyes to the plain facts of her physical being and the consequences of neglect. She has no right to be wretched and ill when she might be happy and free from pain.

Women who drag through life weighed down by some torturing, dragging weakness or disease of their sex are not doing their full duty to themselves. They are not taking the means which enlightened science affords them of being well and strong and capable.

These special complaints from which so many women suffer are not necessary. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription positively cures even the most severe and obstinate cases.

It is not a haphazard medicine. It is not a "cure-all." It is a scientific remedy devised by an educated and experienced specialist for the one purpose of curing the special diseases of women.

Tens of thousands of women have been restored to perfect health by this wonderful "Prescription." In many instances they were actually given up as hopeless by physicians and family doctors.

"I have taken both your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription' for chronic inflammation of the uterus and bladder," writes Mrs. M. A. Scott, of Park Rapids, Hubbard Co., Minn. "I also had stomach trouble which was terribly distressing. I have been cured of all. I had suffered untold misery for four years previous to taking your treatment, but began to feel the good effect at once."

Dr. Pierce's thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" contains information of priceless value to women. A paper-bound copy will be sent absolutely free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y. For a handsome cloth-bound copy send 31 stamps.

SEPTEMBER.

The month when sweet apples begin to turn red,
And ripen and mellow on boughs overhead.
Morning-glories have climbed to the top window-ledge,
And goldenrod waves by the roadside and hedge.
The days become shorter and breezes are cool,
And little folks have to go back to their school;
For vacation is over, the Summer is gone,
And Autumn and Winter are now coming on.

GUESSING AT BIBLE HEROES.

CHAPTER 2.

WILL'S HERO.

Grandma noticed the next Sunday afternoon that Hugh and Jack were very busy over their Bibles, and she was very glad of it.

Then, at supper time Mrs. Allan said: "Grandma Bright gave us a lovely Sunday afternoon, did'nt she Artie?"

"Yesh'em said Artie, shaking his head very earnestly.

"Yesh, an' me—I—know a good liewo, I tell you!"

Nita Morgan who did not feel quite at home with her cousins yet, was afraid to say anything, but she looked very pleased, for auntie had been telling Artie and herself about some splendid Bible boys, and they had both selected heroes for their turn.

Friday afternoon grandma was busy getting her room ready for the Guess Club, and one of the first things she did, was to put on her badge.

Behind her pretty screen, she set a waiter of apples, and several ears of pop corn, so you see the Guess Club, did not spend all the time guessing at heroes!

Very soon after sundown there was a tap at the door.

"Come in!" said grandma, and in walked Artie, followed by Nita, and each of them had a small chair, so that they could sit close to grandma.

Then Artie said:

"Gamma, you weekon dose boys forgot? Maybe I better go call 'em an' Nellie too." Grandma smiled and kissed the eager face.

"Well, you can call them, but I think that their memories, maybe, are as long as yours."

"I bet you dey forgot," said Artie, as he ran out—but he came back quickly: "Oh, g'amma, lemme blow de fistle!" Grandma gave him the pretty silver whistle, and he stood on the porch outside of her door and blew the whistle until grandma called out:

"Artie! Artie! that will do dear!" and when he came in his face was so rosy that grandma took her fingers out of her ear and laughted heartily.

Directly Hugh and Will came, and then Nellie, and lastly Jack, who only put his marbles into his pocket after he got inside the door.

"Where are your badges, boys?" asked grandma, for Nellie was the only one besides grandma, who had remembered to put on her badge.

The boys did not wait to reply, but ran out and soon all came back with their badges pinned on.

"We must wear our badges for more than one reason," said grandma, "first, to let people see that we belong to the "G. C." and second, to remind ourselves, so that we can be looking up heroes all the while."

"And now, we are all here. Will, I believe it is your evening to give us a hero."

"Let us remember that there are more ways than one of being a hero."

Will's face flushed a little, but he soon took courage and began.

"My hero was an Ephrathrite. He had to go away from home when he was a little boy. I think his mother must have prayed for him a great deal, for he seemed to be a good boy all the time. She loved him very much, but she had promised to lend him to God as long as he lived. She used to go to see him every year, and she carried something to him every time that she went.

He had to wait on an old man and one night after the lights were all out and he had laid down to sleep on his pallet he heard some one call him, and he ran to the old man's side and said:

"Here am I," and the old man told him he never called.

He heard the voice three times before he found out who it was called him."

Grandma and Hugh were both holding up their hands by this time, and Nellie looked as if she almost knew. Jack, I am afraid, was thinking more of his game of marbles than of Will's hero, for he had one hand in his pocket, and you could hear the marbles knocking together, as if somebody was anxious to get out and to have another game.

"Yes," said Grandma, he was a brave boy, and the very youngest child God ever spoke to, unless we except the Child Jesus, to whom God must have spoken even when He was a little child.

I wonder who can tell me some ways of honoring God?"

Nellie's hand was promptly held up. "By keeping the Sabbath day."

"That is a good answer dear. Now who else can suggest something?"

Hugh said; By keeping His commandments."

Firstrate, for that means in every way honoring Him."

Nita's hand was timidly raised, and Grandma encouraged her by saying:

"Speak out dear, I'm sure you can tell us another way to honor God."

"By telling people about Jesus."

Grandma thought that a very lovely way to honor God, for when we tell people of Jesus' love—we must honor Him.

"Why, why! how times flies here. That was the supper bell, I believe. I had something else for you all to do. Will, can't you and Nellie come back after supper? Just look what we have to do yet.

As grandma said this she pushed aside one fold of her pretty screens, and there was a waiter of apples, and several ears of pop corn!

Everybody clapped hands, and Will cried out;

"We'll come back! Yes'm, this is Friday night. I'm sure mama will say yes. "Who must give us a hero next time Gramma?"

"Did anybody besides Hugh guess Will's hero!"

I 'most got him, Gramma, said Nellie, softly, but "most getting" did not count in this game, and so Grandma told Hugh he must have a hero ready for next time.

After supper they had a grand time popping corn and eating apples, and all the children decided over again, that Grandma was the greatest grandma in the land! D.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. McLaurin: As there was only one letter in the PRESBYTERIAN week before last I thought I would send you one for publication. I am a pretty big little boy eight years old. I live near Lincolnton, but I am staying at grandpa Pegrum's now, he lives near Stanley. I am having a nice time here. Grandpa has so many grapes, watermelons, cantaloups and big red apples. He has a gray horse named Charlie, I ride him to Stanley and get the mail. I think it is much nicer in the country in summer time than in town. I have some pet chickens, one of them has three feet, two on one leg. Sister Lena is staying in Newton now. Papa and brother Steve are going to Wilmington this week. Mamma will be surprised when she sees this in the paper.

Your little friend,
ERNEST VICTOR REINHARDT.

When we see men spending all their time and all the energies of analytical criticism on the Bible, the Observer says, we recall the story of the little girl who, when writing her geography lesson on the Arctic Ocean, said, among other things: "The Arctic Ocean is used principally for purposes of exploration." The Bible with some people is principally used for purposes of criticism.—Watchman.

THINGS USEFUL.

The most delicate way to boil an egg is to pour boiling water over it, and allow it to remain, without boiling, for ten minutes. It will be found to be perfectly cooked.

An excellent device for holding the jelly bag, when straining jelly, is a three-fold towel rack fastened securely to the kitchen wall near the stove or sink. The bag should be provided with four loops of strong tape. Slip the two loops opposite each other on the outer arms of the rail and the alternate ones on the middle arm. This is more convenient than trying to bag to the back of legs of chairs.

Tomato Jelly.—To make tomato jelly or salads, take a can of tomatoes, or, in tomato season, eight medium-sized tomatoes, skinned and stewed. Take also one-fourth of a box of gelatine. Pass the tomatoes through a sieve or strainer to remove the seeds, etc. Season with pepper and salt, and then add the gelatine, which has previously been melted in hot water. It is now ready to be poured into a mold, and then should be placed on the ice to set. When cold, garnish with crisp lettuce leaves and pour over the whole a mayonnaise dressing. Or the jelly may be broken up and used as a garnish itself, with the lettuce and dressing in the center of the dish.

ANOINTED.

Thou can'st not to thy place by accident;
It is the very place God meant for thee;
And shouldst thou there small scope for action see,
Do not for this give room to discontent;
Nor let the time thou owest to God be spent
In idly dreaming how thou mighest be;
In what concerns thy spiritual life more free
From outward hindrance or impediment;
For presently this hindrance thou shalt find
That without which all goodness were a task
So slight, that Virtue never could grow strong;
And wouldst thou do one duty to his mind,
The Imposer's—overburdened thou shalt ask;
And own the need of grace to help, ere long.

—Archbishop Trench.

"THY WILL BE DONE."

God's will for us leads on earth to the noblest, truest, most Christ-like character, and then beyond this world to glory and eternal life. For you, whatever your experiences, however hard and painful life may seem to you, God's will is the very hand of divine love to lead you on toward all that is good and beautiful and blessed. Never doubt it, even in the darkest hour, or when the pain is sorest, or when the cross is heaviest. God's will holds you ever close to God, and leads you ever toward and into God's sweetest rest. It brings peace to the heart—a peace that never can come in any way of our own choosing—to be able aways to say: "Thy will be done."—Selected.

The more thoroughly a man believes in heaven, the better citizen of earth does he become.

REV. K. M. McINTYRE.

Rev. Kenneth M. McIntyre, as his name indicates, is of Scotch descent, his father being Peter McIntyre, and his mother a McIver, of Buffalo congregation in Fayetteville Presbytery. He was born February 10th, 1836; united with Buffalo church under the pastoral charge of Rev. Neill McKay, D. D., in October, 1850. Even at that early age indications were given of his future career. His was a serious nature, his mind active, acquisitive and logical, and seeking for the truth in its proper order and relations. He was fond of reading, and his supply of reading at his home being of a religious and solid kind, he early read and mastered such books as the Shorter Catechism, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, James's Anxious Inquirer, Doddridge's Rise and Progress, Baxter's Call to the Unconverted, and Baxter's Saints' Rest. His father being a farmer and mechanic and of moderate means only, the son was, according to the custom, a farm hand during the spring and summer, and attended school in the fall and winter. Reaching the age of fourteen, he was anxious to secure an education, and his academic training was at Rock Springs (near Pocket) Academy under his brother a well known teacher, Mr. Daniel McIntyre, and at Summerville, Harnett county, under Gen. A. D. McLean and Mr. Daniel McIntyre. At school, having greater religious and Scriptural knowledge than his companions, perhaps as a pastime, but it proved a prophecy, he "preached" to his fellow schoolmates delivering religious instruction from a rude pulpit of rails constructed by them. His collegiate training was at the University of North Carolina where he completed the Sophomore year with second honors. Then after teaching, for thus he made his way, teaching one year and pursuing his studies the next; he spent one year at the University of Virginia, taking the Master of Arts course, and graduating in Moral Philosophy under the distinguished Professor Dr. McGuffey. His Seminary course was at Columbia and at Union—and was interrupted by the war. In March, 1862, he enlisted as a private and served to the close, surrendering with Johnston at Greensboro, April, 1865. In 1863, he was received under care of Presbytery and licensed to preach, and during his military service he preached when circumstances permitted. He returned to Union Seminary after the war, spending a year, entered on the work of the ministry in September, 1867, ordained in April, 1868, pastor of Jackson Springs church, supplying Macedonia, Pee Dee and Sharon —and after surrendering Jackson Springs, took charge of Ben Salem, supplying from two to four churches from his home in Montgomery county. Here he now resides in the bosom of an interesting family and labors with diligence and fidelity in fields accessible to him. In October, 1874, he was happily married to Miss Nannie Gillis, and seven children have been born to them, five daughters and two sons.

Mr. McIntyre's ministry has been altogether in the Presbytery in which he was born and reared—and has been quiet, uneventful, but eminently useful. Disdaining all the maneuvers of human machinery to move the heart rather than to change it through the Word by the Holy Spirit, his churches have grown albeit slowly, steadily and solidly. As a preacher, he usually writes in full, reads rapidly, distinctly and impressively, and is strong, logical, instructive, edifying and convincing.

Notwithstanding his early promise as speaker, and his success as a preacher, it is with the pen that this brother is most effective and powerful. He has written much and well, specially on questions of theology, worship and order, in this paper, in the Christian Observer and other journals, and has contributed articles of marked ability to the Southern Presbyterian Review and The Presbyterian Quarterly. His essays are characterized by original investigation, vigor of thought and clearness and force of expression.

Mr. McIntyre is an able, adroit argumentative debater—a capable dialectician, an adversary in discussion to be dreaded and worthy of any foeman's steel, and an ally whose advocacy leaves nothing to be desired. His eminent abilities, his wise views on all questions of church polity, views which though at first seeming too rigid, the Church has in every instance approved, are known only to the brethren of his Presbytery. His voice is rarely heard in higher courts, for his modesty obscures his learning. It is not surprising that his distinguished pastor, Rev. Dr. McKay, that man of affairs who knew men, and who was himself an able debater, spoke of the young pupil in his church as his Timothy, the new Thornwell, and presaged for him a career of usefulness and influence. May he long be spared to benefit the Church by his wise counsels, to set the example of godly simplicity of life, and by his own contentment with inconspicuous usefulness to protest against the restless and ambitious self-seeking of the age. His friends sincerely hope that in the ripeness of his matured powers he may present to the Church and the world some treatise rich in thought and wisdom which the world will not willingly let die.

Prayer is a privilege, rather than a duty. God does not need our prayers, but we need His help and grace. It is a great condescension on His part to ask us to make known our requests unto Him, infinitely more so than it would be for a king to invite the petitions of his humble subjects. But God knoweth our frame; He remembereth that we are dust, and, as He is our Father in Christ Jesus, He pitieth His children and is not deaf to their sighings and longings.—Lutheran.

Exercise your souls in a loving sympathy with sorrow in every form —Butler.

ELDERS.

The lesson notes for the Sabbath, September 19th, will be found in this issue of the PRESBYTERIAN (as usual a week ahead) that they may be in the possession of our Sabbath-school workers before hand. We are quite sure that the study of the Sabbath-school lessons will be very profitable to all our people whether they attend the schools or not. This particular lesson brings to our notice the elders of a particular church. They had come to meet the great apostle on his way to Jerusalem.

After some words general and personal as to his own life the apostle charges the elders in the words of the twenty-eighth verse of the twentieth chapter of the Acts as recorded in the lesson. This verse is one of the proof texts of our Presbyterian polity. It contains the doctrine and duties involved in the office of elder.

Three names are implied. In a previous verse of the chapter it is said that Paul sent for the elders of the church at Ephesus to meet him at Miletus. This word translated elders is actually presbyters the very word in the Greek from which we get our words Presbytery and Presbyterian. If our Baptist brother was right in claiming Scripture warrant for the existence of his Church because he found "John the Baptist" in the Scriptures, much more may we Presbyterians say that the term "Presbytery" in the Scriptures warrants our claim that the Presbyterian Church is distinctly recognized and approved. The translation "Elders" in verse seventeen is correct. The Presbyterian Church polity is that of a church governed and administered in all its affairs by elders. In 1 Timothy v. 17, two classes of elders are mentioned, those that rule and those that labor in word and doctrine, from which we get our warrant for the distinction between ruling elders and pastors.

In the verse we are now considering the word used is overseers. That is what Paul calls the elders of Ephesus. The word of the Greek means literally bishops. It is the same word translated bishop in the Epistles to Timothy and Titus. It is the word which prelatical churches use in their names and claims to be Episcopal. The word in the Greek and singular number is Episcopos. But we Presbyterians are the most truly entitled to the office of bishop, in as much as Paul here calls the elders bishops. The fact is that all elders are bishops as overseers of the flock. It is not a title which Paul uses but a responsibility to which he refers, a grave and solemn responsibility of elders to take oversight of the Church as the flock. So, it was not merely a bit of pleasantry, but as tatement of fact which has been attributed to Rev. Dr. Atkinson of our Presbyterian Church. We have heard that when his brother the beloved minister of the Episcopal Church was ordained bishop, not hearing from this Presbyterian brother for some days, he wrote to ask why he had not been congratulated upon his elevation to the office of bishop. The Presbyterian brother answered that he did not see any occasion for congratulation as he had been bishop for twenty-five years. And so he had been, for every elder of the Presbyterian church is a bishop, an overseer.

When Paul tells these elders and charges them to feed the Church of God he uses a word that is very frequently fonnd in the Bible. It means literally, to shepherd the flock. The combined thought is that the elders should take oversight of the flock as shepherds. To feed the sheep is only a part, albeit a characteristic and very important part, of the shepherd in caring for the sheep. The Great Shepherd, our Lord Jesus Christ, is described in the twenty-third Psalm. Every true elder should be a shepherd after the pattern and example found there. The more our elders seek to be such, the greater will be their efficiency and the larger their success in their office.

There is a word of our language which has come to us from the Latin and is familiar to Presbyterians. It is the word pastor. It is now used as the distinctive title of the elder who is set over the flock to labor in word and doctrine. It has come to this rather by usage and accommodation. It means shepherd. It carries the meaning of this responsibility which Paul plainly puts upon the elders of Ephesus. It is therefore true that every elder is a shepherd of the flock, in the church of God. Every elder is a pastor and is therefore taught here to feed the Church of God.

This threefold office of elder, bishop, pastor belongs to the one class and is correctly interpreted in our Presbyterian polity as belonging to those who are elected, ordained and installed to the office of elder.

AN APPEAL.

The Support Fund of the Orphans' Home is completely exhausted—not a dollar in it. Christian friends, more than eighty fatherless ones wait on you for the supplying of their daily wants. Their faith and our faith in your willingness and readiness to supply all their wants is unwavering. Every summer we experience a time of scarcity, but the Orphans' Home year, which closes with the 30th of September, has never found the Home in debt for food and clothing. Shall the present year be an exception ? Do we hear you say no, no ? Doubtless the present embarrassment arises in part from the death of our beloved Treasurer. Friends have held their contributions not knowing where to send them. But now a new Treasurer has been elected. Let all money be forwarded to him with all possible dispatch, that he may be encouraged in his labor of love, and the wants of the fatherless supplied.

Send all money to Mr. P. M. Brown, Charlotte, N. C., Treasurer of the Orphans' Home.

In the care of the fatherless,

R. W. BOYD,
Supt. Orphans' Home.

WE HAVE not been greatly surprised that our friends have not been paying us readily during the past summer season, but now that the crops are gathering and that funds for them are being realized we appeal most earnestly to those who are indebted to us to make prompt payment. Our list shows some long in arrears ; those we urge to pay in part at least, that we may keep moving in our work without embarrassment. Please do not neglect this.

The N. C. PRESBYTERIAN depends for its support mainly upon the Presbyterians of North Carolina. And has it not a right to expect that they will give it a generous support ? Year in and year out it is its special work, engaging all the talent and energies of its conductors and yielding every facility at its command to publishing what the Synods and the Presbyteries require, at the same time serving as the most efficient means of communication between the ministers and churches of the State.

Has it not become by this long and faithful service entitled to special recognition and support ? We appeal to the ministers and elders of our churches to place an influential and energetic agent, who will actively canvas for the paper, in every congregation. We will gladly pay all expenses incurred and add satisfactory remuneration for time and trouble.

Our Album has up to date given to the Presbyterians of the Synod of North Carolina such an amount of biography of its ministers and elders and such a history of its churches as could not, or can not, otherwise be obtained from any source whatever. It is our purpose to continue this, but we specially desire that photographs and sketches of our deceased ministers may be sent to us that we may make the service we are rendering more extensive and the history more complete. Already we have promise of some of these,

We will be glad too to publish sketches of churches, with cuts. What a fine thing it would be for every Presbyterian church in North Carolina to thus have its history preserved. Will be glad to hear from churches desiring this. It will be necessary for such churches to furnish the cuts, which will be returned to them of course. If they will furnish us good photographs we can obtain for them excellent engravings at very moderate cost.

REV. DR. RICHARD S. STORRS has announced his determination in October next to retire from the Presincy of the A. B. C. F. M.—the ongregational Board of Foreign issions, commonly known as the merican Board. He is now 76 ars old and has held the office uring the past ten years during hich the Board has seen exceeding- stormy times. To the superb anagement of Dr. Storrs is due, in rge measure, the successful exit of e Board from these trials. At resent like most institutions deending upon the gifts of the people e treasury of the Board is far om repletion, but as the resident assures the friends of the oard this does not influence his deision to retire. During his term of ffice missions have been established China, Japan, Persia, the islands the Pacific and other places. hen such men as Dr. Storrs retire e are apt to think the cause must ffer seriously—sometimes almost collapse, but God makes opportunities and raises men to meet them.

The Independent says : "Dr. Schell, e Rector of the University of Wurzburg, and head of the Catholic faculty at that institution discusses oman Catholicism as a principle of rogress, and criticises in a most deided way the trend and tendencies f modern Roman Catholicism, doing all this, however, in the interests f the Church of which he is a deoted adherent. Within a few weeks he book has been published in five ditions and is the most discussed heological work of the day. Schell penly acknowledges that in modern ife and thought Protestantism is a nuch more decided factor and force han Roman Catholicism is. The easons he gives which hinder the atter Church from being the power should have been in modern life re the following : 1. The lack of lergy that is thoroughly trained cientifically and economically ; 2, he shallowness of Roman Catholic preaching ; 3, crowding the Scriptures into the background ; 4, the endency of restricting the active race of God and the real spirit of oliness and true morality and eighborly life to the confines of he Catholic Church ; 5, the Sacramentalism of the Catholic clergy, the anger of their becoming mass-riests and sacrament-merchants (Sakraments-kramer) ; 6, the officious ctivity of the priests ; 7, their preference of polemics ; 8, their love or controversy ; 9, last, and decidedly not least, the influnce of the Jesuit order. Schell's ssociates in the Wurzburg Faculty have declared against him, and the Catholic press of the Continent criticises him severely. It is thought that this theological school will be boycotted by many Catholic students as long as Schell continues there as a leading teacher."

The above shows the Presbyterian Church is not alone in its troubles with erratic preachers: The Roman Catholic Church should not be blamed for proceeding against Dr. Schell, albeit he is no doubt right in point of fact. He is not right as a Roman Catholic.

ON FRIDAY night last, at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Nannie Tillett Allison, wife of Rev. T. J. Allison, pastor of Sugar Creek church, died at Morganton, N. C., after many months of greatest suffering. A fitting memorial tribute to her pure and lovely character doubtless will appear later. The simple announcement will draw deeply upon the sympathies of the friends of Brother Allison throughout our Synod and the South and upon the friends of those so sadly bereaved with him.

AN ORDER of the Roman Catholic Church that its priests shall not ride the bicycle has an odd sound. It would be undignified of course and dignity stands in great stead where persons occupy positions where a word is law. A bishop in Hungary forbade his priests to ride the bicycle. They remonstrated ; the matter was appealed to the "Sacred congregation of the Bishops and Regulars" at Rome and the answer received it may be admitted is reasonable and weighty from the Roman Catholic point of view :

"This Sacred congregation has subjected to careful scrutiny the inquiry which your Grace has presented in reference to priests who use the wheel called velocipede. The aforesaid Sacred Congregation praises and commends the zeal and prudence of your Grace, because a prohibition of this sort not only frees the priests themselves from the perils of the body, but averts scandals and derision of priests by the faithful."

In Europe it is said the prohibition put upon the priests is common, but it has not been heard of in this country.

THE WORK OF JESUS CHRIST.

BY REV. EDGAR TUFTS.

The first recorded words of Jesus are: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business." These were spoken when He was only twelve years of age among circumstances too familiar to need repeating. Later in life He said: "I must work the works of Him that sent Me while it is day." In His prayer for His disciples just before He was crucified, He said: "I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do." The last words that He spoke before yeilding up the ghost on the cross were: "It is finished!" From these few expressions uttered at different periods of His life, it is evident that Jesus was conscious of the fact that He had a work to do. That this was true we naturally conclude from the fact that God never creates anything without giving to it some special work to perform. The sun has its special work, which is to give heat and light. The winds have their special work to perform, and if we could thoroughly understand everything in nature we would see that even the annoying insects and poisonous serpents have their special work. In a high sense is this true of man. Every man has a special work to do. To some it is given to rule; to others to teach; while to others it is given to perform the humbler duties of life. But in every case God has given to each man a special work to perform. This being true we are not surprised that Jesus was conscious that he had a work to perform, or that He should have spoken of it as often as He did. But what is this work which he felt weighing upon Him at the early age of twelve, and to which He referred when at the close of life He said: "It is finished."? It shall be the purpose of the balance of this article to show, first, what this work was; second, how it was accomplished; third, that it has been approved, and accepted and fourth, for what purpose it was accomplished.

The work which Jesus came to perform was to save men from their sins. This we prove: (a) from the meaning of His name. Before He was born we are told that an angel appeared unto Joseph and announced to him that his espoused wife should "bring forth a son, and thou shall call His name Jesus; for He shall save His people from their sins." It is a noteworthy fact that nearly all Scriptural proper names have a special significance in their meaning. Sometimes they signify the meaning of the character of the persons which they represent; sometimes titles. As an example of the first we notice Jacob which means supplanter. He was given this name because he supplanted his brother Esau in his birthright. His name was afterwards changed to Israel, which means to strive with, because he wrestled with the angel all night. Another example is Abram, which means father of eleven. This was changed to Abraham which means father of a multitude. As an example of a person's name meaning a title we have Malachi, which means one sent, a messenger. Another example is Jeremiah, which means one whom Jehovah has appointed. So the name Jesus means Saviour. It was because he would save His people from their sins that He was given this name. It carries with it the very meaning of His character and the nature of His work. Likewise His other name Christ, means to anoint. But when anyone was anointed he was generally set apart by this act and consecrated to office. For example, David was anointed for the office of king. In the case of the priests they were nearly always inducted into office in this way. So that the full significance of the name Jesus Christ is, Saviour, the anointed. The first signifying his character, and the second his title, both of which relate to His work and indicate the meaning thereof.

(b) From the fact that Jesus declared this to be His work. He says: "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost." Surely he ought to have known what His work was! If a man professes to be a physician and proves it by healing the sick and shows his credentials that he has graduated from a medical college, we are bound to believe that he is what he claims to be. This is what was true of Jesus. He claimed to save men and proved it by saving every one that ever came to Him. He had with him credentials in the divine power to work miracles, which proves that he came from heaven. So that if we treat Him as honestly and fairly as we do other men we are bound to acknowledge that His work was to save men from their sins.

(c) From the fact that God implied as much on two different occasions by a voice from heaven. When Jesus was baptized there came a voice from heaven saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Surely we cannot believe that God would have testified that this was His beloved Son and that He was pleased in Him if it were not true. And how could God have been pleased in one who was then getting ready to deceive the people? Again, when Jesus was on the Mount of Transfiguration, there came a voice from heaven saying: "This is my beloved Son; hear Him." Here God commands us to hear Jesus. Would he have commanded this if Jesus had been a fraud? By these voices from heaven God declares that He is pleased with Jesus' work and that we are to hear Him, when he tells us what this work is.

Having seen from the significance of His names, from His own testimony and from the testimony of God himself that Jesus' work was to save men from their sins, let us now see how this was accomplished. The first thing that Jesus had to do in order to accomplish this was to become man. Not a semblance of a man, but a real, true man, with every essential mark that goes to make up man. He had to assume the same physical form, with all the natural appetites of man and all the infirmities of the flesh, except sin. (Why not sin? Because sin is not one of the essential marks of man. Adam existed as man complete before sin came into the world.) He was born of a woman, he grew in human wisdom and physical statue and was subject to his parents just as other children. He was subject to hunger and thirst, and weariness just as other men. Death laid its cold grasp upon him just as it sooner or later will do upon every mortal. So that in every sense Jesus was man. But why did He become man? Could He not have come to this world in the form of an angel or some other supernatural being? Surely He could, but if He had He could not have represented man. It was man who broke the law, and therefore none other than man could pay the penalty which God's justice required for the transgression of His law. In order therefore for Jesus to perform His work of saving man from His sins He had to become man so that He could take His place. No other being in heaven, in earth, or in hell could have filled this place!

(b) But not only did Jesus have to become man, He also had to obey the law which man had broken in order that He might transfer its perfect obedience to man. Before Jesus became man He was above the law and in no wise subject to it. He himself had made the law. A master can make certain laws for his slaves and not be subject to them himself. For example, he can require of them a certain amount of work performed by a certain specified time and in a specified way. This illustrates the way in which Jesus being above the law became subject to it. The very moment He became man, he then became subject to the law, for it is binding on every man. That He obeyed the law, both ceremonial and moral perfectly, we prove from the fact that the overscrupulous, camel-swallowing and great straining priests could not find anything against him. They then sent him to Pilate the Roman Governor who said: "I find no fault in Him." At the cross one of the soldiers who helped to crucify Him testified saying, "Certainly this was a righteous man." Jesus himself claimed that he had kept the law perfectly and challenged anyone to find any sin in Him. But it is not necessary to dwell upon this point longer here, for when we show that God has accepted and approved of His work, we will show that His obedience to the law must have been perfect and complete, otherwise God could not have accepted it.

(c) But it was not enough for Jesus to become man and then obey the law perfectly. He had in the third place to suffer and die to save man from his sins. The righteousness which Jesus worked out for man in obeying the law would not do him any good, though it were imputed to him, so long as he remained a lawful captive in the hands of Satan. So that before this spotless robe of Christ's righteousness could be given to man he had to be redeemed from the clutches of hell, and the only way that this could be done was for Christ to suffer the penalty of death upon the cross. In dying on the cross the wrath of God was poured out on him, that was due to those men whom by that act he saved from this wrath. If Jesus, after He had wrought out man's righteousness, returned to heaven without suffering the penalty of death for man, then would have been the strange anomoly of God's elect souls, clothed in Christ's righteousness and at the sams time lawful captives of satan and his host. On the other hand if Jesus had simply died for man without having lived in perfect obedience to the law there would have been the no less strange anomoly of God's elect souls redeemed from hell, but not clothed with any righteousness sufficient to give them an entrance to heaven—so that we see that both were necessary, and they both had to be done by man.

CHILDREN'S DAY FOR HOME MISSIONS.

The General Assembly has already been asking the Sabbath-school to contribute on fifth Sabbaths for support of Christian schools in the Indian territory. That may be called children's work for children. The last Assembly took action intended to bring the children of the Church into close sympathy with the entire home missionary work of the Assembly. The Assembly adopted the report of its standing committee on Sabbath-schools and set apart "the last Sabbath of September for Children's Day for Home Missions to correspond with Children's Day for Foreign Missions." There are special reasons why the children should enter heartily upon the observance of this day. This is their country in which they are to spend their lives. If we allow the reached word to cease, our churches to be closed, our Sabbaths to be destroyed, a generation of grown men and women, heathen, would be here in thirty years from to day. But if our home missionary work we can be instrumental in having this nation to be a people whose God is the Lord, souls will be saved, righteousness will exalt this nation and the home-land of the children of today will be a happy land in the years when these children shall be full grown men and women.

A suitable exercise, (a number of copies) has been mailed to all superintendents whose address we know and to the pastors where we have not the address of superintendents, and now we trust that all teachers, superintendents, pastors and parents will interest themselves in this good work. The money will go to support 85 or 90 missionary ministers and to aid in erecting church buildings in Arkansas and west of the Mississipi river. Prompt remittance requested. Urge the children to earn money for this purpose.

Fraternally,

J. N. CRAIG,
Secretary.

The list of advanced subscribers to the Memorial Volume of the Westminster Assembly Celebration is now nearly 1,300, and names are still coming in. The volume will be out early in September, and an edition of 2,000 will likely be issued at first. Those desiring the advantage of the reduction in price for advanced subscriptions should send in their names to Dr. Hazen, Richmond, Va., at once.

THE OPEN BIBLE.

So far as, and so long as England remains true to that simple, unadulterated Word of God which has been purchased for us by the misery of exiles and the blood of martyrs; so far and so long as she stands fast in the freedom wherewith God has made her free, and is not again entangled with the yoke of bondage—so far and so long as she refuses to be either driven into indifference by disgust or seduced into delusion by false religion; so far and so long will she maintain the honor of this great people. All else—call itself by what sounding name it will—will prove to be but booming brass and tinkling cymbal. Let England cling to her open Bible, let her learn from it the broad truths of primitive Christianity, and be faithful to them; let her teach it to her children, and her children to their children, and their children to generations yet unborn, and then no wind that blows, no storm that beats, will shake her invincible foundations, for she will be founded upon a rock! But let her apostasize from its pure lessons into humanly invented falsities, and I would not give fifty years' purchase either for her greatness or for the inablity of her Church.—Dean Farar.

It is the habit of the age to glory in its own triumphs, its conquests of material forces, its philanthropic and educational achievements. There is a question if there is not too much self-satisfaction in these respects. No doubt the world moves, but progress is not uniform. In the great struggle of development there may, on the whole, be gain, but there are many points at which there is failure to preserve results already secured. A marked instance of this is the failure to preserve in the minds of children the habits of obedience and respect for authority, which were so carefully taught a few generations ago.—Springfield Republican.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Mr. John Russell Young, superintendent of the new congressional library, will introduce a department for the blind. There are now a number of volumes in the raised letter and Mr. Young intends making the list complete.

On August 6th, the birthday of Alfred Tennyson, the memorial beacon was dedicated at Freshwater, in the Isle of Wight. It is in the form of an Iona cross of white Cornish granite, and stands upon "the ridge of a noble down," of which Tennyson wrote when he invited Maurice to Farringford. The inscription, unveiled by the Dean of Westminster, reads: "In memory of Alfred Lord Tennyson, this cross is raised, a beacon to sailors, by the people of Freshwater and other friends in England and America."

The September installment of David A. Wells's series on Taxation, in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly will discuss real and personal taxes. Some entertaining and instructive incidents are given which have arisen out of the efforts of the law to establish a sharp dividing line between the two.

Hall Caine's "Scapegoat" is based upon the 16th chapter of Leviticus, which contains an account of the sending of the Scapegoat into the wilderness as a live sacrifice for the sins of Israel. It is a well known fact that the author bases his stories upon some Biblical event or custom.

A final paper made up from the journals of the late E. J. Glave appears in the September Century under the title of "Cruelty in the Congo Free State." Mr. Glave was sent to Africa to investigate the slave trade for The Century, and he successfully crossed the continent only to die at the mouth of the Congo. In Mr. Glave's diaries were found many references to cruelties practiced in the name of the Congo Free State by its soldiers and the Arabs in its employ. The article will have many illustrations from photographs.

The invention of geometry is attributed by some to the Assyrians or Chaldean philosophers, by others to the Egyptians. Geometry was brought into Greece by Thales, in 600 B. C. The study was greatly improved by Pythagoras, and brought to perfection by Euclid, 300 years B. C. The researches of Archimedes were made in the third century before Christ.

BOOKS.

A Retrospect of the Reign, The New Astronomy, An English Square in Paris, An Indian Romance, British Interests, and the Walcott Commision, Marston Moor—July 2d, 1644, The Growth of Caste in the United States, A New Fibre, The Present Government in Turkey, An Angler's Summer Eve and The Story of the First Chartered Company are among the articles in September Eclectic. E. R. Pelton, Publisher, New York.

In glancing over The Bookman for September we see the faces of Hall Caine, Louis Becke, Elbridge S. Brooks, Fontura Xavier, Artemus Ward, B. P Shillaber (Mrs. Partington) Josh Billings and John G. Saxe which, with the knowledge that The Bookman is always good, denotes that a treat is in store. Dodd, Mead & Co. New York.

For a short history of Germany we would recommend the little work of Kate Freiligrath Kroeker, published by D. Appleton & Co., New York, price 60 cents. Germany is one of a series of history for young readers sent out by this enterprising firm and is a most charming book. It embraces the salient points of interest and all is told in clear, concise style, adapted for the school room. The book is strongly and pretily bound and is of a convenient size.

We have read with pleasure the third of Mrs. Kingsley's works upon New Testament characters. Titus and Stephen are widely known and have been well received. Paul a Herald of the Cross is equally worthy of wide distribution. Mrs. Kingsley draws her characters well and shows in the background of her story much study and great familiarity with the manners and customs of the early Christian era. Her vivid imagination has excellent material to work upon. Paul is more a collection of pen pictures than a continued story, but whether the scene be among the humble followers of the Nazarene or in the gaudy halls of Roman glory, the attention is held and the beauty and peace of the Christian life is set forth. Henry Altemus, publisher, Philadelphia.

Handbook of Greek and Roman History. By George Castegnier, B. S., Bl. Flexible cloth, 12mo, 110 pages. Price, 50 cents. American Book Company, New York, Cincinnati and Chicago. We have in this compact little volume a cyclopædia of Greek and Roman history which will at once command favor for two qualities—brevity and convenience. The book contains just the facts in regard to important persons, places and events of ancient history which every scholar ought to know or have at instant command. It is intended primarily to facilitate the work of students in reviewing subjects already studied in larger text-books, and in preparing for college examinations, but will also be found useful for general readers who wish to refresh their minds on classical and historical subjects.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Evangelistic Notes, September:—Encouraging tidings come from all parts of the field. At Shallotte in Brunswick county, the people have completed arrangements for a good house of worship, and this will give a new impetus to the work there. Mr. J. E. Ballou has completed his summer's work in Madison county, and his tours of exploration and the admirable reports he has made of the field will be of great srrvice in the future. Mr. Ballou has walked 360 miles, visited 150 families, and held 40 services or public worship, besides conducting family worship in 58 homes. This has all been done in a little over two months. Before his return to the seminary he had a conference with Rev. E. MacDavis who now takes charge of the Madison county work, and whose services the committee has been most fortunate in securing.

Rev. L. A. McLaurin writes that as a result of the meeting held at South Toe, there were 48 professions of faith and that there are 27 applicants for membership in a church to he organized there, the first Presbyterian church in Yancey county. Thus our gracious Master is blessing work done in His name.

September is one of the months set apart by the Synod for regular contributions to the Synod's Evangelistic Work. The Presbyteries, with the exception of Mecklenburg and Asheville have made the same order. Envelopes for distribution among the people have been sent to the pastors. The money is needed for the payment of our worthy and faithful workers who are doing so much for the welfare of our beloved Church and for the glory of Christ. With an earnest and concerted effort on the part of the pastors to raise the full amount apportioned their churches, it will be possible to make the reports to the Synod that we owe no man anything save to love one another.

A. J. McKELWAY,
Superintendent.

New Hope Church, Brunswick County:—Has recently enjoyed a rare treat. Rev. R. V. Lancaster was with us for two days. On Saturday night, he gave a lecture on China and her People. Bro. Lancaster had his curios which he brought back from China with him, and our people became very much interested in China and her customs. On Sunday we had two good gospel sermons which did us all good. Brother Lancaster's preaching is plain, spiritual and pointed. We all enjoyed his short visit and hope we can have him back again soon for a longer stay.

Alamance:—This historic old church has passed through a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord which resulted in fifteen accessions. Rev. R. A. Brown preached on the fifth Sabbath in August. Rev. M. H. Hartsell, of the M. P. church on Monday, and Rev. C. W. Maxwell of Durham, for four days following told the Old, Old Story with such tenderness and simplicity that God's people were strengthened and thirteen young persons came out on the Lord's side. To God be all the glory. Rev. H. D. Lequeux is pastor of this church.

Hawfields:—We have had a time of refreshing at Hawfields this week and last. Brother C. W. Robinson did most of the preaching, and close searching preaching it was. The congregations were large, and pervaded by a spirit of solemnity and prayerful expectation. Christians were much revived, and more than twenty persons confessed Christ. It was a tender season of drawing near to the Saviour, and reconsecration to His service.

Pocket Church:—We have just closed a meeting of several days at this church. The Holy Spirit honored and made effectual the services. God's people were edified and drawn closer together. Sinners were converted, and seven were added to the church on profession of faith in Christ. Rev. Messrs. K. A. McLeod and J. M. Wicker preached with great power and we yet expect a greater harvest from their earnest weighty words. This church, comparatively young, is now erecting a house of worship. M. D. M.

New Hope Church, in Orange Presbytery: Has lately enjoyed an eight days meeting in which Dr. E. C. Murray preached for five days with great acceptance by the people. His clear, pointed sermons —mostly to Christians—did us good. The pastor continued the services for three days after Dr. Murray left us and at the last service the Lord's Supper was administered and one infant and one adult received the sacrament of baptism. During the meeting two members were received on professien of faith and others are expected to joln soon.

ing, you exclaim, "Why, our always lovable Peace has renewed her youth!" For, from head to foot, she has a new attire of white and green on all the window blinds, cornices and majestic columns. The immense white pillars fairly glisten! You think this is elegant; but step within and you shall see some thing better still. Hundreds of dollars have been spent this summer and the whole interior of the building has undergone thorough renovation — the greatest work of twenty years. As you are about to put foot upon the floor, you become an oriental and feel like removing your sandals; from the first story to the fourth, in all the halls and rooms, you walk upon freshly stained floors. And the walls are white and pure, in their fresh dress. The renovation has extended to the recitation rooms and the rooms for piano practice, the dining-room, sitting-rooms, parlors, the cosy place that some people will persist in calling "the infirmary"—as if there could ever be "infirmity" amongst those happy-hearted girls at Peace Institute! Just wait ten days and then see them coming in on every train. We can hear their merry voices ring out in glad surprise as they see how lovely everything has been made, to welcome them. The indications are most encouraging. The year promises prosperity and happiness. All the teachers except one will return. Reluctantly, after much dubiety, we have been compelled to see that her excuse is rational She has married!

EXTRACTS "FROM FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF INDIA."

BY GEORGE SHERWOOD EDDY.

[At this time anything concerning India possesses some element of timeliness and we give the following article in connection with Young People's work from "The Stundent Volunteer" with much pleasure.]

From Poona I crossed the country to Calcutta. If in an ordinary western American landscape you insert a few lazy palm trees; for bustling cities imagine countless villages of mud houses sleeping peacefully beneath their grass roofs; people the land with millions of dark skinned, half-clad natives in almost unbroken heathenism, you have India.

I find work to do in English on every hand. At a railway station, a native gentleman asks me for the best authority upon the American revolution. The conversation takes a deeper turn, and he shakes hands, giving his word to read the New Testament with open mind. In the train is an attractive Parsee boy. I cannot keep from putting my arms around him, as I tell again the old sweet story which sounds so new out here in India. The seed is sown, and we exchange a loving good-bye, knowing that if the truth takes hold it will cost him persecution and the loss of all things. Yet Heaven is on the horizon here in India, and a life that costs us something brings God near.

At Calcutta I was asked to become a College Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in India, in addition to the work of Traveling Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement. I started through the colleges of the Bombay Presidency in January. The opportunity of the work is simply overwhelming. I have had two and three meetings a day in nearly every college, and have had to leave much undone. To think of touching in the course of the year a large part of the 1,700 missionaries in India (shall they be touched in the weakness of self or the mighty power of Christ's presence?); to see the possibility of preaching the Gospel in the power of the Holy Ghost to thousands of the heathen students of this great land; and to touch nearly every Christian student in India, helping to organize these men who are to mould the future Church of India! The opportunity is far greater than it was even in the American colleges. I would rather have five years here in the power of God than a life-time at home. When I hear of dear Donald Fraser, through the power of prayer behind him, seeing six hundred students brought to Christ in the last three months in South Africa; and then turn to the students of India, whom I have found thus far standing in almost unbroken ranks against the power of the Gospel, men who are going out of the universities to lead their people for or against Christianity, can you imagine how thirsty it makes me for this dear land of India, and how it makes me turn to plead with all of you at home who are willing to test the power of prayer to call down showers of blessing on these students, and through them upon the hundred millions of this needy land.

In the striking statement of 2 Corinthians, i. 11, Paul directly attributes his power to the numbers who were behind him in prayer. The clouds seem all ready to burst here. They only wait the fire from heaven called down by you. Shall we be able to do no mighty work here because of unbelief, or shall we all join in thanksgiving as the men begin to come? Mere talking seems wasted on these men. No appeal seems to touch them. The most convincing argument does not move them. After an hour's address on the atonement in a college recently visited, I sat answering their questions by the hour one afternoon until it grew dark, and I could only see the white marks of their idols on their foreheads like brands of Satan. The questions flew from every quarter. (If you will try to answer each one, you will see how far they reach. "How could a divine Christ pray for the removal of the cup?" "Why cannot a merciful God forgive without an atonement?" "If we believe in God and serve Him, why do we need Christ?" "How could a just God let punishment come upon Christ, who was innocent, instead of on sinners who were guilty?" "What of those who never heard of Christ?" "Is not Hinduism sufficient to save us?" "Have you proof that Jesus was divine and that our incarnations were not?" "If I worship the one true God, why should I not place before me some idol to help me concentrate my thoughts and call Him to mind?"

The Holy Spirit suggested the answers as fast as the questions came. For instance, to the last question on idolatry I replied, "My own father is no longer living on earth, but when I wish to recall his loving character I do not place before me some hideous monster or horrible contortion of some reptile. It would degrade my love for him as idoiatry has degraded the people of India. Nothing but a perfect photograph is fit to represent my father to me. God has given us His photograph in Christ, and we need only His portrait preserved in the Gospels to recall our Father in Heaven."

DR. BARROWS ON THE WORK OF MISSIONARIES.

The following from an address by the Rev. Dr. John H. Barrows is an effectual reply to the enemies of Missions who persist in the assertion that they are a failure. They who decry Missions and belittle the work of the missionaries are blinded by prejudice, and are blind leaders of the blind. Says Dr. Barrows, who speaks from personal observation and knowledge:

Let one visit a hundred Christian schools in which I have seen gathered the dark-eyed boys and girls of Ankrot, Bengal and the Punjab; let him see the native congregations of Christians in Lucknow and Palamcotta, in Ahmednafar and Madras, and contrast their homes with the conditions out of which they came; let him visit the hospital work in Amritsar and Indore; let him study the various forms of organized Christian labor by which the Church Missionary Society teaches the ignorant, the benighted, the blind, the deaf, the dumb and the poor in Palamcotta; let him see what the Pundita Ramabai is doing in Poona for the relief and instruction of Hindoo high-caste widows; let him mark the Biblical, literary and scientific instruction given to the eighteen hundred boys and young men in the Christian College, Madras, and to the hundreds in Duff College, Calcutta; Forman College, Lahore; Reid College, Lucknow; Wilson College, Bombay; Wesley College, Bangalore; St. John's College, Agra; St. Stephen's College, Delhi; let him follow the Bible women in their diligent teaching of the Scriptures; let him hear the reports of the great army of Christian women who are carrying light and cheer, comfort and hope into the darkened zenanas; let him note how millions of printed Christian pages are spreading all abroad the mighty Gospel of redemption; let him study such huge turnings to Christ as have followed the teachings of the Baptists among the Telugus and of the Methodists in Northern India; let him renew his acquaintance with the monstrous usages which prevailed eighty years ago, and which Christian civilization in India has swept away; let him note the one hundred signs that the old Hindooism is decadent and doomed; let him study the reformatory movements which the presence and power of Christianity have started into life; let him remember that, with all the forces which keep people back from open confession, the membership of native churches in India has increased more rapidly during the last twenty years than has the population, and he will be convinced that, though only a good beginning has been made and many generations of Christian effort are yet required to do for the Empire of India what the Gospel wrought for the regeneration of ancient Rome, still, he has seen and learned enough to dispel the error contained in the remark that Indian missions are a failure.

OUR LIFE-MOSAIC.

Once, when I was child, I was shown a delicate bit of mosaic work; a tiny brooch; and was told how, in a far away southland, there were many patient workers, who spent their days in carefully fitting these bright stone fragments together, little by little, bit by bit, now a gleaming rose petal, then a glowing emerald leaf, or glittering amethyst bud; filling in with patient care the tiny crevices, till at last the jewel-picture was complete.

Since then I have so often thought how like our lives were to these mosaic-pictures; how like we were to those jewel-artists over the sea.

The great mass of us cannot go forth into the world to choose our opportunities; we are surrounded by little commonplace duties and every-day cares, that demand the energies of brain and hand. We may not choose our life-elements.

We are but mosaic-workers in the great work-house of God, and He knoweth 'tis best to give us, children that we are, the tiny jewels one by one, now dark, now bright; and we, day by day, fit in these jewel-bits with careful hand; waiting until the last day to see the picture in all its marvellous completeness.

We cannot say, "Master, give me more of the blue of the sapphire, or the glittering gold of fame;" or "Father, thou givest me too much of mournful carnelian, too little healing amethyst." We can but take them as He gives them; yet though He give much of the jewel of suffering, He will give due meed of courage; and though He give not at all the hard, glittering jewel of fame, there is no life that has not at least one emerald of hope.

Those careful workers over the sea arrange their jewel-bits with thoughtful care; mingling, with patient hand, the light amid the dark, 'till the beautiful intricate pattern shines out, all-perfect.

'Tis so that we must weave our life-mosaic; not heedlessly or fretfully lest we make a sad failure of it all; but with gentle, patient hand and thoughtful care; peacefully biding the time till we may at last see it in all its beautiful completeness. The little corner that we can see as we work, does not always seem beautiful to us, even when we do the best we can; but, by and by, when we can see the whole together, we will see how each bit, even the darkest and seemingly the ugliest, contributed to the harmony of the whole.

Though we may not be able to choose the stones whereof our life-mosaic shall be wrought; yet we may so arrange the bits that are given us, so mingle the bright with the dark, that at the end of our life-time when we give the jewel-picture into the hands of God it will be far more beautiful than if, granted many brighter stones, given much more of the priceless jewel of time, and that rare, sharp-cutting jewel called "power," we had yet wrought so carelessly that there was naught to tell of our rich gifts save a dazzling chaos.

And as we work, though our hands may falter, though our hearts may grow faint and weary, and our eyes grow dim; yet God watches over our work, and guides our faltering hands, so that they cannot go far astray.—Cor. of Southern Presbyterian.

THE FULLNESS OF CHRIST.

Christ is more precious to His people the longer and the better they know Him. I have heard it said that the feeling of many persons, when they first see the far-famed Cathedral of St. Peter's at Rome, is one of disappointment. The building seems neither so large, nor so grand, nor so imposing, nor so beautiful, as they had expected it to be. But when they become better acquainted with it the feeling of disappointment passes away. The visitor walks again and again in these magnificent aisles, and his eyes become educated by degrees to appreciate the scene. The beauty, the glory, grows upon him. The marvel of the structure opens out to his perception more and more, and at every visit he discovers some grandeur, some loveliness, some exquisiteness of proportion, or some finish of detail, which he had not detected before. And is it not so with that grandest of all objects, with Jesus Christ, with Him who is "the chiefest among ten thousand, and altogether lovely." I do not mean, of course, to say that our first feeling about Christ, when we come to Him, is one of disappointment. Far from it! Christ at a distance, Christ unknown, Christ unsympathised with, may be, I grant you, an unattractive object. "He has no form nor comeliness," as the prophet says, that we should desire. But Christ, when we have accepted Him, answers all our expectations from the very first. He meets all our wishes. He satisfies all our desires. But this is what I mean, that what we knew and appreciated of Christ when we first put ourselves into His hands is as nothing when compared with what we know and appreciate of Him upon further acquaintance. He grows upon us day by day. Day by day we see more of the wonders of His person and of His work. Day by day fresh beauties, fresh grandeurs, fresh glories, unfold themselves. And the reason is that our inner spiritual eye is being educated by the Spirit of God, and that we are being enabled to "comprehend, with all saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height, and to know the love of Christ that passeth knowledge."—Prebendary Gordon Calthrop.

THE DREARY NIGHT.

A loved one, who has since entered into the realities of the future life, always thought that one of the most fascinating characteristics of that life and the heavenly country was the absence of night there, and none of Adam's children have better acquaintance with the depression of the night watches than those shut in from active, daily duties. It is a well-proved fact that physical vitality is lowered at night time, which accounts for the disproportionate number of deaths which occur at that season.

Unable to enjoy that active, physical exercise which is the surest means of courting sleep, those shut in by God's hand know as none others can, the fears, the doubts, the pain and the nameless horrors of the wakeful night. Yet to them it is also given as to few besides to have sweet experience of songs in the night. Cut off from human aid and sympathy, tossing it may be on beds of pain and restlessness, they may yet know that peace which passeth all understanding, and realize the nearness of Him whom their soul loveth. If their trials have been the means of bringing them close to God by faith in Christ, to them he is indeed precious when earthly comfort flees. To all such it is permitted to lift up their souls to their reconciled Father, and to recognize his hand in their trials, and to rest thereupon with unfaltering confidence and love. He does not see fit to remove the thorn in the flesh, but his grace is sufficient. To those thus spiritually enlightened, the abundant promises become actual experiences. They shall not be afraid for the terror by night, because their Father neither slumbers nor sleeps. Knowing the love of God who so loved the world, they can lie passive in his hand, which is as powerful as his mercy is far-reaching, and look forward with undiminished confidence that he will keep that committed to him. From present pain they raise their expectant souls, for joy cometh in the morning.—Episcopal Recorder.

THE HIDDEN CROSS.

To all, sooner or later, Christ comes to baptize them with fire. But do not think that the baptism of fire comes once for all to a man in some terrible affliction, some one awful conviction of his own sinfulness and nothingness. No; with many—and those, perhaps, the best people—it goes on month after month, and year after year. By secret trials, chastenings which none but they and God can understand, the Lord is cleansing them from their faults and making them to understand wisdom secretly, burning out of them the chaff of self-will and self-conceit and vanity, and leaving only the pure gold of righteousness. How many sweet, holy souls, who look cheerful enough before the eyes of man, yet have their secret sorrows! They carry their cross unseen all day long, and lie down to sleep on it at night, and they will carry it, perhaps, for years and years, and to their graves, and to the throne of Christ, before they lay it down; and none but they and Christ ever will know what it was, what was the secret of bitter chastisement which God sent to make that soul better, which seemed to us already too good for earth.—Chas. Kingsley.

LI HUNG CHANG AGAIN.

On the return voyage to China of this distinguished statesman, he sought the acquaintance of a Christian young lady of his own nation, on the same steamer, who had been attending school in our country, the daughter of a Chinaman of high degree. Several most interesting interviews followed between the modest young woman and the grand viceroy, which resulted in his appointing her to represent China at the World's Congress of Representative Women at Edinburgh in 1898, under the patronage of Lady Aberdeen. As a companion delegate, the viceroy designated Dr. Hu King Eng, the first Chinese woman to study medicine in this country, and practice it in China. She is the daughter of an eloquent and efficient native minister of the Foreign Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Such incidents shed fresh light on the great statesman's nobility of character, but are most significant as pointing to the commanding position which Christian Chinese women are sure to occupy in the eyes of their own and other nations in the coming years.—Canada Presbyterian.

COVERED BY CHRIST.

Two Americans who were crossing the Atlantic, met in the cabin on Sunday night to sing hymns. As they sang the last hymn, "Jesus lover of my soul," one of them heard an exceedingly rich and beautiful voice behind him. He looked around and although he did not know the face he thought that he knew the voice, so when the music ceased, he turned and asked the man if he had not been in the civil war. The man replied that he had been a Confederate soldier. "Were you at such a place on such a night?" asked the first, "Yes," he replied, "and a curious thing happened that night which this hymn has recalled to my mind. I was posted on sentry duty near the edge of a wood. It was a dark night and very cold and I was a little frightened because the enemy were supposed to be very near. About midnight when everything was very still and I was homesick and miserable and weary, I thought that I would comfort myself by praying and singing a hymn. I remember singing this hymn,

"All my trust on Thee is stayed.
All my help from Thee I bring,
Cover my defenceless head
With the shadow of Thy wing.'

After singing that a strange peace came down upon me, and through the long night I felt no more fear."

"Now," said the other, "listen to my story. I was a Union soldier and was in the woods that night with a party of scouts. I saw you standing, although I did not see your face. My men had their rifles focussed upon you, waiting the word to fire, but when you sang out,

"'Cover my defenceless head
With the shadow of Thy wing,'

I said, 'Boys, lower your rifles, we will go home.'"—Henry Drummond.

GOD'S WILL OR GOD'S HELP.

All of us want God's help. Not so many of us want to give God help. We are ever ready to let God know what we want from Him. We are not always so ready to learn what God wants from us. A great deal of our earnest praying is in order to have God understand our will and wish, rather than to bring us into accord with God's wish and will. We try one way and another to see what we think God would have us do. If the plan shows that God seems to think as we do, we are restfully satisfied. If it seems to show that God's plan is at variance with ours, we think there is some mistake about it. Persons sometimes "draw cuts" when they are in doubt, in order to find what God would have them do, If the "cut" drawn accords with their wish, it is all right; but if it comes out the other way, they think they had better try it over again. This talk of ours about wanting to know God's will, is often only an evidence that God is wanted to approve our will.—Sunday School Times.

The devoted follower of Christ willingly loses what the world seeks in order that he may gain what the world does not desire.—Lutheran Observer.

Place. Miletus.

INTRODUCTORY.

With this lesson we return to the narrative in the Acts which we left at the close of Lesson ix. It will be well to review that lesson and trace the travels of Paul from Ephesus to Miletus. This is near the close of the third missionary journey the latter part of the fourth year of this tour while Paul was on his way to Jerusalem with the collection for the saints. Second Corinthians, Galatians and Romans were written during this time. Paul had extended his journeyings into regions not hitherto reached by him and going as far as Illyricum on the Adriatic. Paul had started on his journey from Corinth to Jerusalem hoping to reach the holy city before Pentecost. Seven companions are named as sent with Paul as far as Asia, probably as his body guards and delegates from the churches in sending their contributions. They would also be auditors of his accounts as Paul, and all moderns ought to do, saw the need of ministers of the Word being clean-handed in money matters. A plot being discovered against Paul he suddenly changed his plans, and went to Philippi while his companions went to Troas by sea. The dates of the journey are made out by Professor Ramsay who shows this interview with the elders from Ephesus to have been at Miletus on the Sabbath, April 25th, 58. Our lesson is a part of Paul's address to them.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 22. Bound in the spirit. Not referring to the Holy Spirit who is mentioned in the next verse, but so constrained by his sense of duty that nothing detained, no prospect of danger deterred him. Not knowing the things. The particular events as Paul like us was dependent on the Divine leading through faith, one step at a time, the general direction being made known.

Vs. 23. The Holy Ghost testifieth. With more than mere inward revelations and in His "ministration" to the saints in the service of our Lord Jesus. That bonds. Chains, imprisonment as at Cesarea and Rome. Afflictions. Pointed out in the later chapters of the Acts. Abide me. Strange, indefinable, but terrible.

Vs. 24. With all in this in prospect how wondrous is the courage and faithfulness of the apostle in his devotion to Jesus his Lord as shown in his being unmoved from the path of duty and counting not his very life as dear to himself. My course. His life compared to running a race, which he again uses four years later when near the end of the race. With joy. Of having been faithful. The ministry. The appointment and service to minister to others in the name of Jesus. To testify. To bear witness, not to originate the Gospel of the grace of God, nor yet with all his learning to criticize this Gospel, or deny it or set aside, or anything else. The good news of God's favor and forgiving love through the righteousness and redemption of His Son was better than all else.

Vs. 25. I know. I am convinced. But he was not infallible as he probably did revisit the churches of Asia after his liberations from Roman imprisonment. Compare 2 Timothy 15 and Titus i : 5, with especial reference to 2 Tim. iv : 20.

Vs. 26. I take you to record. Call you to witness. I am pure, &c. The thought is from Ezekiel iii : 18. He, Paul, was innocent of any neglect of duty to them. His ceaseless, self-denying labors was his ground of confidence.

Vs. 27. The whole counsel of God. His method and means of redemption and grace which he summed up in the words, Vs. 20, "Repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ." This too indicates that the Ephesians heard him with understanding.

Vs. 28. Take heed therefore. This is spoken of the elders of the church because the responsibility for the church was on them and it was very great. Unto yourselves. That you are truly regenerated and growing in grace, that your character and conduct commend you to the flock, and commend Christ to the lost, that you have a right view of the purpose of the Church and its province as spiritual and the representative of Christ here in the world. Overseers. Means literally bishops. Paul is speaking to the elders of the church and calls them bishops, showing two names for the same persons and not orders of rank in the Church. To feed. Is to shepherd giving the third name for elders as pastors. This whole verse is very rich and show that Christ is God and as Mediator shed His blood to redeem the Church.

Vs. 29. Grievous wolves: Enemies of the cross of Christ and of the Church, it may be in sheep's clothing, ravenous and selfish, from without.

Vs. 30. Of your own selves. From within. Speaking perverse things. Truth perverted from its true spiritual meaning.

Vs. 31. Watch. Sleepiessly on the alert. Remember. All the truth.

Vs. 32. Build you up. On the true foundation which is Jesus Christ.

Vs 33. I have sought you and not yours.

Vs 35 I have not asked for support.

Vs. 35. But have followed the words of Christ which are not found written in the Gospels, as many other things He said are not.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The first is that by the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon the servants of Jesus Christ makes witnesses such as Paul was, patient, persevering and powerful. The second is that the Church of God is the only divine institution in the world and we should live for it. The third is that in giving for Christ and His Church We meet His mind in saying, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Sept 19th, 1897.

LOSING AND FINDING LIFE.

Text for the week:

He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for My sake shall find it. Matt. 10 : 39.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Losing—Like Pilate, Matt. 27 : 11-26.

Tuesday, Like Herod, Mark 6 : 14-29.

Wednesday, Like Felix, Acts 24 : 22-27.

Thursday, Finding—Like Paul, Acts 20 : 17-25.

Friday, Like Stephen, Acts 6 : 8-15; 7 : 54-60.

Saturday, Like John the Baptist, Matt. 14 : 1-12.

Sunday, Topic, Losing one's life and finding it. John 12 : 1-8, 20-26.

Notes:

The paradox contained in our text for the week can only be explained, but can be satisfactorily explained, by taking the term life in the two senses in which it is in most general use. The former implying the present state of physical existence with all that pertains to it, and the latter referring to that acceptance with God and possession of His favor which secures the exercise and full enjoyment of the gifts and graces of holiness, now and to all eternity.

Physiologists tell us that the process of gaining and losing physical life proceeds from the cradle to the grave. The body gaining, in its vital process when normal conditions exist as in perfect health, over and above all processes of decay until full maturity is reached, and then the reverse process, slowly at first, but increasingly diminishing the vital conditions until life has ceased. So, in the life of spirit: as the love of this world, with its affections and lusts, lose hold, there comes growth in holiness and advance in spiritual life—too often subject to intermissions of spiritual decline—until, the present physical existence being over the soul lives and rejoices in God unto all eternity.

The text then inculcates the utter and entire surrendering of all in physical life that may or does war against the soul—the sacrificing of all hindrances for Christ's sake that the spiritual and eternal life may be secured.

The cases given in the daily readings set forth vividly how men lose or find the spiritual life, in seeking or surrendering the militating forces of the natural life. They are concrete illustrations fraught with instruction. Pilate lost eternal life from craven fear of man; Herod from senselessly wicked love of pleasure in which he stifled the voice of conscience; Felix by procrastination induced by covetousness. Lost opportunities: eternally fateful crises these, which may come to any man and call us to halt and consider lest we let slip the proffered opportunity—Now! is the day of salvation.

The new Mittheilungen und Nachrichten, published by the German Palestine Society, No. 3, bring interesting details of improved transportation means in Palestine, both completed and projected. As is known Jaffa and Jerusalem are now connected by a railroad. In the near future Beirut on the sea coast, and that pearl of the Orient, ancient Damascus, will also be joined in the same way. Work has progressed so rapidly on this improvement that within a very few months the road can be opened. In the beginning it is thought that it will take nine hours to reach Damascus; but a projected consolidation will cut down the time to four and a half hours. At present the omnibus trip takes fully twelve hours. The Damascus-Rauran Railroad is constantly growing in popularity. According to the report published in the Arabic paper, El-Bashir, no fewer than 14,000 persons made use of this road from July 18th to December 31st, 1894, and from the latter date to April 8th, 1895, the number was 5,007. Other railroads are projected, from Beirut to Tripoli and Saida, from Haifa and Acre to Damascus and finally from Egypt by way of Gaza and Jaffa along the coast to Saida, and then via Homs, Hamath, Aleppo to Birejik, making connection with the Euphrates and the Anatolian railroads. In connection with the Syrian coast tramway road Tripoli-Beirut Saida branch roads are in contemplation to Der-el-Hamar, Bikfaya and Ghazir, as also from Tripoli to Damascus, for which road a Belgian company has secured a firman from the Turkish government. The contemplated Egyptian-Syrian road is also to be built by a Belgian company. Among other plans of this kind is included also the project of connecting Constantinople, from Scutari, by railroad directly with the leading centers of the Orient, Beirut, Damascus, Jerusalem, Mosul, Diabekr, as also with Cairo and Alexandria. If the projects are carried out the trade of Syria and Palestine will doubtless develop to an extraordinary degree. A similar project by the Turkish government is the building of the first motor boat for the Dead Sea, which has been ordered from the house of Schmitt in Rotterdam. Since 1893, there have been one metal rowboat and one metal sailboat used on these waters belonging to the Sultan, the owner of this sea, and employed for businesss purposes. As the sailboat recently was wrecked in a storm, the new motor boat is to be finished in the immediate future. It will be a petroleum boat, as coal can scarcely be used as a motive power in consequence of the extraordinary depression of the Dead Sea and the consequent heat. Petroleum as a motive power is selected because it practically makes no heat. The boat is to be 18 meters in length, 4 meters wide and 1.90 meters deep, drawing 0.90 meters water. In the front there will be a second cabin, and behind this the first cabin, both on the deck, and together furnishing accommodations for fifty passengers and a small amount of freight. It is also to be used as a tug for other vessels. The trips are to extend from Jericho in the north to Kerak, near the southeast coast of the sea, a place that has in recent years assumed considerable prominence, and is situated on the plain of Moab. The Sultan has also furnished the money for building a road from Kerak down to the east coast of the sea. Through this project the distance from Jericho to Kerak is decreased fully a day's journey. The principal freight will be asphalt and and salt.

BASS. Mrs. Jinnette, wife of Mr. Shepherd Bass at Sanford, N. C., 23d of August in the 32d year of her age

She had been an invalid a number of years and a member of the church a long time. Most probably her prolonged sufferings had been to her a means of sanctification and death came as a blessed change. Her remains were brought to Lumber Bridge by her sorrowing children and laid to rest. Our sympathies go out to the bereaved ones. P.

MONROE.—On Sept. 2nd, 1897, at his home in Union congregation, Mr. Martin Alexander Monroe, in his 70th year. He was one of the most estimable, lovable Christian gentlemen that we have ever known. For many years he was a wise conservative ruling elder in Union church. To know him was to love him. We laid his body to rest with the full assurance of the life everlasting.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

COBB.—Mrs. Ellen C. wife of Mr. J. D. Cobb, at her home near Shannon, 16th of August. It was a happy Christian death. She was fully persuaded the end was at hand and it appeared to grow on her continually as a source of joy. Therefore there was no murmuring. She passed away most gladly and triumphantly. She left a husband and three little children and a large family connection to sorrow over her departure. "But she is gone to the home of the blessed." P.

PERKINS. — At his home near Morganton, N. C., August 16th, 1897, Alexander E. Perkins, in the 75th year of his age, and for more than twenty five years a ruling elder of the Presbyterian church of Morganton. His death was sudden and wholly unexpected. Retiring Sabbath night, apparently in perfect health, he awakened Monday morning in heaven to enter upon the joys and blessedness of an eternal day. He was a man universally respected and loved, "an Israelite indeed in whom there was no guile." A man in whose Christian character and integrity all men confided. A faithful and honored ruling elder. His brethren will sorely miss him. "The God of all comfort" graciously sustain his afflicted family! PASTOR.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. D. E. SMITH.—This estimable lady died at her home in Mt. Olive, Aug. 25th, 1897, after an illness of three weeks. Mrs. Smith was for years a consistent member of the Presbyterian church at Mt. Olive and was faithful in the performance of all her church obligations. She was a sincere and humble Christian and leaves a bright example to her kindred and numerous friends, to whom much sympathy is extended by the community.

Tribute of Respect.

WHEREAS, God in His wisdom and love has called from labor to rest our fellow-worker, Mrs. H. C. HAMILTON, therefore,

Resolved, 1st. That in the death of Mrs. Hamilton the Ladies' Missionary Society has lost a valued and faithful member.

2. That we thank God for her life of devoted piety, earnest and faithful service and that example of Christian living whereby she adorned "the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things."

3. That we extend to the bereaved our sincere Christian sympathy, praying that "God who comforteth those that are cast down" may comfort and sustain them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, be also spread upon our minutes, and sent to "Hickory Times and N. C. PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

FOR THE FAMILY.

WHAT TIME IS IT?

What time is it?
Time to do well—
Time to live better—
Give up that grudge—
Answer that letter—
Speak that kind word to sweeten a sorrow;
Do that good deed you would leave till to-morrow.
Time to try hard
In that new situation—
Time to build upon
A solid foundation.
Giving up needlessly, changing and drifting,
Leaving the quicksands that ever are shifting.

What time is it?
Time to be earnest,
Laying up treasure;
Time to be thoughtful,
Choosing true pleasure.
Loving stern justice—of truth being fond,
Making your word just as good as your bond.
Time to be happy,
Doing your best—
Time to be trustful,
Leaving the rest,
Knowing; in whatever county or clime,
Ne'er can we call back one minute of time.

THE MERRY LITTLE ORPHANS.

Within the shadow of the great asylum on Camp street, which her generosity helped to found and still maintains, rises the statue of Margaret, the baker woman who at her death left thousands of dollars for the support of refuges and asylums for the helpless little ones of New Orleans. Very fragrant and green is the pretty square these early autumn days; the fountain plays in rippling murmurs at the base of the monument, the flowers bloom fresh and fair around and from her great arm chair the face of the beneficent Margaret smiles down just as she used to smile in life in pity and love upon hundreds of little orphans who gather in the evening light to play their merry go-rounds about the knee and watch the first star of night as it glimmered in the heavens and make "a wish that was sure to be granted."

It was the custom of this kind old baker woman to gather the little orphans of this asylum in Olio street on the pretty green of an evening and watch their merry gambolings as they grew strong and rosy with the invigorating breath of the evening air. Twenty years and more have passed, but the work of Margaret still goes on in the asylums, and many of the sweet little customs she loved are still cherished. She believed that little children growing up in a great crowded city should have all the air that nature could supply them with, and many were the outings she planned for the children of the New Orleans Female Orphan Asylum, which was one of her special charities. The children growing up in the asylum to-day do not get as many outings as did the little orphans in the days of Margaret, but there is one outing that costs nothing, and that is a merry hour or two of an evening in Margaret place. Here any evening the passers by may see a couple of hundred of little girls in pink dresses and white aprons running and playing ring and gamboling on the green sward. Sisters of Charity are always seated on a bench near by watching children in their sport and gently chiding if at any time the noise and laughter becomes too uproarious. A word is sufficient, and the children go on singing their songs and playing "Here we go round the mulberry bush" and kindred games, till the stars begin to twinkle in the heavens. Their cheeks glow with the roses of health, their eyes sparkle, their whole frames seem invigorated by the pure fresh air that comes sweeping through the park and wooing them to life and strength.

And sometimes there is a purse in the play and they all come and seat themselves at the foot of the monument and ask the gentle Sister of Charity to tell them something again about "our dear Mother Margaret," and nothing loath, she goes over the sweet old story of Margaret's love for the little orphan and how her life was a work of devotion that they might live and learn to love and serve God whom she loved so well.

Oh, they are a happy, merry band, these little ones of the great Camp street asylum; happy in the light of God's pure heaven which spreads its canopy alike over the children of the poor as well as the children of the rich, the pure, fresh air which is the heaven-born right of the orphan child as of the millionaire, and the fresh, sweet flowers that bloom in the open place and are just as much their own as the flowers that bloom for the child of wealth in the great private garden ove the way. Never a thought beyond the pure fresh evening enters their mind while playing in Margaret place. They look up at her statue, smiling down and know that she has been their mother and that her charity has secured for them a loving home in this great haven instead of having to drag out their poor little miserable lives in the attic room of some old tenement house, dependent upon the charity of first one and then another, with a home never.—Picayune

"CONDEMNED."

When an innocent man is condemned for any crime he doesn't lose hope. His lawyers appeal from one court to another. They are bound to save him, if he can be saved. It is the same way with a good doctor when his patient seems condemned to death by disease.

But doctors make mistakes sometimes; they lose heart too soon. After they have tried everything they know and the patient is no better, they think there is nothing more to be done. They don't always get at the root of the disease. They frequently give a patient up to die of consumption, and are afterwards surprised to see him get strong and well again.

Mrs. W. B. Duncan, of Arlington, Phelps Co., Mo., writes: "My husband took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery when he was (as he thought) almost into consumption, and we were very thankful that such a medicine could be found. I wish all persons troubled with cough would take it. Long may the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription' be made. I shall always recommend and praise these medicines."

All lung and bronchial diseases are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, because it supplies the system with healthy blood. It puts the vital forces into action and fills the circulation with the life-giving red corpuscles which builds up solid, muscular flesh and healthy nerve-force.

As a medical author, Dr. Pierce holds an eminent place in his profession. His great thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" is one of the standard medical works of the English language. Nearly 700,000 copies were sold at $1.50 each. A paper-bound copy will be sent absolutely free for the cost of mailing only, 21 one-cent stamps; or, cloth-bound for 31 stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N.Y.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A LONG-FELT WANT.

One day wee Willie and his dog
Sprawled on the nursery floor.
He had a florist's catalogue,
And turned the pages o'er.

'Till all at once he gave a spring,
"Hurrah!" he cried with joy;
Mama, here's just the very thing
To give your little boy!

For when we fellows go to school,
We lose our things, you know;
And in that little vestibule
They do get mixed up so.

And as you often say you can't
Take care of 'em for me.
Why don't you buy a rubber plant
And an umbrella tree?

ACTING A LIE.

Dolly had been told never to meddle with a beautiful vase that stood on a bracket over the piano. "It will break very easily," her mother said. Now, Dolly had an intense desire to take the vase down and examine it—probably because she had been told not to do so. One day, when she was alone, she made up her mind to gratify her curiosity. She took the vase down without breaking it, but on trying to put it back the bracket slipped off its nail, and the vase fell to the floor, and was broken into a dozen pieces. Dolly was frightened. As she stood there trying to think her way out of the dilemma her kitten came into the room.

"I'll shut Spotty into the room, and mamma'll think she did it," decided Dolly, "and Spotty can't tell."

So the kitten was shut up in the parlor, and when Dolly's mother came home she found Spotty there, and the vase broken.

"Do you s'pose Spotty did it?" asked Dolly.

"I think she must have done so," answered her mother. "You don't know anything about it, do you?"

Dolly pretended that she did'nt hear the question, and got out of the room as soon as possible. That night she couldn't sleep. "You lied," something said to her. "No, I didn't" she said. "I didn't say I didn't break it." "But you might just as well have said so," the voice of conscience told her. "If you didn't tell a lie you acted one, and that's just as bad as telling one."

Dolly stood it as long she could. She got up and went to her mother's bed.

"Mamma, I broke the vase," she sobbed out. "I thought if I acted a lie you wouldn't find out about it, but I can't sleep for thinking that God knows, if you don't."

Ah, that's it—God knows, if no one else. We cannot deceive Him.
—New York Observer.

He who never connects God with his daily life knows nothing of the spiritual meanings and uses of life; nothing of the calm, strong patience with which ills may be endured; of the gentle, tender comfort which the Father's love can minister; of the blessed rest to be realized in His forgiving love, His tender fatherhood, of the deep, peaceful sense of the Infinite One ever near, a refuge and a strength.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Editor:—As your last paper did not have any letters in it from the young folks I will write you one. I am sorry they do not write more. I enjoy reading them. I guess the children are all off enjoying vacation which will soon be over. I have been visiting for nearly three weeks. I am so glad to be at home again. Our school begins very soon. We have a new school with new teachers for next year. I must tell you about our Sunday-school picnic. Last Wednesday we went in wagons and buggies five miles out in the country to old Salem camp-meeting ground where there is a beautiful grove of large oaks, under which we we spread our dinner for ninety-six hungry people to eat. Near by is the famous arsenic spring of fine sparkling water, so clear and cold, we enjoyed carrying it up the steep hill. This old town has been quite gay this summer. More visitors have been here than for many years. The little children, young folks and I believe some of the older people too have been enjoying the "Merry go Round" that came to town several weeks ago, but this is its last night. I think it will move on rejoicing at its success here. For fear our kind Mr. Editor will think I am consuming all the space alloted to little folks I will close hoping to find a great many letters this winter.

Your little friend,
LENA F. REINHARDT.

My papa and little brother ran into Wilmington last week and had such a gay time on the beach. I am going next summer.

Lincolnton, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian:—I don't believe I have written a letter to the "Letter Box" in some time, so I will now write one. We received our paper to-day and read of the sad death of Prof. Vinson. We did not know him, but brother went to school at Davidson and he thought so much of him, and was so sorry to hear of his death. Presbytery is about thirty miles from us, but I hope to attend, and hope to meet some of the correspondents there. I never attended but one, and enjoyed that one so much. Mama and Brother Clair went to Norfolk on an excursion the last of July. Mama left me as housekeeper, and of course like all children I felt large. I have a cousin from Durham visiting me now and we have some gay times. I would like to know if the Editor gets tired of putting mine and Myrtle's questions in the paper? We send one every week to try to keep the "Puzzle Department" from getting empty. I wish the cousins would write more. I enjoy their letters so much. We have not had our protracted meeting at Griers yet, I do not know when we will have it. We had Mr. Hill Williamson to preach for us last first Sabbath. Our pastor, Mr. Evans, will preach the fifth and first Sundays for us. Well, I will close as I do not want to take up all of the column. I will answer the questions and write one.

Your friend,
CORNIE WILKINSON.

Ridgeville, N.C.

[We wish with Cornie that more children would send us contributions, but do not in the least tire of hearing from our two little friends, Cornie and Myrtle. We are often told by those who do not send in their answers that they enjoy looking up the questions. So we will continue trusting that the boys and girls will keep us in good supply.]

SAY SOMS.

It pays to keep clean. Since the New Yorkers have begun to sweep their streets and supervise the sanitary condition of some of the fouler quarters of the city, they have effected a saving of ten thousand lives per year, and pulled down their annual rate from 29.05 to 19.63 per thousand.

To prevent the salt from absorbing the dampness and becoming hard in the salt cellar during the summer season mix a little cornstarch or rice flour with the salt, using one spoonful of flour to six of salt.

Pies baked in a plate with perforated bottom will have a lighter undercoat than one without. A pie plate should be hot and not greasy. As a good old grandma said to her granddaughter when she was teaching: "It's poor pie crust that can't grease its own plate."

THE TRUEST SERVICE.

A LEGEND IN VERSE.

Once, long ago a temple lifted high
Its gilded dome unto the sunlit sky;
It was the offering of a king who thought
By works his Lord's approval could be bought.

"When all the work is done," well pleased He said,
"My fame to distant lands will surely spread,
Pilgrims will flock unto this splendid shrine
And God and man will praise this deed of mine."

Then he, alas!—his pride the bolder grown—
Decreed that on the very topmost stone,
His name be writ in gold that all might see
Who 'twas that made this noble offering free.

That night in dreams he saw a hand efface,
His name, and on the stone another trace!
"What meanest thou?" the king in fury cried,
When he the angel's action strange espied.

"Whose name is that which thou hast dared to write
In place of mine upon the tablet white?
A woman's too, unknown, unsung, while mine
Upon Fame's gilded pillar high doth shine!"

To which the angel answer gently made
"Unknown to thee, yet by Heaven's balance weighed
Her name deserves a higher place than thine,
Her loving labor than thy costly shrine."

"For all through summer sunshine did she speed
The weary beasts that toiled for thee, to feed,
To quench their thirst she brought the fresh moist grass
While others let this simple duty pass."

"Would'st thou, O king, the truest service know
By which thou mayst the heart's devotion show,
In His name seek and help, where'er they are
The weary and the thirsty near, and far
"For what thou doest unto the least," said He
Be sure that I will count as done to Me."

REV. WILLIAM GRAVES.

In 1850 Rev. William Graves crossed the mountains which divide western North Carolina from Tennessee, and visited two Scotch Irish Presbyterian settlements on the upper French Broad river, now known as Mills River and Davidson River churches. He found two of the finest valleys in western North Carolina peopled by a number of sturdy Scotchmen. They made a call for his pastoral services, which being accepted, he moved his family and furniture in six wagons to Mills River, Henderson county, N. C. Here he purchased a tract of land, cleared the virgin forest and erected a nice home for his family.

His next care was the erection of church buildings for these two settlements. At Mills River a nice brick structure was erected, while at Davidson River a neat frame building was completed, each with a school room below and a church auditorium above. The former of these buildings is still in use, but the latter was destroyed by fire in 1891, and has been replaced by a new building. Excellent schools were conducted in these buildings by Professors James and John Seneker of Tennesssee. These were able, devoted men and sent forth many noble men and women to the State and church from these schools.

Bro. Graves was a great fireside preacher, and in this way won many souls for the Master. Often now, as I go from home to home in this mountain country, I hear the older members of the families speak of the words of counsel and love that "Uncle Billy," as they call him, gave them, which enabled them to surrender to Christ and live for God. He identified himself with his people, and spent his life with them. He was a strong Calvinist, and laid great emphasis on the study of the catechisms in the Sabbath-schools and in the home. He put the church paper in almost every home of his people at a time when papers were regarded as a luxury.

A man's real worth is frequently seen in the family he leaves behind him. To Bro. Graves and his self-sacrificing devoted wife were born six children. The eldest, Capt. William Graves, conducted a High School for a number of years at Sand Hill Presbyterian church in Buncombe county, and prepared many for life's duties. He fell in defence of his country in the trenches around Petersburg. The second son has long held a responsible position in one of the departments in Washington. The fact that this position has been held under both political parties indicates his worth to the government. The third son lives in Asheville, is one of the best travelling men in the State, and an earnest Christian. The daughter lives at the old homestead, and kindly ministered to her father's wants in his last days.

For a number of years Bro. Graves was colporteur for Mecklenburg Presbytery. He travelled over the eleven counties west of the Blue Ridge, and placed Bibles in more homes where there were none than any other man in the State.

He ceased his earthly labors and went to be with Christ August 2d, 1896. He loved his Father's house to the day of his death, and was never absent from the sanctuary when able to attend. A week before his departure, though in his ninety-sixth year, he walked a mile to worship God. He never murmured amid the great suffering of his last days. When the Recording Angel shall at last make known the deeds of men, Father Graves will receive great honor and reward from the Saviour he served so faithfully.

Patience is the ballast of the soul, that will keep it from rolling and tumbling in the greatest storm.—Bishop Hopkins.

Our Lord has promised to be always present wherever two or three meet together to pray; but He is also present when they work. One night, when their Master was absent, the disciples went out fishing, but they caught nothing. The next morning, when Jesus came to them and told them to put down a net, they were not able to draw it in for the multitude of fishes. In life we are not alone, and the best companion we can have is Jesus Christ.—The Colporteur.

And the sower never an echo heard.
But the blessed Spirit's quickening rain,

The cross of Christ is the salt which saves our civilization from decomposition—nay, it is as a furnace which welds its heterogeneous and opposing elements together and prevents them from breaking asunder. The cross is the gathering-point, the focus, the source of all that elevates the thought and preserves the hopes of this present time; and, therefore, we may say with all the emphasis of the apostle: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."—Greenough.

* * *

The one who desires to subordinate himself to God, to do His will and to do what is right in His sight, and who freely chooses to respect God's law, will grow in strength and purity of character, coming, day by day, to be more like God. In this free and loving obedience comes the strengthening of heart and soul in holy life, and thus, freedom, rightly appreciated and employed, tends to exaltation of character. Human freedom, when only an expression of rebellion against God, is the opportunity for the development of the character which becomes more and more like that of Satan.—Herald and Presbyter.

SANCTIFICATION.

The words sanctification and adoption have both a textual and a theological meaning. In the text Romans viii. 23, "the adoption, to-wit, the redemption of our body," we have an instance of a textual meaning of the word adoption. In our Shorter Catechism, "adoption is an act of God's free grace whereby we are received into the number and have a right to all the privileges of the sons of God" is a theological meaning of the word. Both meanings are true and Scriptural. But much confusion may arise by using the word in either of its meanings when our thought might be in the other meaning.

So sanctification as a word has distinctive meaning and incorrect usage has led to confusion of thought and contention even to strife. A third meaning is read oftentime into the word sanctification. This third meaning is neither textual nor theological, and is the false basis of the unwarranted appeals to Christians to become sanctified in the sense of sinless perfection. There is no Scriptural warrant for this which has brought the true doctrine of sanctification into contempt by some well meaning, but badly instructed people.

In the textual use of the word sanctification it means set apart for God, consecrated to God and regarded as belonging to God. That is the primary meaning of the word. It is the meaning of the word in Scripture usage. There is a growing depth of meaning in the word as revelation proceeds from simple to more expanded truths, from principle to their practical application. But no unequivocal example can be given where the word "sanctify" in Scripture means "purify" or make free from sin. The word in the books of Moses means "to set apart for God." To set apart anything for God was to make it holy, to sanctify it. If the meaning of absolute holiness is read into this usage it is unwarranted. Mt. Sinai was holy. The tabernacle and its vessels were holy as were the offerings and the priests. The holiness, the sanctification, is equivalent to our word consecrate or dedicate. There is no need to show here that in our offering and God's acceptance are the two sides to this one act. The thought is that the Scriptures use the word in single and separate texts in this sense alone of dedication and consecration.

There is a consensus of Scripture, a doctrine taught in its entirety which we define as sanctification in the theological meaning. It is therefore in the highest sense Scriptural to teach just what our Shorter Catechism does as the true meaning of sanctification in our logical and consistent system of theology. Sanctification as there taught and explained is not an act, like justification and adoption, on God's part, nor to be attained by an act of surrender or faith on man's part, as claimed by some. It is the WORK of God in transforming the nature and daily quickening and sustaining the life of the justified and adopted one, so that the dying daily unto sin and living unto holiness shall be growth in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ; putting to death by the Spirit all the deeds of the flesh and making the path of the just as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. This theological meaning of sanctify is to make holy, to purify, to free from sin, to make like Christ.

It is growth. It is a process and a progress. It is accomplished by the use of the means of grace, by the beneficent dealings of God's providence, by our increase of grace and perseverance therein to the end. It is not attained or possible by any experience like a second conversion, or a grasp of faith, or a distinction of the tendency and temptation to sin. "If any sin (even of a saint growing in sanctification) we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

The trouble about the doctrine of sanctification comes from failure to make this distinction between an act and growth. We are called to become holy. All admit that. But how? Not by one act or a definite transaction with God in one act, but by the work of God in our growth. This is plainer if we notice that Paul writing to Christians at Rome says they are "called saints," and yet goes on to show their remaining sinfulness and need of their becoming holy, pure and free from sin. The most solemn text the professors of a complete sanctification have to weigh and consider is that written by the "beloved disciple" in his age to Christians, that they sin not: "If we say that we have no sin we deceive ourselves and the truth is not in us.

DR. BEAN, editor of the Southern Presbyterian, gives notice that at the close of the present year he will give up his work on the paper. The paper after January 1st will be leased for 1898, by Rev. J. Ferdinand Jacobs and Rev. W. States Jacobs, sons of Dr. W. P. Jacobs. We shall regret to have Dr. Bean retire. Our relations have been pleasant as we could hope or desire, and the Southern Presbyterian has certainly under his administration deserved the heartiest support of its constituency.

Dr. Bean would be glad to make some engagement for permanent church work after the close of this year.

OUR READERS who have read the articles entitled "The Work of Jesus Christ," by Rev. Edgar Tufts—in the last issue and the present—have enjoyed a rare treat. The treatment of the subjet is so perfectly clear and plain that an intelligent child can understand it, and at the same time so logically exact and conclusive as to amount to demonstration.

WE HAVE on hand, to be given our readers next week, one of those charming letters from Germany with which Mr. T. W. Liugle has been favoring us all.

AMONG THE evil tendencies of the times, and assuredly not the least, is the growing disposition of parents to tolerate non-attendance on the worship of the church; sometimes it is to be feared even to encourage their children to neglect attendance upon the stated Sabbath services.

The following "wise words" of Dr. Jacob Henry Smith to the Christian parents of his congregation are commended to those who are derelict to duty in this regard:

Now and then a fear has been expressed that in some cases there may be children who are quite old enough for Sabbath-school but who may object to go to the preceding public worship; and the father or mother may be afraid to press or oblige them to go and may think it better to let them stay at home, and perhaps themselves remain with such children, rather than to take them to church against their will. Now every parent knows that there are a great many things that a young and inexperienced child may dislike, to whom yet the parent must not yield, if he would train up his child aright to be a credit to himself and a blessing to society; Many a child protests and sheds tears against leaving home to go to the week school, but no wise parent having in view his child's future life yields to its natural but foolish reluctance. And here is the point I wish to press upon every parent who has children old enough to go to church, that point is the incalculable benefit of forming in early life the habit of attendance on public worship. Like the influence of family worship it will mould the mind and character of the child more almost than anything else. The associations, the instructions and prayers, the singing, etc., the memories of such Sundays will gradually become one of the strongest cords to bind your child to father and mother, to each brother and sister that sits beside it, to the Church of God and to its Saviour.

The disinclination that at first may be felt in the restraint and novelty of it, will soon pass away, and if the pastor and parents are judicious and wise, the blessed benefits for home and time and eternity will be beyond human words adequately to describe.

"How about responsive Scripture readings, a practice which has been introduced into many Sabbath-schools? Is there not in this practice a tendeucy towards ritualism?"

This from an esteemed correspondent gives expression to a feeling, which in some minds amounts to a fear, that our Church is drifting into ritualism. Nothing can be more certain we think than that the object of the responses and repetitions in our Sunday-schools has in all cases, mainly, and in most cases solely, the design of teaching the children most effectively what it is most desirable they should learn. Our General Assembly for this sole reason, we suppose, encourages Children's Day exercises both for Home and Foreign Missions. The Assembly may have, and probably has, prominently in view as a direct result of this teaching largely increased contributions, but our Supreme Church court would not favor a substitution of ritualistic practices for our present simpler modes—of this we may all be sure.

Nevertheless, we are free to say, in answer to our correspondent, that in our opinion the responses and repetitions in our Sunday-schools do tend towards ritualism and in a very few years this will be patent enough.

IN THE review of the Life of Vance, in its appropriate place, we should have said that the book issued from the Observer Printing and Publishing House of Charlotte and was in every way creditable to the publishers.

REJOICE WITH THE FATHERLESS.

We are happy to inform the readers of the PRESBYTERIAN that at last money sufficient to finish the Centre Building has been received, and the finishing touches are in application. Three years has this house been in building, if the raising of the money for it is included as part of the work, and there are some of us that think this was the hardest part of the work. The first contribution toward the building was made in April, 1894, and was from that earnest, faithful, prayerful man of God, Rev. Cornelius Miller, a donation of $5. And the crowning and completing contribution was made by that noble lady of munificent liberality, Mrs. S. P. Lees, of New York, a donation of $500. So the building was begun and finished in prayer by the hands of the pious, and promises to stand through the generations a blessing to the fatherless. The work is of the most substantial character and although the house has been built at a cost of less than $10,000, persons capable of estimating the cost of buildings tell us it presents the appearance of having cost $12,000 or $14,000. But it is not the appearance but the excellent arrangement and convenience of the building in which the Orphans' Home takes pride. The kitchen, dining room, chapel, school rooms and lodgings for thirty girls are provided for in it.

Let the Church rejoice, let the friends of the fatherless be glad and let us exalt the name of the Lord together!

R. W. BOYD,
Supt. Orphans' Home.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

The college grounds are once more full of students going to and fro between the classroom and dormitories, and the village has waked from the semi-dormant state which characterizes it during the vacation months, and is once more full of life and stir. The enrollment so far exceeds that of last year considerably. About 145 students are on the grounds, and more are coming in every day. The better preparation of the new students has been a noticeable feature of the past two or three years. This fall, for instance, six or eight of them have joined the Sophomore Class in at least a majority of their studies, an occurrence almost unprecedented in our college history.

This morning at prayers the names of the First and Second men of each class were announced by the President, their relative rank being determined by their class standing during the spring term. Their names are as follows: Senior Class; William Gilmer Perry, Rock Hill, S. C., and Jas. Harvey Witherspoon, Yorkville, S. C. Junior Class: Henry Stokes Munroe, Lenoir, N. C., and Jas. Pleasant Matheson, Taylorsville, N. C. Sophomore Class; William Edwin Hill, Wilmington, N. C., and Fred Lewis Smyre, Gastonia, N. C.

The Medical School, which opens at the same time with the College, has an attendance largely in excess of that last year. Within a week the enrollment will probably reach thirty-five or forty. The largest enrolment for any previous year is about thirty-one or thirty-two.

Several new families have recently rented homes in town and moved here to educate their children. Our excellent High School, owned and controlled by the Davidson church, proves quite an attraction. If we had a half dozen houses for rent, they would probably all have been filled by the opening of the session. As it was, there was a scramble for every house, however small and uncomfortable, that could be bought or rented.

The next issue of The Davidson Monthly will be a memorial number in honor of our late Professor of Mathematics, Dr. W. D. Vinson. It will be issued about the middle of September, Any one desiring copies should address editor of The Monthly, Davidson, N. C., immediately, as only a limited edition will be issued. L.

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken [a]once; twice have I heard this; that [b]power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for [c]thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 5 His manner of blessing God. A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: [1]my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and [2]thirsty land, [3]where no water is;

7 But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly [2]shall they be wounded.
8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: [4]all that see them shall flee away.
9 And all men shall fear, and shall [5]declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.

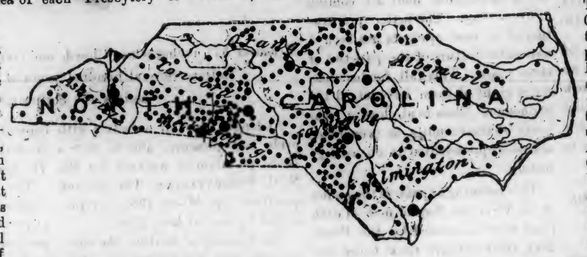
"There is a greater life and a larger work of Christ of which His life on earth is but a single chapter," says Mr. Patterson.

The difference between praying and saying your prayers is as great as between eating and reading the bill-of-fare.



"OURSELVES YOUR SERVANTS FOR JESUS' SAKE."

We present to our readers this weeek, a map of the old North State. It may be studied from several points of view.

The geographer will note the course of the rivers, the Roanoke, the Tar, the Neuse, the Cape Fear, the Yadkin, the Catawba, the French Broad. Their course indicates the sweep of the country from the mountains of the west to the eastern plain. Many facts of interest may be noted. The State has an area of 52,000 square miles and a population bordering upon 2,000,000. The line of its greatest length is 500 miles, of greatest breadth, 190. Swing the State around upon it southwestern corner and its eastern point would pass beyond New Orleans, Little Rock, St. Louis, Springfield, Ill., and would touch Lakes Michigan and Erie. It has the highest mountain east of the Mississippi. It has 5,000 square miles of undrained swamp land that some day will be green with vast fields of corn. Its agricultural products embrace almost everything that can be grown in the United States. Its forest wealth, its mineral resources, its manufacturing industries and its fisheries are note-worthy. A little larger in area than England, the time may come when it will support the population of the "tight little isle." What shall be the character of that population depends upon what is done for our people to-day.

The historian will recall the facts of the settlement of the counties of Albemarle and Clarendon, and their union in 1669, under the name of North Carolina. He will trace the working out of the irrepressible spirit of liberty, in revolts against tyrannical governors, in the North Carolina Tea-Party, antedating that of Boston, in the Mecklenburg Declaration and the vote of the Colony as a unit for Independence (the first vote cast,) in the battles of Moore's Creek and Kings Mountain and Guilford Court House. He will follow the development of the State under conditions of peace, and consider the illustrious names that have adorned that history. Nor is it the least glorious chapter that tells of the reluctance of the State to leave the Union which she had done so much to upbuild, followed by a determination to resist the invasion of her soil that cost her the lives of more brave men than any other State gave to the Southern cause. And from her glorious past he will be able to point out the forces that to-day are pushing the State to the front, and will see in them the prophecy of future greatness.

Let us consider the State from the point of view of Presbyterianism. The Synod of North Carolina is bounded by state lines. Beginning with the southwest we trace the Presbyteries of Asheville, Mecklenberg, Concord, Orange, Fayetteville, Wilmington and Albemarle. The Yadkin River forms the eastern boundary of Concord and Mecklenburg, though this is not brought out clearly on the map. One city in each Presbytery is noted by the large dot, Raleigh in Albemarle, Greensboro in Orange, Charlotte in Mecklenburg; and in Asheville, Concord, Fayetteville and Wilmington, the cities after which the Presbyteries were named. The smaller dots are the Presbyterian churches of the State.

It has been hard to keep pace with this continual dotting of the State with churches during the last few years. The map from which this one was made is comparatively recent. Yet Wilmington, according to the last minutes, is entitled to ten more churches than are represented here, Fayetteville to seven, Concord and Orange to three, while Asheville and Albemarle have each three by anticipation that are not yet organized, and Mecklenburg alone has the same number in the minutes and on the map. But any map will be out of date soon. This one represents with tolerable accuracy the distribution of the churches over the Synod.

Now look at that distribution for a moment. In Fayetteville Presbytery and through a part of Wilmington you see the Scotch settlement, the Nova Scotia of the South. After the battle of Culloden and the ravaging of the Highlands, there was a great exodus from the North of Scotland to America. With Scottish clannishness the greater part of the emigration followed a colony that had already been established on the banks of the Cape Fear and clung together. They were Presbyterians, they spoke the Gælic and they "kept the faith." There is scarcely a name in Crockett's "Men of the Moss-Hags" that is not found within the bounds of what is now Fayetteville Presbytery. During the Revolutionary War the people who had given their word to the House of Hanover remained loyal to the Crown, but after their defeat at Moore's Creek and their parole, it was impossible for Cornwallis to win them to take up arms against the Colonies. Their location upon the map is accurately shown by the position of the churches.

Just west of them are their brethren, the Scotch-Irish. There is a popular misconception that they are of mixed Scotch and Irish blood. It is sometimes unsafe to display just that particular form of ignorance in parts of Mecklenburg Presbytery. They are pure Scotch who came to North Carolina by way of Ireland and Pennsylvania. There is probably not a more Presbyterian section in the United States than where the churches may be seen the thickest in Mecklenburg, and Concord Presbyteries. There is also a very large sprinkling of the Scotch-Irish in the central part of Orange.

Outside of these settlements the churches are few and far between. How far may be imagined when it is known that the scale is 100 miles to the inch. Look at the northeastern corner of the State. There is a territory 125 miles in its greatest length and 40 in its greatest breadth with one Presbyterian church of 25 members. Notice the other bare places in Albemarle Presbytery with great distances between the churches. What opportunity have people, especially the women and children to hear a minister of our faith when it is twenty-five miles or more to the nearest church and preaching there but once a month?

Notice the loneliness of that church in the north-western part of the State. We have three Evangelists working there, and we hope that the next Synodical map will show several dots in the blank place now seen. Then following the western boundary there are several bare spots including sometimes whole counties.

Enough has been said to prove how uneven the distribution of the churches is.

But we are Christians. We believe that there is none other name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved but the name wherewith we are named. Without the Gospel men must perish. Without its influences civilization departs and barbarism succeeds, woman is degraded and the children grow up in ignorance and vice. There is not only a need of the Gospel in North Carolina, but there is a sore lack of it in some parts of the State. And we are Presbyterians, believing in the same principles of government which enabled the fathers to throw off the British yoke and make North Carolina and America free; believing in that Calvinism that 'founds on a basis of eternal rock one absolute Sovereign to whose will there is no limit; that renders Christ great and the believing sinner infinitely secure in Him; that establishes the highest conceivable standard of righteousness and secures the operation of the most effective motives to obedience; that extinguishes fear, makes victory certain, inspires with enthusiasm.' And we are North Carolinians with the fires of patriotism not yet dead in our souls, and we sing with swelling hearts,

"Carolina, Carolina, Heaven's blessings attend her."

And because we are what we are, for the sake of the Fatherland, for the sake of our beloved Church, and, chief of all, for the sake of Him who preached the Gospel to the poor, we, the Presbyterians of North Carolina, are resolved to put a church in every county of the State before the century ends.

This month of September is the last regular opportunity for contributing to the Synodical Work until next June With the exception of Mecklenburg and Asheville, all the Presbyteries have adopted the recommendation of the Synod and devote this month to the cause. We have no wish to interfere with the private arrangements of these two Presbyteries and only express the hope that all their churches will make up their full apportionment before the meeting of Synod. Envelopes with this map on them are sent to the churches to be used in the September collections or as soon thereafter as possible. The June collections were a disappointment. But now, with the abundant crops, with which God has blessed us and the promising outlook which is evident in the business world, it is earnestly hoped that the largest contribution ever given to the Synod's cause will be forwarded this month. A brief explanation of the Presbyterian map of North Carolina, while pastor and people hold the envelopes in their hands will do much to arouse interest in the work. The offer is repeated that the Synodical Evangelist will be sent for one year to all who contribute as much as 25 cents to the cause.

It will be recognized that it is of the utmost importance to the cause that an encouraging report be presented at the meeting of Synod in November. The Superintendent in the Providence of God, to which he bows, has been forced to cancel some of his engagements with the churches and to cease from work a while. He takes this opportunity of thanking his brethren for their messages of sympathy. He would throw upon their strong shoulders the responsibility that rests so sorely upon one. Would it be too much to ask that a sermon be preached by all our ministers upon the subject of Home Missions before the collection is taken up in September. The pulpit is still the noblest agency in the world for enforcing the claims of a holy duty, and the Presbyterian pulpit of North Carolina has in its power to accomplish the speedy evangelization of every part of the State.—Rev. A. J. McKelway, in Synodical Evangelist.

UPLIFTING PEACE.

The compass on board an iron steam vessel is placed aloft, so that it may not be so much influenced by the metal of the ship: though surrounded by that which would put it out of place, the needle faithfully adheres to the pole, because it is set above misleading influence. So with the child of God when the Lord has given him peace: he is lifted beyond the supremacy of his sorrowful surroundings, and his heart is delivered from its sadness.—Selected.

Rest is the sweeter for the toil or waking, the trouble or agony of pain that precedes it. Rest in God is inexpressibly precious to them who have been tossed and torn with doubt, who have groped blindly in the darkness of sin for a ray of hope, who have learned that it is a fearful thing to confront the living God as rebels. What a rest of peace comes to the troubled soul when it ceases its silly war against God and knows that all its future battles will be fought with him against the common enemy? This is a rest which comforts and sustains through all the troubles and trials which may be cast into our lot. Unless we have it the present is without meaning, and the future utterly without assurance.—Independent.

GOLD DUST.

Love thyself last. Cherish those hearts that hate thee
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace
To silence envious tongues. Be just and fear not.

Not many lives, but only one have we—
One, only one;
How sacred should that one life ever be—
That narrow span!
Day after day filled up with blessed toil,
Hour after hour still bringing in new spoil.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

It is stated that Lord Byron's sword adorns the dining room with two others of historic fame of a gentle white haired widow in Chicago.

William Dean Howells, the novelist, has an uncle living near San Francisco, a physician, who, in his eldest years (he is past seventy) has been doing very creditable work as a portrait sculptor. An ideal bust of Emanuel Swedenburg, now at the Howells homestead, Jefferson, Ohio, is considered to be excellent in design and technique.

Here are the ages of some of the older famous English writers: Mr. Blackmore has just celebrated his seventy-first birthday; George Macdonald is his senior by one year; Mr. Meredith and Mrs. Oliphant are each sixty-eight; Miss Braddon is fifty-nine; Sir Walter Besant, fifty-eight; Ouida, fifty-six, and Mr. William Black, fifty-five.

Everything in the house of Tennyson is cherished as the poet left it. Everywhere some favorite book or picture meets the eye and revives the recollection of some passage in his poems. A statuet of Wordsworth, a portrait of Carlyle, a mask of Shakespeare or Dante, for a moment arrest the attention, which is again diverted by some personal relic of the dead poet. The study where he mused, the large, silent room where he paced to and fro lost in abstraction, are preserved with filial piety. It is as if they waited for his returning presence.

On one occasion, at a large banquet, the peculiarities of American speech were discussed with English bluntness. Lord S—— called to Mr. Lowell loudly, so as to silence all other speakers "There is one new expression invented by your country-men so foolish and vulgar as to be unpardonable. They talk of the ashes of the dead.' We don't burn corpses. No Englishman would use a phrase so absurd." "And yet," said Mr. Lowell, gently, "your poet Gray, says, speaking of the dead, 'E'en in our ashes live their wonted fires." And in the burial service of the Church of England, it is said, 'Dust to dust, and ashes to ashes.' We sin in good company." A cordial burst of applause greeted this prompt rejoinder.

BOOKS.

Those who were fortunate enough to hear the discussion at the late Southern Assembly of "The New Theology and the Old Compared," by Rev. Dr. S. M. Smith—one of the Westminster series of addresses, and certainly one of the ablest of them—will be glad to learn that it has been published in very neat and attractive style in pamphlet form by Whittet & Shepperson, Richmond, Va.

We are indebted to Mr. Clement Dowd, the author, for a copy of the Life of Vance. No favor could be more highly appreciated. In the breast of every true-hearted North Carolinian the very name of Vance arouses a feeling of admiration, and all that concerns him awakens liveliest interest. The author may well have felt reluctant to undertake the work that a sense of duty assigned; not because of lack of qualifications for biographical writing, nor of aptitude for it—as he modestly puts it—but because that those who should be readers and judges of his work would hold the standard supremely high. Yet the work is charmingly done. To the qualifications of literary ability are added thorough acquaintance from years of most intimate business association, and other and longer years of tenderest friendship and thorough political accord. Vance was "an extraordinary man" as the late Dr. Pritchard, who knew him intimately, was fond of saying. His natural powers were extraordinary and the versatility of his genius was amazing. His success in law, as Mr. Dowd well shows, was very great, and his attainments in politics, especially when the difficulties encountered are considered were most remarkable. All this we were wont to think was genius, allied to a certain unexplainable and indefinable power of capturing the people. We had never regarded Senator Vance as an industrious worker—he never was nor could be a plodder. Our author disabuses us here and so adds that trait which gives to Vance himself a credit which else had been denied him.

But it was while yet on his progress in political fame, during the trying times of the sixties, that Governor Vance drew to him the hearts of the people in that way that forever linked and locked them to him. His maintenance of civil law and authority against the attempted unjust exercise of military power, it was, that enthroned him on the highest pedestal of the people's esteem. For this he was almost worshipped, and this it was that made him as political leader well nigh invincible. But our pen runs riot on this theme. Mr. Dowd does ample credit to Vance's public career, and gives us what heretofore we have never had, some delightful glimpses into his boyhood days and youthful years, and shows how this idol of the people grew into their affections.

It is a work we are glad to have on our shelves; no library in North Carolina can be complete without it.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Sharon:—A meeting of twelve days was closed last week at Sharon. Except one sermon by Rev. R. C. Morrison the preaching was done by Rev.G.T. Thompson. The people had a mind to work. The Lord blessed us. The church was much revived and twelve were added to the communion and six infants were baptized. The people are very kind to their pastor and his family and have done much for their comfort since their arrival.

Evangelistic Notes:—A good work has been accomplished in Boilston Valley, Transylvania county, N. C. Rev. R. P. Smith and Rev. J. L. Wicker conducted protracted services here for several days including the fifth Sunday of August. Twice a day large congregations came and listened attentively. Several persons professed faith in Christ. It would have interested your readers to have seen as many as three hundred people sitting in solemn stillness under the shade of forest trees anxious to hear every word spoken. Until recently this community has known but little of Presbyterianism. For a year or more Mr. Wicker has been preaching regularly at this place as a mission point. Doubtless a home will soon be provided for this little band.

Winston:—From the Daily Sentinel we get the following interesting item: Our Presbyterian friends are a progressive people. They have decided to make several noticeable improvements to the First church. This was decided upon and the money subscribed in about fifteen minutes just at the close of the morning service (Sunday, Sept. 5th.) The pastor, Rev. Robt. E. Caldwell, presented the matter in a brief address. Several members of the church also spoke in favor of the proposed improvements; in fact the entire membership present manifested a united and enthusiastic spirit when the proposition was presented. The improvements will include a change in the present pulpit arrangement: placing the large pipe organ and choir in the rear of the pulpit, and fitting up the gallery for the infant class department of the Sunday-school. Enough money was raised to make the work certain. It will be done during the next two weeks. A committee was appointed to look after the work. It is composed of Col. A. B. Gorrell, Chairman, A. J. Davis and T. A. Wilson.

Old Fort:—A C. E. Society has been organized here.

Sherrill's Ford:—Rev. J. E. Summers assisted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Ramsay recently conducted a series of services which resulted in five accessions to the church.

Beulah in Concord Presbytery:—On the 12th of September, although there had been no special services, five persons were received into the membership of this church, all on profession of faith. One of these, the young head of a family, and a man who gives promise of much usefulness to the church, was baptized. Beulah has been receiving preaching only one Sabbath a month. Rev. J. E. L. Winecoff has been the supply since May.

VIRGINIA.

Belle Haven:—A Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with eighteen members. Prospects bright.

TEXAS.

Waxahachie:—Rev. W. T. Wadley, pastor. A recent meeting conducted by Rev. J. H. Davies resulted in four accessions upon profession of faith. During the present pastorate of fifteen months twenty-six members have been received. The church is in an excellent financial condition.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Winchester Presbytery:—Met in Giradstown, W. Va, last week—about forty ministers were in attendance. Rev. A. C. Hopkins, Jr., was chosen moderator. Rev. Ivanhoe Robertson was received from Wilmington Presbytery and Licentiate V. G. Smith from Roanoke Presbytery. Rev. H. Tucker Graham was dismissed to Fayetteville Presbytery. A call from Berryhill church placed in the hands of Licentiate D. J. Woods, was declined by him and his request to be transferred to Fort Worth Presbytery was granted. The next meeting will be held at Charlestown.

KENTUCKY.

Valley View, Madison County:—After many years of discouragement a little church has been dedicated here and a Sunday-school organized with seventy-five members. Services have been conducted during the past few weeks by the Evangelist Rev. Henry Miller, Rev. J. K. Smith and Rev. Wm. Crow, Jr. Many have been brought to Christ, and the church is strong enough to have a pastor for half his time.

OKLAHOMA.

Beaver:—The church here has been served for the past three months by Rev. S. W. Mitchell. During this time the church has been reorganized; two elders and two deacons have been elected and six members received.

GENERAL.

Plans are being made for the great Convention of the Andrew and Philip Brotherhood which is to be held in Reading, Pa., in November next. There are sixteen denominations maintaining chapters and it is expected that about 300 delegates will be present from all parts of the country.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8th, '97.

The Anti-Saloon League, of the District of Columbia, is making arrangements for a vigorous autumnal campaign against the saloons and in behalf of temperance. At its regular meeting, this week, after hearing a stirring address by Rev. Dr. W. C. Helt, of Greenville, Ohio, who has been temporarily filling the pulpit of Gunton Memorial church, the league appointed a committee to arrange for a series of anti-saloon revival meetings in November, and another to make arrangements for the observance of the second Sunday in October as Temperance Sunday in as many Washington churches as possible.

The first meeting of the new executive committee of the Christian Endeavor Union, of the District of Columbia, was held this week in Calvary Baptist church. The most important action taken by the committee was to change the date for holding the annual District convention from January to October. The new board of officers accepted the tender of the members of the old board to hold a reception in their honor on the occasion of the annual meeting which will be held on the 17th inst.

The pulpit of Calvary Baptist Church was occupied Sunday by Rev. H. M. Wolf, Jr., of Waterford, Conn., who preached an interesting sermon on "Christian Optimists," his arguments being based upon the story of the interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream by the prophet Daniel. His text was Daniel 11:34-35. "Thou sawest that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the images that were at his feet that were of iron and clay, and broke them into pieces; the images became a great mountain and filled the whole earth."

The latest minister to be credited by rumor to the pastorate of the Metropolitan M. E., ("the President's") church, of this city, is Rev. Dr. Frank Milton Bristol, of Chicago. Dr. Bristol may come, but, as I explained some weeks ago concerning the rumor saying that another minister would come, the matter is as yet necessarily confined to the realms of surmise.

Rev Dr. Byron Sunderland occupied his pulpit Sunday for the first time in about two months, and preached with a vigor which indicated that he had been greatly strengthened, notwithstanding his extreme age, by his vacation. He took for his text Matthew xii:38, "The field is the world." He said that "The whole doctrines of Christ proceeds upon the parallels between human lives and the days of sowing and reaping," and that "The prevalence of Gospel truth and character in the lives of men and women as they are developed in this world, is what is meant by the kingdom of heaven on earth." He closed by asserting, in answer to the claims of those who say that we have passed the Bible age and that the book is as obsolete as the Greek myths, his belief in the continued life of the Bible and its deathless doctrines, his closing words being: "But the old doctrines of the Gospel are not dead. Let a huge catastrophe come, and their vitality springs to light. They are then as virile as ever, while infidelity is dumb."

Mr. Elliott Woods, superintendent of the U. S. Capitol building, has made what is considered to be an important and beneficial discovery in connection with the use of the x-rays. Experience had demonstrated that the use of the x-rays upon human flesh was often more or less injurious, especially when used often, as in the surgical treatment of fractured bones it was necessary to use them, if used at all. For quite a while Mr. Woods has been experimenting with the hope of finding a way that the x-rays could be used by surgeons and physicians in their practice without danger to their patients. A short time ago he hit upon the right idea, and a number of experiments, in conjunction with surgeons, has made him certain that when the light is passed through gold foil it never injures human flesh. A number of Washington surgeons are already making use of Mr. Wood's discovery by having him take shadowgraphs of limbs of their patients, in order that they may note the progress made in the knitting together of bones recently set, and it is expected that it will result in bringing the x-rays into general medical and surgical use. Mr. Woods called himself an amateur in the handling of x-rays, but that does not detract from the value of his discovery.

Two Washington ministers, Dr J. G. Butler, of the Luther Place Memorial church, and Dr. Duncan, of the Eckington Presbyterian church, preached special Labor Day sermons Sunday morning; and Rev. F. D. Power, of the Vermont Avenue Christian church, preached his twenty-second annual sermon, and his congregation included forty of those who were members when he took charge.

THE RETURN TO PALESTINE.

Whether the Rev. Dr. Arnold W. Miller, of blessed memory would find warrant for rejoicing in the movement given an impetus forward by what is known as the Zionist Conference, we think is doubtful soulful as was his desire that the Hebrews should return to their native land. From the movement referred everything tending to Christianization is avoided. The Sultan it is hoped can be made to see it to his interest to further the plans for the formation of the Jewish state. The means employed to effect this are the purchase through a limited liability company of the Turkish bonds now held throughout Europe; a measure that would impart to the finances of the Porte the sadly needed relief. If the Rothschilds and other bankers take hold the scheme would not seem to be impracticable; in any case there need be no fear that under Hebrew management the financial part of the movement will fail from incompetency.

The Greenville (S. C.) News says: "A number of our contemporaries are gravely debating the question of selling or holding cotton. It is a subject they know nothing about. No newspaper ever knows when it is judicious to sell cotton and when it is more profitable to hold it. The man who markets his cotton as quickly as he can after he gets it out of the field and ginned saves insurance and interest. The man who holds his cotton speculates. Speculation is always costly. As a general rule, it is the part of common sense for a farmer to convert his cotton into cash as soon as practicable. What cotton will be worth a few months hence is guesswork."

The advice, we feel disposed to say, seems very good, only it does not go quite far enough. Get the cash and pay your debts and among the first if not the very first—pay subscription to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. Who can better than?

The 50th Anniversary of the First Presbyterian Church, is the title of a pamphlet of about 90 pages 8 vo., which fitly and tastely sets forth the Golden Anniversary Exercises of the church of which Rev. E. P. Davis is now pastor. Sunday, February 21st of the present year, was the day that marked the turning point to the second half century. Dr. Burgett, of Mobile, preached a sermon on the forenoon of that day and at night a history of the church was read by Mr. E. P. Morrisette, a history of the former pastors by Rev. E. P. Davis. On following days—until, and through Thursday night—papers were read on the History of Presbyterianism in Alabama, The Organization and Growth of the Central Presbyterian Church of the city; Presbyterian Polity; and Presbyterianism and Education, etc., by Rev. Dr. Burgett, Rev. N. L. Anderson, Prof. Geo. R. McNeill and others—all of which are given in the pamphlet. After the exercises proper were over the ladies gave a reception to Presbyterian and other ministers and their families. A protracted meeting followed through the succeeding week which was greatly blessed in the conversion of sinners.

Copies of the pamphlet can be had of Rev. E. P. Davis, Montgomery, Ala., at 25 cents each.

Our friends sometimes forget—we are presuming they must know—that we need every cent due us. Some are far behind, some not so very far, but we beg one and all to let us have the amount of their subscriptions promptly.

THE WORK OF JESUS CHRIST.

BY REV. EDGAR TUFTS.

But the question arises how could one man's righteousness and death be sufficient for many millions? The answer is, the righteousness and death of one mere man, would not be sufficient for more than one man, so that if Christ was nothing more than man all that He did was simply what God's law demanded of Him as a man. But Christ was more than man. He was at the same time God. So that he can with one hand—the divine—open the gates of heaven, and with the other—the human—reach down to earth and lift man up to the open gates which lead to God's throne. That He was both God and man His life abundantly proves. Witness Him in His mother's arms as an infant babe and you will see that he is human. Twelve years later witness Him arguing with the chief priests in a way that astonishes them beyond measure, and you will see that He is divine. Eighteen years later witness Him asleep and fatigued in a boat and you will see that the sleeper is human. But a few minutes later witness Him command the winds and waves to be still and they obey His voice, and you will see that He is divine. Again witness Him at the grave of Lazarus weeping with those who had lost a brother and friend and you will see that He is human. But now witness Him say unto the dead come forth, and Lazarus stands before them, and you will see that He is divine. Once again, witness Him nailed to the cross, suffering, bleeding and dying, and you will see that He is human. But three days later, witness Him rise from the tomb and you will see that He is divine. So then we see how Jesus performed His work. He did it by first becoming man; he then obeyed the law perfectly, and then suffered the death of the cross, and in order to give efficiency to his work He never for one moment ceased to be divine!

Let us now see that this work of Jesus' has been approved and accepted by God. The proof of this is first, in the fact that God raised Him from the dead. When the chief priests put Jesus to death they thought that would be the last of Him. But far from it! On the morning of the third day He arose from the grave. By this triumph God set His seal upon the work of Christ as approved and in every respect satisfactory. The skeptical world has tried very strenuously to prove that God did not raise Jesus from the dead on the third day. They recognize that if it is true then all the lesser miracles are true, and if they be true Jesus' work is true and accepted. It is to demolish this that they have agreed that when Jesus was placed in the tomb, He was not literally dead but in a swoon; that He afterwards came too and of His own strength rolled back the stone and came out. Others feeling the weakness of this have argued that He was dead and remained so, but His disciples came by night and stole His body while the soldiers slept. Others seeing the absurdity in each of the foregoing theories have contended that neither is true, but that the disciples imagined that they saw the risen Saviour! A moment's reflection in the light of the facts will convince any fair-minded man that all of these theories are as weak as water. Can we believe that the soldiers who were sent to break the bones of Jesus in order to hasten death were deceived when they reported that they found Him dead already; or that the disciples who prepared His body for burial were all the time handling a live body, or that if these were true, that a man who had suffered so great a loss of blood as Jesus had from the effects of the crucifixion and the spear that was thrust into His side, could have rolled back a stone as large as the one that was placed at the tomb and come out without being discovered by the soldiers who were placed there to guard the tomb? Can we believe that that little band of a dozen or two of followers could have overpowered the Roman soldiers and stolen the body away?* Or that they bribed them? Even if such were possible to conceive of, what would have been their object in stealing the body of Jesus? Instead of making them bolder (and we know that from that day on they were a great deal bolder) it would have made cowards of them. Can we believe that eleven men imagined that they saw the same object at the same time, and each one of them imagined that that object spoke exactly the same words to them? We have heard of one person imagining that a ghost was in sight, but we have never heard of eleven men imagining such a thing all at exactly the same moment. Yet such would have to be the case if this theory were true. Nay more than this, the record says more than five hundred saw Him at one time after his resurrection. And this continued through a space of forty days in broad daylight. We are compelled to believe that God raised Jesus from the dead and in doing so He testified that His work was approved and accepted.

Another proof of the same thing is seen in every city of our land today, and in every country of the world. Wherever there is a church there is a testimony to the truth of Christ's work and God's acceptance of it. Let those who deny this account for the spread of the Church throughout the whole world and its success. Let them account for the existence of the Church. Certainly it must have had a beginning. Is it of human origin? The man who contends that it is is too ignorant of history and the nature of man to argue with. Did it originate with the devil? Surely not, for it is his only foe. There is no way for it to have come into existence except through the work of Jesus, and there is no way to account for its spread and success except by the blessing of God. But we can not believe that God would bless a work that He would not approve and accept, so that we are convinced that God has accepted the work of Jesus Christ. But God cannot accept anything that is not absolutely perfect, therefore the work of Jesus must be perfect, and if perfect, the folly of man trying to add any of his righteousness to the work that is already perfect and approved and accepted!

We have thus seen from the fact that God raised Jesus from the dead and from the fact that He blesses the work that Jesus did, that He approves and accepts of this work. Let us now see for what purpose Jesus did this work. James tells us in the first chapter and eighteenth verse of his epistle. He says: "Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first fruits of His creatures." He not only tells us that God is the author of our spiritual life and that the means by which it is effected is the "Word of Truth," but also for what purpose He wrought this spiritual life in His people, "that we should be a kind of first fruits of His creatures." He means that our first and best shall be offered to God. Some people treat God just about as insultingly as they would a person if they should eat all the good part of an apple and then offer the core as a gift to that person. They use all their best efforts to gratify self and if there is anything left over that they have no special need for they offer it to God. No wonder that he does not acknowledge such gifts with such blessings! Under the Jewish dispensation God required of every Jew one-tenth of everything he made, and the first fruits of the harvest as typical of the first and best were offered as a wave offering before the Lord. This is what is meant where it says we are to be a kind of first fruits. It is said that Oliver Cromwell once entered one of the great cathedrals and saw standing in the nitches of the walls the statues of twelve men. "What are those men doing up there?" he asked. "They are silver statues of the apostles," he was told. "Take them down," he said "and melt them into coin and let them go about doing good." This is the purpose of Christ's work, that His people might be melted and refined and sent about doing good with His image stamped on them. It wasn't half of His work to redeem us from hell, as great and grand and glorious as the thought of this is. Suppose that there was a drunken wretch asleep in a burning building, and some one were to rush in and wake him from his sleep and save him from a fiery death. This would be a great kindness. But if that person were then to make a new man of him, put a new purpose in his heart, so that he should become an honor to his community and a blessing to his family, he would be doing a great deal more for him. So when Jesus' work made new creatures of his people and put a new heart in them so that for all eternity they will go on and on, growing in wisdom and power and knowledge and likeness to God, he did a great deal more for them than saving them from hell. And all this was done that we might be to the glory of God the Father! When we shall see God's plan of Redemption fully completed, we shall see that everything connected with it is for His glory. Even the lost souls in hell shall acknowledge Him and declare His glory.

Let us then take to heart the meaning of the work of Jesus Christ. It was first to make us the first fruits of all His creatures. It was in the second place that we might be for His glory. If our daily lives do not show to the world that we have consecrated to Him our first and best, and that we are an honor to His name, then we need to question very seriously, whether that work which Jesus wrought out has been made effectual to our lives.

WHERE TO SEEK GOD.

Fenelon says that he sought God in the works of his hands, in creation, and tried to form an idea of him from the beauties of nature; but, he said, "I found him not until I found him seated upon the throne of my own heart, where he is never absent."

Madame Guyon tells us that she used to be very much troubled about prayer, and the presence and nearness of God; sometimes he seemed distant, she could not seem to get across to him. And she said: "God permitted a righteous man to make a visit after a long solitude and my father, knowing the state of mind I was in, advised me to make my condition known, which I had no sooner done than he said: 'Madame, you seek from without what you have within. Accustom yourself to seek God in your heart, and you will find him.'" She said the words were like a flash of lightning, and helped her to discover in her heart what was already there, but she had not enjoyed it for want of knowing it.

Any unbelief may shut out God's presence, so far as our happiness and usefulness are concerned; and yet, if we have been born of him, he is there; he is trying to make himself known. O, how precious it is to know he is in our heart! "Ye are the temple of the Holy Ghost."

Do we realize it, that Jesus dwells in our hearts; that he is ready to do all that he did, and greater works than he did, while here upon earth, because the Holy Ghost was not given? I could tell you of hundreds whom I have seen come to the Saviour directly in answer to prayer, as remarkable and wonderful as anything could be, because the Holy Ghost did the work.

And how he yearns to do it! He sees all these precious souls around us going to perdition; he has died for them; he has been in agony for them; he has wept for them, and yet cannot reach them. Why? At one time, while here upon earth, Jesus could not do any mighty works because of unbelief. Now our unbelief is like that of the Pharisees, who not only would not enter he kingdom of God themselves, but hindered others from entering it. If we would believe God, and take him at his Word, we would not hinder others.—Times of Refreshing.

I once asked the greatest of inventors, Thomas A. Edison, if he were a total abstainer; and when he told me that he was, I said, "May I inquire whether it was home influence that made you so?" And he replied, "No, I think it was because I always felt that I had a better use for my head." Who can measure the loss to the world if that wonderful instrument of thought has given us so much of light and leading in the practical mechanism of life had become sodden with drink, instead of electric with original ideas?—Frances E. Willard.

The fact that God sees our hearts and knows our motives is a comfort to the Christian, and a cause of alarm to the sinner

Sabbath School Dep't.

CONDUCTED BY REV. A. D. McCLURE.

Third Quarter—Lesson XIII.

Sept. 26th, 1897.—Review of the Quarter.

Golden Text. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Matt. v. 16.

CATECHISM.

Question 59. Which day of the seven hath God appointed to be the weekly Sabbath.

Answer. From the beginning of the world to the resurrection of Christ, God appointed the seventh day of the week to be the weekly Sabbath; but the first day of the week ever since to continue to the end of the world, which is the Christian Sabbath.

It is not so much a question of material to occupy the time as of the wise selection and use of material for the hour of quarterly review. If the teachers have been faithful in their study and teaching of each lesson some one prominent thought from each will be at hand for the review. It is much to be desired that each teacher should seek the personal salvation of each member of the class. That is not to be accomplished by lecturing, but by seeking from God the truth to teach so that each member shall be reached. The Holy Spirit alone can and will work regeneration in the heart: But He uses the Word. That is the sword of the Spirit. Let not the teacher think that human words can be this instrument. It is not the teacher who is the wittiest or best talker whose work will be most effectual, but that teacher who will lodge most clearly and firmly the truths of Scripture will be most successful. It is not necessary, it may not be even best, to teach a great deal of Scripture in each lesson. There are teachers who think one hour for the school and of that only twenty or thirty minutes for the lesson is not enough time. That is not time enough to study or teach all the truth in any one lesson. But it is time to teach an illustrate and apply some one most important truth of the lesson in hand. Few persons will carry away more than one such truth.

Here is one great value of a weekly teachers' meeting. The whole lesson can be gone over. Each teacher can contribute to the fund of interpretation and understanding of the lesson. Then each can take out that thought most needed in each class. It is hard to understand how any school can get on without such a weekly teachers' meeting. There are so many lesser things to be discussed as to methods in conducting the school and needs of the teachers and classes and departments of school work. The question will come up as to the exercise for the Home Mission meeting as provided for by our Assembly. Our honored Secretary Dr. Craig send out the programmes. It will be good to use them. Let the teachers think about it, and if it is good, determine to make it a success.

In our school the teachers' weekly meeting promises to be one of the best and most potent factors in our church life for the present year. One thing they do can be done anywhere and is already bearing fruit amongst us. They agree to pray during the week at least once a day for some particular class. Another good result of this meeting is agreement what verses shall be committed to memory during the week to be recited the following Sabbath. One teacher, a mother who has four bright interesting children, reports that the youngest always laments if she should not be awake when mother and brothers go over the verses in the morning together. This is one way of doing double good, getting more Scripture repeated in the school and more interest taken in memorizing the Scriptures at home.

This Quarter has been one of the most helpful in our practical Christian living. The selections from the Epistles of Paul have brought forward the wonderful chapters on consistent Christian conduct and systematic giving. Any one verse of the lesson in Romans xii. or 1 Corinthians ix. will give material and food for the lesson hour. The last lesson from Acts xx. will be most valuable to establish and strengthen us Presbyterians in the polity of our Church.

The greatest lesson of this year thus far is the importance and value of missions. Suppose Paul had remained at home seeking the conversion of all his people before going to the regions beyond. Then the work at home would have been a failure and the work abroad would not have been done. We would be the children of heathen, ourselves more brutal and savage than our fathers. Besides this, from even a selfish view, the argument for missions is strong. Paul and his companions gathered from the Gentile Christians the means to supply the wants of the poor Jewish Christians at home. The principle still prevails that the Church at home will be the gainer by sending the Gospel to those who have it not, and will be the losser for failing to do this. As Mr. Spurgeon said: "If any church puts missions in a corner, God will put that church in a corner."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Sept 26th, 1897.

ETERNITY.

Text for the week:

The Lord is the true God, He is the living God and everlasting King—[a King of eternity.] Jer. 10:10.

Daily Readings:

Monday. The eternal God. Deut. 33:24-29.
Tuesday. Eternal life. Romans 5:15-23.
Wednesday. Eternal redemption. Heb 9:11-15.
Thursday. Eternal purpose. Eph. 3:8-21.
Friday, Eternal home. 2 Cor. 5:1-10.
Saturday. Eternal punishment. Matt. 25:41-46.
Sunday. Topic. Eternity. John 5:17-29.

Notes:

If definition is the fixing of meaning by precisely determining bounds and limitations—then eternity is a word indefinable. Time forever before, time was, and time forever when time shall cease to be—without beginning or end of days or years—how the mind wanders in the oppressive vacancy created by the attempt to grasp the thought. And yet the very exercise may be helpful, and is, if it turns upon man's insignificancy and the ephemeral nature of the present life, and then reverts, almost rebounds, to thoughts of God. God alone of all within the compass of man's conception expresses the eternal —God! "King of eternity!" An uncreated existence before time was, to be forever and forever—when time shall be no longer, one ever present and eternal now. God eternal in His being and in all His attributes. Eternal in that love to man that based His eternal purpose to save man from the eternal fate that befell when sin entered the world. Eternal in His wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth. The very thought of God in this connection, has an humbling power. How man shrinks into veriest nothingness before it. And yet withal how the man is uplifted and armed with power to dare and do in the service of right and truth and holiness when the eternal God in Christ, has filled his soul. Stonewall Jackson knew this power. Dr. J. P. Smith, one of his military staff says of him:

"God, God himself, the living, personal and present God, became the one transcendant fact, that dwelt in all his thoughts, and possessed his whole being. It was not God only as the surpassingly glorious subject of reflection, or as living and working and revealing himself in nature and in history, nor as partially known by Hebrew prophets in the childhood of humanity; but God revealed in Christ, the God of law and love, whose law is love, and whose love leads back to law. * * * All things were viewed in the light of the supreme fact of God. All things were referred to it. All things were submitted to the rulings of that fact. It covered all other facts, all other truth, it ruled all action, it answered all questions of duty, and made all his life and service one and simple forever. How inevitably came his humility." Thence came his humility, and thence too came his self-reliance and his astounding success.

But the Scriptures speak of that which is eternal as relating to man. Eternal as implying endless duration in futurity simply—so man is born to life eternal. He cannot dispossess himself, even if he would. His destiny is to joy eternal, or his doom to endless woe. Tremendous thought to carry with us through life, and well to ne'er forget, that the days of time must fix the reward or doom of each one's soul for all eternity. To whosoever will the gates of joy are opened through Christ, the eternal Son. No one has aught but one moment of time, he may call his own, in which to make the choice which fixes his status for all eternity. Yesterday is past; to-morrow may never come; to-day is ours. Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation.

He was born August 19th, 1843. He was married to Miss Mary E McKinnon December 13th, 1869. Mr. Caldwell was a member of the Presbyterian church at St. Paul's, N. C. He was one of the kindest men the writer ever knew. He was generous to a fault, for he was often hurt by his unselfishness to those unworthy of his kindness, and those who designedly took advantage of his generosity.

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH DIXON.

This most estimable woman is no longer with us. The same Lord who gave her to her parents, her husband, her children her many friends and the church of God has now taken her to Himself. John xiv: 3. She had much to be thankful for. Chief among these earthly blessings was the fact that she was of the "seed of the righteous." Her ancestors on both sides for generations past had feared God and then had nothing else to fear. Her parents, Andrew and Abigail Jones, lived in the bounds of Sugar Creek church where she was born, March 21st, 1832. But from her second year she was brought up and most tenderly cared for in the family of her grandfather, Robert Parks. Such was the happy effect of pious training and Godly example in this home that she felt constrained to give herself to Christ and unite with His Church. This she did, uniting with Sugar Creek church, in her 23d year. And that vow of consecration once solemnly made was no less solemnly kept. Her religion was not a mere form. It was a fact—a glorious reality. It took hold upon her strong intellect, her great heart of love, her broad sympathies. Yea her entire personality was laid under tribute to its righteous, and to her, sovereign, omnipotent, claims. She was united in marriage to D. F. Dixon, Esq., Nov. 2d, 1854, and was permitted to be his devoted and faithful companion for more than forty-two years. This marriage was blessed with eight children who arrived at manhood and womanhood. One of these, Mrs. Ida Curry, was called almost from the bridal chamber of earth to the marriage supper of the Lamb. Another, Wm. P. Dixon, in the prime of his young manhood, only recently, hastened on before to meet and greet his mother at her coming. Thomas, Charles and Harry Dixon, Mrs. Sallie Witherspoon, Mrs. Rebecca Doll and Miss Bessie Dixon, remain to cheer their father in his loneliness and grief and to honor the memory of one of the tenderest, truest, best, mothers ever given to a Christian family. How appropriate the words of the wise man: "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also and he praiseth her." Prov. xxxi: 28. Her children have not failed to profit from her wise and holy counsels and her consistent, beautiful, Christian life. Long ere her summons came, with tears of joy, she witnessed the ingathering of all her children into the fold of Christ. For this she ever prayed and prayed not in vain.

Mrs. Dixon was a favorite with all her pastors. It was her fortune to live within the bounds and, with her husband, to become a member of the following churches: Sugar Creek, Mallard Creek, Hopewell, Gastonia and Second church, Charlotte, and in each of these she was greatly beloved by her pastors. And there was a reason for this. She was never absent from her accustomed place in the house of God without a reason. And whatever was the size or character of the audience there was present no more intelligent, appreciative or devout listener than Mrs. Dixon She may not have read the latest novel or most recent review article, but she knew the Holy Scriptures in letter and spirit as few know them. Therefore the preaching of the Gospel, in its simplicity, completeness, preciousness and power was to her mind and heart a "feast of fat things." She could truthfully say, "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." Ps. cxxii. And again, "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Ps. lxxxiv 10. As proof of this when fatal disease had seized upon her and she was no longer able to walk to church she requested to be driven to her church when informed that her former pastor, Rev. R. C. Reed, D. D., would preach during the meeting of the Assembly in Charlotte. This sermon by her warm, personal friend, was her last service on earth. On the 21st of July, 1897, at her home in Charlotte, she died—died as she lived in the full faith and triumph of the Gospel. We say she died. The truth is for such a woman

"There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some other shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forever more."

OUR FRIENDS.

Who are our friends? Are they the crowd
That throng our courts when joy and mrith
Light up with glee a happy home
And gladness sparkles round the hearth,
When life flows on all tranquilly
As summer fountains to the sea,

But when misfortune clouds our lot
And sorrow dims the languid eye
Will shun our dark, deserted home
And meeting pass us heedless by?
These are our summer friends, whose stay
Is like the meteor's transient ray.

But where are those, that faithful few,
Who then seek out our low retreat,
With generous hearts and liberal hands
Our wants and hopeless wishes meet?
Our only friends are those who come
When darkness gathers round our doom.

Go, friend of man, seek the abode
Of cold neglect and poverty,
Bind up the broken heart and raise
The head bow'd down by misery.
Give but a portion of your store,
And God will bless the deed with more.

A CALIFORNIA WOMAN HONORED.

Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst has been appointed by Governor Budd a regent of the State University, vice Colonel C. F. Crocker, deceased. This is the first time a lady has ever been appointed on the board. Her appointment was asked for by the women graduates of the university. Their petition set forth that, in the various courses at the State University, there are at present nearly 500 women, 400 of these being undergraduates. Also, that "all women's colleges have women on their governing boards, and Cornell and Boston Universities, among co-educational institutions, have found such representation "necessary." Mrs. Hearst, widow of the late Senator George Hearst, has long evinced a strong interest in education, and the University of California is indebted to her generosity in many ways. In 1891 she made provisions for eight $300 scholarships, for worthy young women, binding herself to pay that sum during her lifetime, and providing for a perpetual fund after death. The qualifications for the scholarships are noble character and high aims, it being understood that, without the assistance thus given, the university course would in each case be impossible.—Picayune.

BEDS OF PEARLS IN GEORGIA.

A dispatch from Rome, Ga., says: "Since the discovery of pearls in the Arkansas lakes the pearl hunters of North Georgia are going to work with renewed interest. Rivers and creeks are filled with pearl-bearing mussels, which are shell fish, like clams. The Smithsonian Institute sent Prof. Ellsworth Call here a few days ago to study these mussels. Not long ago a pearl was found near here valued at $60. Joe Veal, a well-known jeweler, said to-day that fishermen and trappers sometimes bring him a spoonful of pearls. Most of these are found in holes of muskrats, coons and other animals, which leave the shells and the imbedded pearl after eating the fish."

AN ENGLISH FARM SCHOOL.

The county of Bedford, England, has a farm school established by the Duke of Bedford. The design is to educate boys of the poorer class in the practice and theory of agriculture under the supervision of a practical farmer. There are nineteen boys in the school. They work on the farm alternate days and attend school the rest of the time. The "practical farmer" had the farm rent free and the farm labor free and yet failed to make expenses by over two hundred dollars.

WOMEN IN THIBET.

Miss Taylor, a young English woman who recently returned from Thibet, and is now gathering missionary recruits for that mysterious country, says that men and women who understand medicine will be most successful in that field. The knowledge of drugs, she adds, among the natives is almost equal to that of the English themselves. The position of women, according to Miss Taylor, is higher in Thibet than in any other country in the orient save perhaps Mongolia.

The mystery of womanhood is full of deep unanswerable enigmas. Why should women be compelled to suffer simply because they are women? Why is it that the source of their highest joys is at the same time the cause of their greatest wretchedness? The very attributes which make it possible for women to be happy wives and mothers also render them liable to the utmost physical misery and pain.

The sufferings of body and mind caused by some weakness of the distinctly feminine organs are so almost universal among women that the question might well be asked: "Is this Nature's punishment for the crime of being a woman?"

The true answer is No! These sufferings are neither natural nor necessary. They would not exist if the organism was healthy. No woman ought to endure such troubles. There is no need of it. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a perfect and positive cure for feminine weakness and disease.

It gives health and strength to the special organs and nerve-centres; heals inflammation; stops weakening drains; promotes functional regularity, and restores the normal, vigorous and painless condition which Nature intended.

It is the only medicine of its kind invented by an educated and experienced physician. It is the only medicine which makes baby's coming safe and comparatively painless.

Any woman who would like to know more about this medicine and about her own physicial make-up should send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., to pay the cost of mailing only on an absolutely free copy of his thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser;" or, 31 stamps for cloth covered.

A sure and permanent cure for constipation is Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic.

Cherry Ice.—Remove the stone from two pounds of ripe red cherries, and put them into a preserving pan or saucepan with half a pound of sugar and a little water. Let this come to a boil, remove and strain through a sieve or piece of cloth. Add the juice of two lemons and one pound of sugar boiled slightly. Mix this together, put in the freezer and freeze, stirring occasionally to distribute the cherries. Serve in glasses

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A GOOD THING TO DO.

Hold it back, tie it down,
Bind it fast and tight.
Set your lips together close—
Which will win the fight?

Let it go wild and free,
Running reckless riot!
Surely that will quickly be
An end of peace and quiet.

Strongest men of all you know
Find it hard to do.
If you try your very best,
Victory for you.

Try it hard. Bring to it
Firm determination.
If you rule it well and good,
You can rule a nation.

To all the heroes who have been Tried and told and sung,
Let us add the sturdy boy
Who can hold his tongue.

THE LITTLE FIRE-ESCAPE BOY.

BY EMMA L. BURNETT.

"I wish we hadn't any yard; then I shouldn't have to stay in it," pouted Teddie Brownson.

Yet such a delightful place as it was! quite large for a city yard. To be sure, it was not in the closely-built portion of the city, but was a beautiful stretch of grass that didn't have "to be kept off of," and all round by the fence a flower border, part of which was Teddie's very own garden, where he cultivated petunias and onions. Then there was a wide paved walk along the side of the house, leading to the gate opening on the front treet. Here, on hot afternoons, Teddie was allowed to "squirt the hose," as he called it, which was great fun.

He had a set of garden tools, a tent, an express wagon, roller skates, a tricycle, and a little dog. He had no brothers or sisters to play with, but had several nice little friends. Indeed, the Burnside boys spent about half their time there.

Still Teddie was not satisfied. He wanted to play on the street; but, since the trolly cars had begun to run on their street, his mother was so afraid her little boy would get hurt, she was constantly saying, "Now, Teddie, you must stay in the yard."

The day he said he wished they hadn't any yard his mother remarked:

"I know of a little boy who would be very glad to have a yard even a quarter the size of yours. All the out-doors he can get at is the fire-escape."

"The fire-escape!" Teddie exclaimed. "I should like that better than a yard. Does he climb up and down on it?"

"No, indeed. He is lifted out the window to the platform, and there he sits for an hour or two a day, in a little chair, with a pillow supporting his lame back. The noise of the streets comes up to him, and I don't suppose there is a green or growing thing within his sight. But it is the only way he can get any out-door air at all."

"Who is he?" asked Teddie, much interested.

"His name is Jimmie Cummisky. He lives with his mother and two little sisters in one room, in one of those large tenement houses down town that your papa was telling you about the other day. They are very poor. His mother has to work hard to pay the rent and get them something to eat. She is working for Mrs. Storrs, across the street, to-day, and I've just been over to engage her to work for me Thursday."

As Teddie went on with his luncheon he did a good deal of thinking. He came to the conclusion that a grassy, shady yard was a pretty nice thing after all; and he truly pitied the little sick boy whose only chance to be out-doors was to sit on the fire-escape in the midst of the noise and griminess of a miserable part of town. All at once an idea popped into Teddie's curly head, and he exclaimed:

"O mama! why can't you ask Mrs Cummisky to bring Jimmie along Thursday, if it is a good day? While she's working he could lie in the hammock, or sit in my little rocking chair in the yard, and look at the grass and things. I 'spect it would do him lots of good."

"That's an excellent suggestion," Mrs. Brownson replied, "but I have to pay Mrs. Cummisky's car-fare, and, if Jimmie comes, it will take that much more. Who's going to pay that?"

She wanted to see if Teddie pitied the little boy enough to do anything for him himself. Teddie looked very grave. He was saving up his nickels and pennies to buy fire-crackers for the Fourth, and it was pretty hard to give away even ten cents just then. But he had made up his mind that something must be done for the poor little cripple, so in a moment or two his face brightened, and he said:

"I'll give his car-fare as well as the sudjestion."

The result was, the little fire-escape boy, as Teddie called him, had a beautiful day in the yard, which was a perfect paradise to him, besides having a better dinner and supper than he ever had in his life before. His pinched little face was covered with smiles in the evening, when, with his hands filled with roses and woodbine, Teddie and the Burnside boys took him to the Clay Street trolley car in the express wagon.

"It's all done him a wurruld o' good!" said the grateful mother, as she picked up her little boy and clambered into the summer car.

Teddie got his father interested in the Cummiskys, and they went into a kind of partnership to give the poor family some little outings that summer. Teddie generally paid part or all of Jimmie's car-fare, and Mr. Brownson did the rest. It kept Teddie rather low in ice-cream and merry-go-round money, but he liked to think of the crippled boy speeding away on the swift trolleys to the green and flowery parks.—Sunday School Times.

SAY SOME.

Switzerland has been afflicted with heavy floods. They climb down from the mountains and go up the valleys. It is said Switzerland has water to Berne.

Watch closely every symptom in your children, use simple remedies, and you will not need to call a doctor every time they are sick.

Life is like a nutmeg grater—you have to rub up against the rough side of it to accomplish anything.

THINGS USEFUL.

Graham Pudding.—Heat one pint of milk till lukewarm, add two tablespoonfuls sugar and one teaspoonful vanilla. Dissolve half-tablet of rennet in one teaspoonful cold water and add it to the warm milk. Take three custard cups and put into each one-half tablespoonful Graham bread crumbs. Then fill them with the prepared milk. Set the cups in a warm place until the milk is firm. Then place them for several hours on ice. When ready to serve turn the pudding into individual dishes and serve with cream or plain.

Cabbage Mustard Pickle.—In the bottom of a large stone jar put a layer of finely chopped cabbage, then one-half a cup of chopped white onion, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of ground mace, the same of allspice, one teaspoonful of brown mustard seed and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of coarsely ground white pepper. Continue in this order until the jar is filled, pressing it down as firm as possible. When full, pour over sufficient cider vinegar to cover, adding more at intervals for the next three days, as it is absorbed by the cabbage. Then drain off all the liquid, put it in a kettle over the fire, and when steaming hot stir in sufficient ground mustard to make it as thick as good cream. Stir continually until it boils for one minute, then add the contents of the jar, cover and set away for a month, when it will be ready for use; it will keep all winter.

Ripe, fresh fruits, eaten at the table with our meals with little or no sugar, are conductive to good health, and make a dessert fit for a king.

THE LIFE OF MAN.

Op'ning the map of God's extensive plan,
We find a little isle, this life of man;
Eternity's unknown expanse appears
Circling around and limiting his years.
The busy race examine and explore
Each creek and cavern of the dang'rous shore,
With care collect what in their eyes excels,
Some shining pebbles, and some weeds and shells;
Thus laden, dream that they are rich and great,
And happiest he that groans beneath his weight.
The waves o'ertake them in their serious play,
And ev'ry hour sweep multitudes away;
They shriek and sink, survivors stare and weep,
Pursue their sport, and follow to the deep.

—William Cowper.

A thoughtful contemplation of nature must give us higher and happier views of God. As the bosom of mother earth is robed in green velvet and sweet with flowers, we rest on it with thoughts of that divine support, which puts underneath us the Everlasting Arms, and glows in far-reaching love through all the infinite spaces of the summer blue above, and over all the peaceful fields where walk the children of God's care. With this support and warmed through with this pervasive love, we may for a little forget our cares and sins, taking in all its fullness God's forgiveness, and resting with full trust in His abundant care.—The Treasury of Religious Thought.

Patience among the virtues is like the pearl among the gems, and by its quiet radiance it heightens every human grace.—Rev. Robert Allyn, LL. D.

REV. HUGH CRAIG.

The subject of this sketch belongs to that sturdy race which has accomplished so much on American soil, the Scotch-Irish, and is no unworthy representative. Hugh Craig, son of William and Eliza McElwain Craig, was born in Marlow, Province Quebec, Canada, on the 24th day of November, 1861. His boyhood's years were spent on the farm, and he studied almost entirely at home, the exception being a few months spent at a school in Maine. His home training, however, laid the foundation of wide reading and varied information, which, while it may be advantageously supplemented by the regular curriculum of the schools, is itself indispeneable to a successful career.

Mr. Craig entered college at the age of twenty-five, graduating from McGill University, Montreal, four years later, in 1890, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He studied theology with his classical course and completed the full course in that department a year later, being licensed and ordained by the Presbytery of Quebec, in May, 1891. His ordination took place in Chalmers church, Sawyerville. For one year he had charge of a mission field, and was then called to St. Andrew's church, Windsor Mills, Quebec.

Failing health brought him to North Carolina the following winter, and he spent three months at Rowland, in the bounds of Ashpole congregation. He made so favorable an impression while there that upon the resignation of Rev. Joseph Evans, the gifted young Canadian, who had in the mean time returned home, was at once thought of for the pastorate of the Ashpole church and received a hearty call. He accepted that work and was received by Fayetteville Presbytery in August, 1895. Since that time he has been laboring with great energy and success in his large and important field. Besides being pastor of Ashpole with its 330 members, he is stated supply of Iona and Lebanon. But he is much more than the pastor of his own people. Being the only resident minister in the neighborhood, he is frequently called upon in cases of sickness and bereavement, and has become the pastor of all the people. His popularity with other churches is something remarkable, and so acceptable is his preaching that one of his regular appointments is at the Baptist church at Rowland.

He is at the same time a most loyal Presbyterian. Under his efficient conduct of affairs his church is developing in the grace of giving. There were forty-four additions to his field during the past year, on profession of faith. Mr. Craig is a thoughtful, earnest and interesting preacher. His scholarly training has given him a marked clearness of thought and expression, while his broad sympathies render his preaching helpful to a degree. He is heard with delight in other pulpits than his own, though his people do not care for the admiration of other congregations.

He is also a valued Presbyter and his brethren have lately acknowledged his capacity in an executive way by giving him the important position of Treasurer of the Home Mission Committee. He thus has the financial management of the most important work in the Presbytery. He is alway ready for his part in Presbyterial duties, and his work is well done.

By those who know him but slightly he would be remembered probably by his ever ready wit which is original and irresistible. But his people and his fellow Presbyters know also his sterling qualities of mind and heart.

Mr. Craig was married in June, 1895, to Miss Helen Blanche Bowers, daughter of John A. Bowers of Bayonne, N. J. A son has been born to them, and Mr. Craig's father who has gone to live with him completes the charming home circle of the manse at Ashpole. Mrs. Craig is a model pastor's wife and a helpmeet indeed.

"Our great aim should be nothing less than to keep before us the great purpose of God for our world, the reconciling of it in Christ Jesus unto Himself." How this is to be done by every minister of Christ, by every servant of Christ, is for that minister or that servant to find out for himself. That man is in this world, not to pay Church debts, or to build a fine church, or to have beautiful adornments and lovely singing. These are mere accessories, the great purpose to reconcile his congregation to God through Christ, the one Mediator.—Southern Churchman.

"A HOLY LIFE."

This is the title of a little book of sermons or addresses by Rev. H. G. C. Macgregor, which we noticed favorably a few weeks ago. We refer to it now only to suggest its helpfulness in the study of the Scriptures and as a starting point for considering the high calling of God in Christ Jesus of our Lord.

Last week we showed that sanctification in the Scripture use of the word has reference to dedication. As a doctrine sanctification holds that God works continuously from justification to glorification death unto sin and life unto righteousness in the believer. Sanctification is the growth of the believer toward Christlikeness, whereby we are renewed in the whole man after the image of God. Sanctification is not sinless perfection.

We must not therefore excuse our yielding to temptation, our falling into sin. We must rather be aroused to seek victory over sin and a life of fruitfulness. We are called to walk in newness of life. This is called by Rev. Mr. Macgregor, "a holy life."

If we understand by this a life fully consecrated to God our way is plain. Thus the priests were sanctified, separated unto the service of God. There is no longer a class set apart as priests to offer literal sacrifices, and we do wrong even to call any class of ministers priests. All Christians are priests. We are a royal priesthood, a kingdom of priests, and are called to sanctify ourselves. We are called to live a holy life.

Many and suggestive examples and descriptive names of this life are found in the Scriptures. Enoch "walked with God," as one of the earliest examples. Abraham was called "the friend of God" as one of the most familiar titles. This is called by some the life of privilege. It may be best not to give any title that could be called a human definition, for in making definitions we often arouse controversy and lose the very good we seek. We will all agree that there is need of much more complete consecration of our lives to God and that we are called to greater joy, power and success than most of us attain. But when we begin to make definitions we shall begin to disagree, not upon what God calls us to, nor what He commands us to be and do, but as to the theological correctness of our definition.

Whatever name we may give, the thing we seek is to live, to be and to do what our Lord meant when He said, "Abide in Me." It is otherwhere spoken of as living in the Spirit. It is a crucified life; "I am crucified with Christ." It is a risen life; "If ye then be risen with Christ," It is a hidden life; "Your life is hid with Christ in God." It is a manifested life; "Living epistles known and read of all men."

It is possible only to those who are "partakers of the divine life." It cannot be attained by any self-help or self-strength. It is not mere morality or growing consistency of conduct, however apparently correct in outward department. It is the outward manifestation of the inwrought Christ by the ministration of the indwelling Holy Spirit. The Spirit dwells in us as believers working our sanctification. He makes the life of Christ effectual in our lives. But this is hindered in the presence and activity of the self-life. "Ye are carnal," wrote the apostle to the Christians at Corinth, This word carnal means fleshly, according to the dictates and desires of the flesh, and flesh is self.

The need is at some point to accept and receive "the promise of the Spirit through faith," to give over to Christ the dominion of our lives, to surrender to Him absolutely and once for all, not only as our Lord, but as our Life, and to yield ourselves to be filled by the Spirit, and led by the Spirit, that we may walk in the Spirit. It is not enough to be reconciled to God by the death of His Son," we are to be saved by His life.

This is to save us from the apostle's severe question to the Galatian Christians; "Having began in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect in the flesh?" With a sense and burden of past failure and a need of grace, we give up and renounce all self-trust and look to Christ to work in us and by us a life of love, joy and power by the Holy Spirit.

ALL DOUBTS have been put to rest as to the prevalence of yellow fever in the coast cities of the Gulf of Mexico, and even of some interior towns of Mississippi. In some cases a panic has ensued which, like all panics, is of course outside and entirely apart from the province of reason. This for instance is the case at Jackson, Miss., where troops have had to be called out to prevent the railroad tracks leading into the city from being torn up; perhaps, may be cited in further illustration, the preventing of the governor of the State from returning from to his home in Brandon to his official duties. But, there may be a course pursued quite the reverse of panic which is liable to work infinite harm. We refer to the throwing open of cities to all refugees. There is something so generous, so noble, so thoroughly charitable to all appearance in this, that one dislikes to criticise it in even the mildest way, and yet the fact is that this may prove to be a most unwise thing to do. Atlanta has chosen this course, avowedly, and of course sincerely, because supposed to be immune, and yet it may prove not so. The fact that under circumstances, so far as can be known very similar, Atlanta has heretofore taken the risk and has escaped is not by any means an absolute guarantee of safety. And there stand on record instances where this generous course has been pursued and has brought consequences most terribly disastrous upon those who have ventured upon it.

It is surprising how many theories are set forward as to immunity of different localities or different classes from yellow fever. The theories do not seem usually to be applied to other forms of infection or contagion. It was at one time a belief almost universal that yellow fever would not attack negroes, and under that belief, in 1862, numbers of slaves were left by in Wilmington by their owners only to die off by scores from the disease. Even now it is said that it cannot go away from water courses and yet hundreds upon hundreds died at Holly Springs, Miss., and many other places far away from any stream at all. Caution may well be exercised in every case, for theories are liable at any time to be exploded, or to melt away, when it is too late to provide against most terrible consequences.

IN THIS day of Summer Schools and modes and appliances for taking rest, without losing time for labor, it may be well to take a look upon the other side of the matter and consider seriously whether there is not danger of pursuing a course that will frustrate the very design of vacation. On this subject the following clipped from the Bookman strikes us well worth pondering, albeit we do not endorse the recommendations in all their fullness:

Teaching is the most exhausting, and takes the most out of one's brain and nerve and general vitality, and in consequence, more than any other human being, the teacher needs in his vacation to get away from the atmosphere of the "shop." For his academic learning, his purely scholastic knowledge, is in reality the less valuable part of his professional equipment. The true teacher is more than a setter of tasks and a hearer of lessons; he is an influence. And his pupils are not, first of all, students, but human beings. Hence, if necessary, a teacher should be willing to sacrifice something from his ideal, in the matter of his own formal preparation, if by doing so he can secure the far greater and more important gifts of bodily and mental health, steady nerves, a sense of balance and proportion, and a profound and sympathetic knowledge of his fellow-men. No one is so dreadfully in danger of getting into a mental rut, of becoming dogmatic, pedantic, and priggish; and the antidote for these things is found in getting absolutely away from his professional environment for as long a time as possible each year, resting his nerves and brain, and, above all, mingling with men and women whose standards and interests are absolutely different from his own. To go from his class-room to a place where the same old grind in another form is still going on, to make one of a crowd of jaded, nervous, sensitive beings who are stewing in their own juice, and gabbling over and over the formulas of the Educationist, so far from being a stimulus and an inspiration, is actually the undoing of a teacher, and sends him back to his work with a still further exhaustion of energy and enthusiasm and sympathy. So we say to the educator if he be a man, Go off somewhere, anywhere, to the place where education doesn't count; bivouac in the woods with a party of stock-brokers, or hobnob with Down East fishermen; and to the woman teacher we recommend the society of the most frivolous, giddy, and flirtatious young girls who infest the myriad resorts in summer. This will keep the balance properly adjusted, replacing hysteria and dullness and nerves by a renewed invigoration, an augmented sense of humour, and a saner and more highly developed insight into human nature.

"AS THOU WILT:" This phrase represents a principle which is the absolute test of all true prayer. Commonly the object of prayer is considered to be a securing of some desirable good, by moving the heart of God to grant our wishes. But this would be to make our wishes determine the will of God and thus virtually to subvert Divine providence and to make natural law subject to the human will. But is not the real purpose of prayer, through the working of God's Spirit upon the heart, to moderate and to correct the human desire and to bring it into strict conformity with the will Divine? This makes prayer not a means of securing some special earthly good, but a means of so merging the human in the Divine will as to insure contentment in what may prove the will of God, either in granting or withholding a request. So our Saviour prayed in His agony, in the garden. "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt." As objects of prayer any thing is allowable, that is agreeable to the will of God, and nothing else is.

This view of prayer, if we are correct in stating it, is that of F. W. Robertson.

"Our officials do not take kindly to the idea said to have been taken up by numerous European anarchists of coming to the United States to live, and they will stretch their authority to the utmost to prevent the landing of European anarchists upon American soil; but the little law bearing upon the subject is lamentably weak, and unless the anarchists are paupers or convicted criminals it has been found impossible heretofore to prevent their landing. The same methods which were successfully used several years ago to prevent a notorious English anarchist from publicly advocating his incendiary doctrines in the United States, after an attempt to prevent his landing had failed, may be used in dealing with Louise Michel, the French female anarchist, understood to be now on her way to America. Most of the States have stringent laws against the making of seditious speeches and the English anarchist was speedily made aware of their existence and concluded that he didn't care to be locked up."

THIS FROM "Our Washington Letter." There can be no reasonable doubt that the greatest danger ahead of us is the fearful tendency among the depraved classes towards anarchism; in the tolerance which our laws give to this spirit and in the encouragement afforded by influential persons who can use it for their own interest.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

The enrolment of students for this season is larger than ever before in the history of the College. The new students number over 70, including those of the Medical College who take regular college studies, and the total enrolment is 164. As others are arriving almost every day, this points to a catalogue enrolment for the year of something like 180. The N. C. Medical College has also a larger enrolment than ever before, and Dr. Munroe expects at least forty students on his roll this year.

All of us, both students and villagers, are looking forward with interest and pleasure to the course of lectures on the Otts Foundation to be delivered here by that Nestor of the Southern Presbyterian Church, Dr. R. L. Dabney. A fuller notice of these lectures and their topics will soon be out. They are to be delivered during the month of October, and will consist of five or six discourses, having for their central theme the Atonement. We hope to see a large attendance from the Presbyterian ministry of our whole State.

The Young Men's Christian Association gave a very successful reception to the new students last Monday evening. All the young ladies of the village, the faculty and its lady-members, and the Alumni on the grounds, were invited to meet the new men, and help dispose of the refreshments liberally provided for the occasion.

Miss Florence Leftwich is visiting her sister, Mrs. T. P. Harrison. She is a member of the faculty of the Female College at Columbus, Miss., and is detained here, waiting till the yellow fever alarm abates sufficiently to allow the college to begin its session.

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this; that power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 4 His manner of blessing God.
A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where no water is;
2 To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.
3 Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.
4 Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.
5 My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:
6 When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night watches.
7 Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
8 My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
9 But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
10 They shall fall by the sword: they shall be a portion for foxes.
11 But the king shall rejoice in God; every one that sweareth by him shall glory: but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM 64.

1 David's complaint. 3 His petition. 7 God's judgments against his enemies. 10 The joy of the righteous.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

1 Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer: preserve my life from fear of the enemy.
2 Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:
3 Who whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrow, even bitter words:
4 That they may shoot in secret at the perfect: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.
5 They encourage themselves in an evil matter: they commune of laying snares privily; they say, Who shall see them?
6 They search out iniquities; they accomplish a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.
7 But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly shall they be wounded.
8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: all that see them shall flee away.
9 And all men shall fear, and shall declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.
10 The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM 65.

1 David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

1 Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed.
2 O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come.
3 Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.
4 Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.
5 By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea:
6 Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being girded with power:
7 Which stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people.
8 They also that dwell in the uttermost parts are afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.
9 Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it, thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.
10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly: thou settlest the furrows thereof: thou makest it soft with showers: thou blessest the springing thereof.
11 Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness.
12 They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills rejoice on every side.
13 The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

PSALM 66.

1 He stirreth up all the earth to praise God. 5 He exhorteth to consider his works. 8 He blesseth God for his benefits. 13 He offereth sacrifice. 16 He declareth what God hath done for his soul. 20 He blesseth God.
To the chief Musician, A Song or Psalm.

1 Make a joyful noise unto God, all ye lands:
2 Sing forth the honour of his name: make his praise glorious.
3 Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works! through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit themselves unto thee.
4 All the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.
5 Come and see the works of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men.
6 He turned the sea into dry land: they went through the flood on foot: there did we rejoice in him.
7 He ruleth by his power for ever; his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.
8 O bless our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praise to be heard:
9 Which holdeth our soul in life, and suffereth not our feet to be moved.
10 For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.
11 Thou broughtest us into the net; thou laidst affliction upon our loins.
12 Thou hast caused men to ride over our heads; we went through fire and through water: but thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.
13 I will go into thy house with burnt offerings: I will pay thee my vows,
14 Which my lips have uttered, and my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.
15 I will offer unto thee burnt sacrifices of fatlings, with the incense of rams; I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah.
16 Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul.
17 I cried unto him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue.
18 If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me:
19 But verily God hath heard me; he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.
20 Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

PSALM 67.

1 He prayeth for the mercy of God upon the Church. 3 He stirreth up all people to praise God.
To the chief Musician on Neginoth, A Psalm or Song.

1 God be merciful unto us, and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us; Selah.
2 That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations.
3 Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.
4 O let the nations be glad and sing for joy: for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth. Selah.
5 Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.
6 Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us.
7 God shall bless us; and all the ends of the earth shall fear him.

PSALM 68.

1 He prayeth for the dispersion of the wicked. 4 He exhorteth to praise God. 7 He setteth forth his power. 19 He blesseth God.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm or Song of David.

1 Let God arise, let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him flee before him.
2 As smoke is driven away, so drive them away: as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God.
3 But let the righteous be glad; let them rejoice before God: yea, let them exceedingly rejoice.
4 Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH, and rejoice before him.
5 A father of the fatherless, and a judge of the widows, is God in his holy habitation.
6 God setteth the solitary in families: he bringeth out those which are bound with chains: but the rebellious dwell in a dry land.
7 O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou didst march through the wilderness; Selah:
8 The earth shook, the heavens also dropped at the presence of God: even Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God, the God of Israel.
9 Thou, O God, didst send a plentiful rain, whereby thou didst confirm thine inheritance, when it was weary.
10 Thy congregation hath dwelt therein: thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.
11 The Lord gave the word: great was the company of those that published it.
12 Kings of armies did flee apace: and she that tarried at home divided the spoil.
13 Though ye have lien among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.
14 When the Almighty scattered kings in it, it was white as snow in Salmon.
15 The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan; an high hill as the hill of Bashan.
16 Why leap ye, ye high hills? this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in; yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever.
17 The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even thousands of angels: the Lord is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place.
18 Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive: thou hast received gifts for men; yea, for the rebellious also, that the LORD God might dwell among them.
19 Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation. Selah.
20 He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto GOD the Lord belong the issues from death.
21 But God shall wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy scalp of such a one as goeth on still in his trespasses.
22 The Lord said, I will bring again from Bashan, I will bring my people again from the depths of the sea:
23 That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and the tongue of thy dogs in the same.
24 They have seen thy goings, O God; even the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.
25 The singers went before, the players on instruments followed after; among them were the damsels playing with timbrels.
26 Bless ye God in the congregations, even the Lord, from the fountain of Israel.
27 There is little Benjamin with their ruler, the princes of Judah and their council, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali.
28 Thy God hath commanded thy strength: strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us.
29 Because of thy temple at Jerusalem shall kings bring presents unto thee.
30 Rebuke the company of spearmen, the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people, till every one submit himself with pieces of silver: scatter thou the people that delight in war.
31 Princes shall come out of Egypt; Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God.
32 Sing unto God, ye kingdoms of the earth; O sing praises unto the Lord; Selah:
33 To him that rideth upon the heavens of heavens, which were of old; lo, he doth send out his voice, and that a mighty voice.
34 Ascribe ye strength unto God: his excellency is over Israel, and his strength is in the clouds.
35 O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places: the God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto his people. Blessed be God.

PSALM 69.

1 He complaineth of his afflictions. 13 He prayeth unto God. 30 He praiseth God. 35 He exhorteth to praise God.
To the chief Musician upon Shoshannim, A Psalm of David.

1 Save me, O God; for the waters are come in unto my soul.
2 I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me.
3 I am weary of my crying: my throat is dried: mine eyes fail while I wait for my God.
4 They that hate me without a cause are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would destroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away.
5 O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my sins are not hid from thee.
6 Let not them that wait on thee, O Lord GOD of hosts, be ashamed for my sake: let not those that seek thee be confounded for my sake, O God of Israel.
7 Because for thy sake I have borne reproach; shame hath covered my face.
8 I am become a stranger unto my brethren, and an alien unto my mother's children.
9 For the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up; and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.
10 When I wept, and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.
11 I made sackcloth also my garment; and I became a proverb to them.
12 They that sit in the gate speak against me; and I was the song of the drunkards.
13 But as for me, my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, in an acceptable time: O God, in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.
14 Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.
15 Let not the waterflood overflow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.
16 Hear me, O LORD; for thy lovingkindness is good: turn unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.
17 And hide not thy face from thy servant; for I am in trouble: hear me speedily.
18 Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeem it: deliver me because of mine enemies.
19 Thou hast known my reproach, and my shame, and my dishonour: mine adversaries are all before thee.
20 Reproach hath broken my heart; and I am full of heaviness: and I looked for some to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none.
21 They gave me also gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.
22 Let their table become a snare before them: and that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap.
23 Let their eyes be darkened, that they see not; and make their loins continually to shake.
24 Pour out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.
25 Let their habitation be desolate; and let none dwell in their tents.
26 For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded.
27 Add iniquity unto their iniquity: and let them not come into thy righteousness.
28 Let them be blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous.
29 But I am poor and sorrowful: let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.
30 I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving.
31 This also shall please the LORD better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs.
32 The humble shall see this, and be glad: and your heart shall live that seek God.
33 For the LORD heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners.
34 Let the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that moveth therein.
35 For God will save Zion, and will build the cities of Judah: that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.
36 The seed also of his servants shall inherit it: and they that love his name shall dwell therein.

PSALM 70.

1 He prayeth for speedy help.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, to bring to remembrance.

1 Make haste, O God, to deliver me; make haste to help me, O LORD.
2 Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul: let them be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.
3 Let them be turned back for a reward of their shame that say, Aha, aha.
4 Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.
5 But I am poor and needy: make haste unto me, O God: thou art my help and my deliverer; O LORD, make no tarrying.

PSALM 71.

1 He prayeth for help. 5 He setteth forth his hope. 9 He prayeth for help against his enemies. 14 He setteth forth his confidence. 17 He setteth forth God's mercies. 22 He promiseth to praise God.

1 In thee, O LORD, do I put my trust: let me never be put to confusion.
2 Deliver me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape: incline thine ear unto me, and save me.
3 Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort: thou hast given commandment to save me; for thou art my rock and my fortress.
4 Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.
5 For thou art my hope, O Lord GOD: thou art my trust from my youth.
6 By thee have I been holden up from the womb: thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels: my praise shall be continually of thee.
7 I am as a wonder unto many; but thou art my strong refuge.
8 Let my mouth be filled with thy praise and with thy honour all the day.
9 Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth.
10 For mine enemies speak against me; and they that lay wait for my soul take counsel together,
11 Saying, God hath forsaken him: persecute and take him; for there is none to deliver him.
12 O God, be not far from me: O my God, make haste for my help.
13 Let them be confounded and consumed that are adversaries to my soul: let them be covered with reproach and dishonour that seek my hurt.
14 But I will hope continually, and will yet praise thee more and more.
15 My mouth shall show forth thy righteousness and thy salvation all the day; for I know not the numbers thereof.
16 I will go in the strength of the Lord GOD: I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only.
17 O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.
18 Now also when I am old and grayheaded, O God, forsake me not; until I have showed thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come.
19 Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: O God, who is like unto thee!
20 Thou, which hast showed me great and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.
21 Thou shalt increase my greatness, and comfort me on every side.
22 Also I will praise thee with the psaltery, even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the harp, O thou Holy One of Israel.
23 My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and my soul, which thou hast redeemed.
24 My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: for they are confounded, for they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.

PSALM 72.

1 He prayeth for the prosperity of the kingdom of Christ. 18 He blesseth God.
A Psalm for Solomon.

1 Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son.
2 He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment.
3 The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteousness.
4 He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor.
5 They shall fear thee as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations.
6 He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth.
7 In his days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth.
8 He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.
9 They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust.
10 The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents: the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts.
11 Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him.
12 For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper.
13 He shall spare the poor and needy, and shall save the souls of the needy.
14 He shall redeem their soul from deceit and violence: and precious shall their blood be in his sight.
15 And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Sheba: prayer also shall be made for him continually; and daily shall he be praised.
16 There shall be a handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof shall shake like Lebanon: and they of the city shall flourish like grass of the earth.
17 His name shall endure for ever: his name is continued as long as the sun: and men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed.
18 Blessed be the LORD God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things.
19 And blessed be his glorious name for ever: and let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and Amen.
20 The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended.

PSALM 73.

1 He complaineth of the prosperity of the wicked. 13 He setteth forth the vanity of his thoughts. 17 He setteth forth the end of the wicked. 23 He setteth forth God's mercies. 27 He setteth forth the end of the wicked. 28 He setteth forth his confidence.
A Psalm of Asaph.

1 Truly God is good to Israel, even to such as are of a clean heart.
2 But as for me, my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped.
3 For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.
4 For there are no bands in their death: but their strength is firm.
5 They are not in trouble as other men; neither are they plagued like other men.
6 Therefore pride compasseth them as a chain; violence covereth them as a garment.
7 Their eyes stand out with fatness: they have more than heart could wish.
8 They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: they speak loftily.
9 They set their mouth against the heavens, and their tongue walketh through the earth.
10 Therefore his people return hither: and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them.
11 And they say, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?
12 Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches.
13 Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency.
14 For all the day long have I been plagued, and chastened every morning.
15 If I say, I will speak thus; behold, I should offend against the generation of thy children.
16 When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me;
17 Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end.
18 Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castedst them down into destruction.
19 How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors.
20 As a dream when one awaketh; so, O Lord, when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image.
21 Thus my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins.
22 So foolish was I, and ignorant: I was as a beast before thee.
23 Nevertheless I am continually with thee: thou hast holden me by my right hand.
24 Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory.
25 Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee.
26 My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever.
27 For, lo, they that are far from thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them that go a whoring from thee.
28 But it is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my trust in the Lord GOD, that I may declare all thy works.

PSALM 74.

1 He complaineth of the desolations of the sanctuary. 12 He setteth forth God's power. 18 He prayeth for help against his enemies.
Maschil of Asaph.

1 O God, why hast thou cast us off for ever? why doth thine anger smoke against the sheep of thy pasture?
2 Remember thy congregation, which thou hast purchased of old, the rod of thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed; this mount Zion, wherein thou hast dwelt.
3 Lift up thy feet unto the perpetual desolations; even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.
4 Thine enemies roar in the midst of thy congregations; they set up their ensigns for signs.
5 A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees.
6 But now they break down the carved work thereof at once with axes and hammers.
7 They have cast fire into thy sanctuary, they have defiled by casting down the dwelling place of thy name to the ground.
8 They said in their hearts, Let us destroy them together: they have burned up all the synagogues of God in the land.
9 We see not our signs: there is no more any prophet: neither is there among us any that knoweth how long.
10 O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?
11 Why withdrawest thou thy hand, even thy right hand? pluck it out of thy bosom.
12 For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth.
13 Thou didst divide the sea by thy strength: thou brakest the heads of the dragons in the waters.
14 Thou brakest the heads of leviathan in pieces, and gavest him to be meat to the people inhabiting the wilderness.
15 Thou didst cleave the fountain and the flood: thou driedst up mighty rivers.
16 The day is thine, the night also is thine: thou hast prepared the light and the sun.
17 Thou hast set all the borders of the earth: thou hast made summer and winter.
18 Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD, and that the foolish people have blasphemed thy name.
19 O deliver not the soul of thy turtledove unto the multitude of the wicked: forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever.
20 Have respect unto the covenant: for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty.
21 O let not the oppressed return ashamed: let the poor and needy praise thy name.
22 Arise, O God, plead thine own cause: remember how the foolish man reproacheth thee daily.
23 Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the tumult of those that rise up against thee increaseth continually.

PSALM 75.

1 He giveth thanks for God's judgments. 6 He setteth forth God's power. 10 He promiseth to praise God.
To the chief Musician, Al-taschith, A Psalm or Song of Asaph.

1 Unto thee, O God, do we give thanks, unto thee do we give thanks: for that thy name is near thy wondrous works declare.
2 When I shall receive the congregation I will judge uprightly.
3 The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved: I bear up the pillars of it. Selah.
4 I said unto the fools, Deal not foolishly: and to the wicked, Lift not up the horn:
5 Lift not up your horn on high: speak not with a stiff neck.
6 For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south.
7 But God is the judge: he putteth down one, and setteth up another.
8 For in the hand of the LORD there is a cup, and the wine is red; it is full of mixture; and he poureth out of the same: but the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them.
9 But I will declare for ever; I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.
10 All the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSALM 76.

1 He setteth forth God's glory. 4 He setteth forth his power. 11 He exhorteth to praise God.
To the chief Musician on Neginoth, A Psalm or Song of Asaph.

1 In Judah is God known: his name is great in Israel.
2 In Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion.
3 There brake he the arrows of the bow, the shield, and the sword, and the battle. Selah.
4 Thou art more glorious and excellent than the mountains of prey.
5 The stouthearted are spoiled, they have slept their sleep: and none of the men of might have found their hands.
6 At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horse are cast into a dead sleep.
7 Thou, even thou, art to be feared: and who may stand in thy sight when once thou art angry?
8 Thou didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven; the earth feared, and was still,
9 When God arose to judgment, to save all the meek of the earth. Selah.
10 Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain.
11 Vow, and pay unto the LORD your God: let all that be round about him bring presents unto him that ought to be feared.
12 He shall cut off the spirit of princes: he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM 77.

1 He setteth forth his trouble of mind. 4 He complaineth of his grief. 7 He setteth forth the former loving kindness of God. 10 He setteth forth the former works of God. 16 He setteth forth God's power.
To the chief Musician, to Jeduthun, A Psalm of Asaph.

1 I cried unto God with my voice, even unto God with my voice; and he gave ear unto me.
2 In the day of my trouble I sought the Lord: my sore ran in the night, and ceased not: my soul refused to be comforted.
3 I remembered God, and was troubled: I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah.
4 Thou holdest mine eyes waking: I am so troubled that I cannot speak.
5 I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times.
6 I call to remembrance my song in the night: I commune with mine own heart: and my spirit made diligent search.
7 Will the Lord cast off for ever? and will he be favourable no more?
8 Is his mercy clean gone for ever? doth his promise fail for evermore?
9 Hath God forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger shut up his tender mercies? Selah.
10 And I said, This is my infirmity: but I will remember the years of the right hand of the most High.
11 I will remember the works of the LORD: surely I will remember thy wonders of old.
12 I will meditate also of all thy work, and talk of thy doings.
13 Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary: who is so great a God as our God?
14 Thou art the God that doest wonders: thou hast declared thy strength among the people.
15 Thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.
16 The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee; they were afraid: the depths also were troubled.
17 The clouds poured out water: the skies sent out a sound

CONSTANCE AND ITS MEMORIES.

BY T. W. LINGLE.

Like so many other places in Europe, the ancient town of Constance (or Konstong as it is spelled by the inhabitants) is known to the world to-day principally because of a single event in its history. It probably dates its existence from the third century, but first comes into prominence in the eighth, when it became the seat of a bishopric which numbered 87 bishops in succession, until it was secularized in the year 1827. Constance was a free city of the Empire until 1548 when it was presented by Emperor Sigismund to his brother Archduke Ferdinand of Austria, to whose successors it remained until 1805 when it was acquired by the Grandduchy of Baden, and it now lies within the German Empire.

It is at present a town of 18,000 inhabitants, distinctly German in nearly every respect. As one crosses a little stream and steps out of Switzerland into Germany, he is at once hailed by a custom-house officer to learn if he has any dutiable articles with him. On the streets the soldiers appear very numerous, after becoming accustomed to Swiss towns. The merchants say that Constance naturally should belong to Switzerland, and believe that its trade would be much larger if it did, as it is separated from Germany by the Rhine and Lake Constance (called Bodensee by the natives). Besides good railroad connections, steamers ply regularly several times daily between Constance and Schaffhausen, the scene of the falls of the Rhine, the most important waterfall of Europe. Lake Constance is practically alive with vessels plying between towns of Switzerland, Germany and Austria, situated on its shores, and its traffic is by far the most important of that of any of the European lakes. Around its borders rise no majestic peaks like the Pilatees and the Rigi which overlook Lucerne, but the very moderation in the surrounding scenery, and the graceful slopes of the fertile hills give it an enchantment scarcely second to that of Geneva, the queen of the Swiss lakes.

Just as hundreds of other places, Constance has its cathedral overlooking the town, dating from the early middle ages, as well as other handsome churches, both Catholic and Protestant. There are many buildings of mediæval origin in the old part of the town, interesting alike for the antiquary and the historian. In one of the buildings on the main street is a tablet designating the house in which Emperor Friederick Barbarossa concluded peace with the Lombard cities in 1183. An inevitable conflict had arisen at the middle of the twelfth century between the republicanism of the Lombard cities and German feudalism, in the northern portion of the Empire, which embraced all the territory from Naples to the Baltic. Milan at the head of a confederation of cities, in an attempt to throw off allegiance, had challenged the strength of the Empire under one of its sternest emperors. The struggle was a terrible one, at first resulting in favor of Barbarossa, who caused Milan to be laid in ruins. But forces were re-organized from other points and at the battle of Legnano in 1176 the Emperor was utterly defeated and compelled to acknowledge the independence of the Lombard cities in the peace of Constance.

On the same street near the tower of a remnant of the town wall which spans the street is a more humble-looking house bearing two tablets. The oldest of them contains a verse of mockery written in early German. The other is a more recent one placed there by people of Bohemia, reverently pointing out the house in which their countryman John Huss was ruthlessly seized and carried to another part of the town and cast into prison. Huss had been educated at the University of Prague, the oldest of the universities in which the German tongue is used, in 1398 became a member of the faculty, and a few years later was chosen rector or president by his colleagues. About this time Bethlehem chapel was founded and endowed by zealous citizens of Prague for providing good popular preaching of the Gospel in the Bohemian language. The plan was a singularly successful one. Huss was chosen as the preacher and this led him to the earnest and independent study of the Scriptures and had a deep influence on his already vigorous, religious life. He soon saw the value of the philosophical and theological writings of the Englishman, John Wycliffe, and he and many others in Prague became ardent students of these works. For several years Huss continued in perfect accord with his archbishop, but at last came under suspicion of heresy. The Wycliffe writings were ordered burned, and in 1412 Huss was placed under ban by the pope. The populace became his friends and the clergy his enemies, and the disturbance reached the court of the Bohemian king and of the Emperor Sigismund. The Emperor and Pope John XXIII agreed on an accumenical council to be held in Constance to restore unity in the Church generally and to quell the disturbance in Prague. The presence of Huss was requested, and with a presentiment of the result he put his private affairs in order before he went in October 1414. He was accompanied by the king of Bohemia and a number of powerful friends, and was granted a letter of "safe conduct" by the Emperor. But only a short time after his arrival he was seized and thrown into prison until the following July in a monastery on a small island, now used as a hotel. A commission was appointed by the pope to investigate his heresy. The effort of his enemies was to show his accord with the writings of Wycliffe which had already been condemned, especially with his denial of the doctrine of transubstantiation. Huss was allowed no agent in his defense, and the uproar was so great that he himself could not be heard He repudiated the charge that he had abandoned the Catholic doctrine and at the same time gave expression to hearty admiration and respect for the memory of Wycliffe. When requested to make unqualified submission to the council he said he was unable to do so, but stated his willingness in all humility to amend his teachings where they had been shown to be false. Huss maintained that Christ was the head of the Church, not Peter, and that ultimate appeal must be made to Him. The Emperor Sigismund himself said publicly that if Huss refused to recant, there was no remedy but the stake. But the spirit of the martyr arose within Huss and he showed an undeviating loyalty to conviction and to love for truth that has never been surpassed. His soul was formally consigned by all present to the devil, while he in silent prayer with clasped hands and uplifted eyes reverently committed it to Christ. He was then given over to secular forces and led to the scene of execution, while the council in an unconcerned way went on with its daily routine. After he had been bound and faggots piled around him he was for the last time asked to recant. His reply was, "God knows the great object of all my preaching and writing has been to convert men from sin. In the truth of the Gospel which hitherto I have written, taught and preached, I now joyfully die." His voice uttering a prayer was soon stifled in the smoke. When the flames had finished their work, his ashes and the soil on which they lay were gathered up and cast into the Rhine which flows out of Lake Constance only a short distance away. An immense stone with several inscriptions now marks the scene of the cruel death of one of the bravest of martyrs. Huss left many writings behind, the best known of which is his "De Ecclesia," but the most of them are scarcely more than restatements of the teachings of Wycliffe. It cannot be said that he added an iota to the sum total of human knowledge, and many of his teachings would be held even by Protestants as hardly consistent; but he contributed vastly to the moral wealth of the world. He died in the cause of honesty and freedom and progress towards the light, and was the chief intermediary in handing down the writings of Wycliffe to Luther and thus transforming the "morning star of the Reformation" into a noonday sun.

Just behind the Huss house facing another street is still another building of similar interest, bearing the inscription, "Prison house of Jerome of Prague 1415–16." Jerome had studied at Prague, Heidelberg, Cologne, Paris, and above all at Oxford where he became familiar with Lollardism, as the teachings of Wycliffe were called, and when he became a professor in Prague he soon became a devoted friend of Huss, but a far more brillant and accomplished scholar; just as Melanchthan later became the friend and teacher of Luther, the man of more personality and strength of character. Jerome's learning and sagacity soon became such that he was employed by the king of Poland to build up the Polish universities and by the king of Hungary to preach before his court. At the latter he fell under suspicion of Wycliffe heresy and was compelled to leave. He took refuge in Vienna, but was seized and imprisoned, to be released at the entreaties of his friends in Prague. He became again intimately associated with Huss, and when the latter had been imprisoned in Constance he determined to go of his own accord and do what he could for his friend. The circumstances were so discouraging on his arrival that he at once withdrew. As he was returning to Prague he stopped over night at a village in Bavaria, and while there allowed his feelings to get the mastery of him and he gave expression to his disapproval of the council in Constance in strong language in the presence of clergy. By order of the Bavarian duke he was sent back a prisoner to Constance. There he endured close confinement for months, was brought before the Emperor and council where he recanted publicly, especially in regard to the teachings of Wycliffe and Huss. The hall in which the council sat was in the public mart, and is to-day used as dining-hall by a hotel.

But Jerome's enemies were unwilling to acquit him and brought the charge that there were inconsistencies in his recantations. Three times more he was brought before the council. At the last his timidity left him. In bold, unmistakable language he retracted the recantation wrung from him eight months before. "Of all the sins I have committed since my youth, none weight so heavily on my mind and causes me such keen remorse as that which I committed in this evil place when I approved of the iniquitous sentence given against Wycliffe and against the holy martyr John Huss, my master and friend." He was then condemned as a relapsed heretic. He answered by appealing to the Supreme Judge before whom he and his accusers were alike destined to stand. From this time on his countenance was cheerful, and as he was bound to the stake on the spot where Huss had died a year before, he gave the signal for the lighting of the fire and said, "Had I the least fear I would not be standing here." His ashes also were committed to the Rhine. Thus he atoned most loyally for the one moment in which he recanted, and on the same stone with the name of Huss, the memory of Jerome of Pargue is preserved as that of one of the long list of martyrs who not only died, but also lived and worked for the truth and for freedom in belief and worship.

The same council decreed that the bones of Wycliffe which had been quietly resting in their tomb in Lutterworth in western England for thirty years should be dug up and publicly burned. The order was carried out in 1428, and his ashes committed to the river Severn. But what could priest or bishop, cardinal or pope, do to disgrace the memory of the man who first gave the Bible to the English people in their own tongue, caused the Gospel to be preached in a simple way to the poor throughout his native land, and incidentally became the father of English prose, the greatest of all existing literatures! Wycliffe had written with great mental vigor and originality, but the earliest great harvest of the seed sown was reaped not in England but in Bohemia. John Huss with less originality, but far greater simplicity and spiritual force, raised Wycliffism to the dignity of a national religion. Though the followers of Huss were crushed by long years of war, still his spirit lived, and a hundred years later the time was ripe for the appearance of a Luther.

The town of Constance has many other interesting events connected with its history, but it is destined to live in the memory of coming generations as the scene of this famous illustration of the import of our Lord's warning to his disciples in preparing them for their mission into the world; "Ye shall be brought before councils * * * * and before governors and kings for my sake."

HE KNOWS THE WAY.

"When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then Thou knewest my path," Psalm cxlii: 3,

Giving his own experience in a time of severe trial, when he was feeling in the same condition as the psalmist, a writer in an English magazine relates the following incident. Travelling with his motherless girls, he says; "At one large, busy station, we had to go down a flight of steps, and pass through a dark subway to the other side. I held my little girl by the hand, and as we hurried along to catch the train, she said, nervously and anxiously, 'Where are we going now, papa?' There was no time to explain. I had fast hold of her hand. I knew the way, and said with confidence, 'Come along, my child; it is all right.' As if an angel spoke, I thought I heard a voice from heaven saying to me, in my trouble and distress, 'Come along, My child; it is all right.' My heart responded, 'Yes, it is all right: my Father holds my hand. He is leading me. He knows the way. He doeth all things well. I will trust and not be afraid.'"—Light-Bearer.

"In the shadow." We must all go there sometimes. The glare of the daylight is so brilliant our eyes become injured and unable to discern the delicate shades of color, or appreciate natural tints — the shadowed chamber of sickness; the shadowed house of mourning; the shadowed life from which the sunlight has gone. But fear not!—it is the shadow of God's hand. He is leading thee. There are lessons that can only be learned there. The photograph of His face can only be fixed in the dark chamber. But do not suppose that He has cast thee aside. Thou art still in His quiver; He has not flung thee away as a worthless thing. He is only keeping thee close till the moment comes when He can send thee most swiftly and surely on some errand in which He will be glorified. Oh, shadowed solitary ones, remember how closely the quiver is bound to the warrior, within easy reach of the hand, and guarded jealously!—Rev. B. F. Meyer.

The resurrection is the principl of all human growth and achievement. We are always dying and being born again into better and larger spheres; always failing that we may succeed, submitting that we may conquer. Every living life is a continuous resurrection.—Professor Herron.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Boswell's incomparable Life of Johnson is about to be reissued under the editorship of Percy Fitzgerald. The new edition will be published complete in one volume, royal octavo, double column, printed from a new font of type especially cast for it. A unique feature will be a biographical dictionary of every person mentioned in the book, a feature that every lover of the classic will be thankful for. Mr. Thomas Whitaker will have the volume ready about September 1st.

In Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for September will appear a timely article on The Objects and Results of Polar Research, by George Gerland. A brief history of the numerous expeditions from that of Pytheas of Marsellis down to Nansen's, is followed by a consideration of what may be hoped from these regions in the future.

Mrs. Elizabeth Phœbe Howard, daughter of Francis Scott of Kentucky, died last week at her summer home at Oakland, Md., in her 93d year. Mrs. Howard's early education was of a literary character and much of her schooling was obtained from her illustrious father. Mrs. Howard, as well as her husband, Chas. Howard, was a strong Southern sympathizer, and the success of the great charity bazaar held in Baltimore at which $150,000 was raised was due greatly to her influence. Up to the time of Mrs. Howard's death she wrote literary articles and biographical descriptions of her father.

A recently published statistical survey of the university libraries of Europe shows that Germany takes the lead in this respect. The twenty universities of the Fatherland have a total of 5,850,000 volumes in their libraries. This is three millions more than the libraries of Italy which country is the second on the list. Great Britain, Austro-Hungary, and Russia, have each more than 1,800,000 volumes in their university collections, while Sweden and Norway have 790,000 each, and Spain 726,000. It is remarkable that, of the eight European countries included in this list, France, while having a larger number of university libraries than the other countries except Germany and Italy—namely sixteen—has the smallest total of volumes—namely, 692,200; and that Great Britain, which has only nine university libraries, with a total of 1,849,600 volumes, has of these, in the two universities of Oxford and Cambridge alone, more than one million volumes. In this connection, it must be remembered that the great public collections of books, such as the British Museum in London and the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris, the largest libraries in the world, more than make up for the minus of the university libraries. The four largest university libraries in the world are Strassburg, with 704,076 volumes; Leipsic, with 504,683; Oxford, with 530,000; and Cambridge, with 506,500. The libraries at Gottingen, Heidelberg, Munich, Vienna, and St. Petersburg, have each more than 400,000 volumes.—Sunday School Times.

A careful inspection of our school, the James Sprunt Institute, located in Kenansville impressed the Presbytery very favorably.

The people of Kenansville were unbounded in their kindness and hospitality, so much so that we wish to return soon to the same place.

ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES AT SWANNANOA CHURCH ASHEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

The oldest Presbyterian church west of the Blue Ridge in North Carolina is situated in the valley of the Swannanoa river ten miles east of Asheville The building in which the congregation now worship is the third erected since the foundation of the church. The second of these edifices was dedicated on the 8th day of September, 1839, by the Rev. Dr. James McRee This event is recorded in a quaint old tablet which hangs in a black wooden frame, fourteen by twenty inches, on the wall behind the pulpit:

Long may this building be sustained
A Temple for the God of Love:
And children's children here be trained
For glory in the world above.

Minister, take heed how you preach.
People, take heed how you hear.

Dedicated on the eighth of September, 1839, By the Rev. James McRee, D.D., in the 86th year of his age.

"How dreadful is this place." "Keep thy feet (be serious, be devout,) when thou comest into the House of God."

Dr. McRee is buried in the graveyard a few yards north of the church, but no stone has ever been erected to mark the spot, though the majority of the people living in this little valley are his descendants.

Rev. R. P. Smith, evangelist of Mecklenburg and Asheville Presbyteries, while recently holding a series of services in this field conceived the idea of gathering together the McRee descendants on the fifty-eighth anniversary of the dedication of the church by their ancestor, and of making this the occasion for raising funds to erect a suitable monument at his grave.

A committee of arrangements was at once appointed, and Rev. R. Z. Johnston of Lincolnton and Rev. R.F. Campbell of Asheville were invited to prepare addresses.

Dr. Johnston spoke most interestingly and instructively on the Influence of Presbyterianism on the Lives of the People. Mr. Campbell read a sketch of Dr. McRee.

After the services in the church, which was crowded to its utmost capacity, the congregation gathered around the grave of Dr. McRee, where they sang the long metre doxology and were led in prayer by Rev. E. A. Sample of Hendersonville. Besides the ministers already mentioned there were present H. M. Parker of Inanda, Rev. S. C. Caldwell of Tallahassee, Fla., and Rev. Mr. Fox of the Northern Presbyterian church. A bountiful dinner was served on the grounds. Subscription papers were circulated after dinner and a sufficient amount was raised to erect a substantial monument to the memory of Dr. McRee.

The influence of this re-union and celebration will be felt for a long time in the congregation of Swannanoa church.

[Next week our readers will have the pleasure of reading the admirable sketch of Dr. James McRee, referred to above We wish we could often have the opportunity of publishing sketches of these old fathers of our Synod.]

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions met in regular session in the Secretary's office, Nashville, Tenn., Tuesday morning, Sept. 14th.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Dr. M. H. Houston from China.

Minutes of the August meeting were on motion approved; and the actions of the Directing Committee since the August meeting were also approved. Estimates for the Northern Brazil Mission 1898, were referred to the sub-committee on mission estimates.

The following was on motion adopted: "The Committee has learned with sorrow of the sad bereavement and heavy loss sustained by our faithful treasurer, Mr. Erskine Reed, in the death of his eldest daughter, Miss Daisy Reed. Falling as this shadow does upon a home so recently saddened by the death of our brother's beloved wife, this additional sorrow is all the more distressing, and calls forth our deep and profound sympathy. We commend our brother and his stricken household afresh to the loving, sustaining strength and consolation of Him who says to all His heart weary children, 'I will not leave you comfortless.'"

Rev. D. W. Snyder, of the Congo Mission, was present on invitation, and spoke of the work in his mission, and in the Congo Independent State. His present expectation is to return to his field in October, sailing from New York on the 6th of that month. He was released from further work in this country; and the grateful appreciation of the Committe expressed to him for his faithful services.

On account of reported failing health Mrs. W. H. Sheppard was granted permission to come home on furlough at any time soon, if the Congo Mission deems it advisable. She is highly commended as a valuable worker.

Several matters connected with the Brazil Missions were deferred until the next meeting, for further information.

Dr. M. H. Houston reported his work in Lingwu District, China, mentioning more than sixty additions to the church during his stay in that field; and two additional houses of worship.

A letter from Lavras, Southern Brazil, dated Aug. 17th reported all well at that station. Information was also received that the Theological Seminary of the Synod of Brazil had been definitely located at Sao Paulo.

Action in the case of Dr. M. H. Houston was postponed until the next meeting, pending the decision of his Presbytery.

The Committee was informed of Dr. Henry M. Woods' proposed departure for his field; his plan having been to sail from Vancouver for China on Sept. 15th.

Ordered that the judgment of the Japan Mission be asked, as to what doctrines the native preachers shall be required to subscribe to before they are paid with funds from the mission treasury; this action being taken because of complaints received as to the support of native preachers of unsound doctrinal views.

The arrival in this country of Rev. C. K. Cumming, of the Japan Mission, was reported, he having reached home, on furlough, with Mrs. Cumming, Aug. 23rd.

Miss Mary S. Matthews, of Bane, Giles county, Va., was appointed a missionary, and requested to prepare as soon as practicable to take up school work in Hangchow.

Mrs. J. L. Stuart, of the China Mission was present and made a brief appeal in the interest of mission work in her field.

Rev. A. L. Phillips. D. D., Secretary of Colored Evangelization, addressed the Committee on matters connected with his work.

The Publication Committee recommended that the Prayer Calender for 1898, be published; suggested that 1,000 copies be ordered first, and the matter stereotyped, so as to lessen expense of future orders in case more are needed. The report was adopted,

A letter to Rev. S. P. Verner of the Congo Mission, was adopted, giving instructions, etc., and approving the opening of Dombe station.

The arrival of Rev. S. H. Chester, D. D., Secretary, at Yokohama, Japan, on August 25th was reported.

Rev. J. W. Bachman, D. D., was requested to attend the Synod of Virginia; and Rev. G. W. Patterson the Synod of Mississippi.

Letters docketed for consideration at this meeting reported six additions to the church in Luebo, Africa; need of a physician at that point; progress in the work of the Korea mission; dark State of Brazil spiritually, etc.

On motion the Committee adjourned, closing with prayer by Rev. J. L. Stuart, of the China Mission.

The death of Hon. Walter E. Faison which occurred on Wednesday morning, removes from us one who was universally respected for his nobleness of character, admired for the solidity and brilliancy of his attainments and beloved for modesty of demenor, gentleness of disposition, and kindliness of heart.

ABSTRACT FROM THE PROCEEDINGS OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY IN ITS TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY FIFTH SESSION.

(OFFICIAL.)

The Presbytery of Orange met at Bethlehem church in Orange county on Tuesday, Sept. 7th, 1897. Bethlehem church is located ten miles south of Mebane, at Oak's P. O., on a public highway in a magnificent grove of hickory trees. It is near the site of the old Bingham school which did so much for the country in the long ago. This is an old church, but a regular stated meeting of Presbytery had never met there until last week, and it was a delightful occasion both to the Presbytery and the people. The church has recently been thoroughly repaired and painted and presents a neat and beautiful appearance in the splendid grove of trees. The weather was perfect and the congregations were immense. People came from far and near and remained on the grounds all day and until a late hour at night. Seven sermons were preached during the meeting, and also a most delightful lecture was heard from Rev. Dr. Turnbull on his recent travels in Palestine. Besides, a Sunday-school Convention was held on the second day which was both instructive and edifying; the program was fully carried out. The hospitality and kindness of the good people of Bethlehem were unbounded. Good cheer, good will, and perfect harmony prevailed —it was indeed a delightful meeting.

In the absence of the retiring moderator, Rev. C. W. Robinson, the opening sermon was preached by Rev. S. O. Hall on the text—"Honor all men." 1 Peter 2 : 17.

Rev. H. S. Bradshaw was elected moderator and Rev. J. McL. Seabrook and Elder D. F. Morrow temporary clerks.

Seventeen ministers and sixteen ruling elders were present. Seven ministers were absent and forty churches were not represented.

Rev. E. C. Murray, D. D., was received from Enoree Presbytery and calls from Mebane, Bethlehem and Saxapahaw churches were placed in his hands and accepted by him, and on Thursday evening, during the meeting of Presbytery, he was installed pastor at Bethlehem, and a like service was appointed for the other churches at an early day.

Three young men, all of whom were licentiates of Orange Presbytery, were examined and ordained at this meeting—Messrs. E. E. Gillespie, J. Paisley and S. H. Williamson. Messrs. Gillespie and Williamson were ordained as evangelists, and the full powers of an evangelist were granted to Mr. Gillespie who has charge of work in Ashe and Wilkes counties. To Mr. Williamson was granted the care of the Caswell field, including the churches of Yanceyville, Bethesda and Stony Creek. A call from the Madison church for the pastoral services of Mr. Paisley for one-half his time was placed in his hands and accepted, and order was taken for his installation at Madison on the 21st of this month.

The Rev. W. K. Forsyth of Transylvania Presbytery declined the call of Presbytery to the Stokes county field.

Committees reported the installation of Rev. M. W. Doggett, D. D., at Burlington on June 12th, 1897, and the installation of Rev. Joseph Evans at Milton on June 17th, 1897.

The Special Committee to visit Eno church made a most encouraging report. The church was revived and strengthened, and has decided to build again, not on the old site, but at Cedar Grove.

A most gratifying letter was received from Rev. J. Henry Smith; D. D., stating that his health was much improved and that he was again able to preach. Dr. Smith declined a re-election as trustee of Davidson College, his time having expired. And the Rev. E. W. Smith, D. D., was elected for the full term of five years to succeed his father.

The Permanent Grouping Committee, by a two-thirds vote, was abolished, and the work committed to it transferred to the Committee on Home Missions.

Rev. C. W. Robinson was granted the full powers of an evangelist in the Wilkesboro congregation, there being no session and no immediate material to form one.

Rev. P. C. Morton was dismissed at his own request to unite with Wilmington Presbytery.

The reports of the Executive Committees were for the most part encouraging.

The Home Mission Committee have their work well in hand and the outlook is encouraging. The debt of $412, under which we felt oppressed last spring, has been paid off and the committee received a special vote of thanks for their efficient and successful labors. It is recommended that individual churches or groups of churches undertake the support of particular Home Mission fields.

The report of the Committee on Education shows seventeen candidates under our care, all of whom are in schools and colleges or engaged in legitimate work. The report shows good conduct of all and progress being made.

The Committee on Colored Evangelization made no formal report, but on the strength of a letter from Rev. S. G. Walker and at his earnest request, his resignation as Colored Evangelist was accepted and his time will be devoted to the school at Wilkesboro.

Rev. B. B. Palmer was heard in the interest of his work in Caswell. He reports a new church building completed and the work growing.

A petition, signed by four persons in the town of Burlington, asking for the organization of a colored church there, was referred to the Burlington church session for investigation and to report at a future meeting.

On the recommendation of the Durham church session, the following overture was adopted and ordered to be sent to the next General Assembly—as follows:

"To prepare and to send down a pastoral letter to the churches, calling the attention to the importance and to the benefits of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, urging our ministers to instruct their congregations upon the duty and the privilege of coming to the Lord's Table, and recommending our churches to observe the Sacrament often, leaving it to the session of each church to decide how frequently it will be convenient and profitable for their people to keep the communion."

Durham was chosen as the place for the next meeting, on the second Tuesday of April, 1898, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Stated Clerk.

WHAT BOYS ARE FOR.

Some time ago a gentleman, in addressing a company of boys, said, "Can any one of you tell me what a boy is good for?" One of them put up his hand. Said the speaker, "What is it?" The boy replied, "A boy is a good thing to make a man of."

Very true! But what sort of a man? If the man is to be worth anything, the boy must be good to begin with. The world's most famous men have usually shown in their youth that there was good material in them, out of which brave, and useful; and honorable, and clever men might be made.

A Swedish boy fell out of a window and was severely hurt, but with clinched lips he kept back the cry of pain. King Gustavus Adolphus, who saw the fall, prophesied that that boy would make a man for an emergency; and so he did, for he became the famous General Bauer.

A woman fell off a dock in Italy. Sh was fat and frightened. No one of the crowd of men dared to jump in after her; but a boy struck the water almost as soon as she, and managed to keep her up until stronger arms got hold of her. Everybody said the boy was very daring, very kind, very quick, but also very reckless, for he might have been drowned. The boy was Garibaldi, and if you will read his life you will find these were just his traits all through—he was so alert that nobody could tell when he would make an attack with his red-shirted soldiers; so indiscreet sometimes as to make his fellow-patriots wish he was in Guinea; but also so brave and magnanimous that all the world, except tyrants, loved to hear and talk about him.

A boy used to crush flowers to get their color, and painted the white side of his father's cottage in the Tyrol with all sorts of pictures, which the mountaineers gazed at as wonderful. He was the great artist Titian.

An old painter watched a little fellow who amused himself with making drawings of his pot and brushes, easel and stool, and said, "That boy will beat me some day." So he did, for he was Michael Angelo.

A German boy was reading a highly sensational novel. Right in the midst of it he said to himself, "Come, this will never do. I get too much excited over it; I can't study so well after it. So here goes!" and he flung the book out into the river. He was Fichte, the great German philosopher.

Now, the boys who are reading these words to-day will, if God spare their live, be men thirty years hence. What sort of men are they going to be? That depends very largely on the kind of boys they are to-day. Boys, now you are forming the characters that you will have to carry with you through life. Possibly none of you may every become future Garibaldis or modern Michael Angelos; but it ought to be the ambition of every single one of you to grow to an honest, brave, true manhood; and you cannot better prepare for such a manhood as that than by being true, and brave, and honorable while you are boys. — Southern Churchman.

DEBT.

When I was a very small boy, in pinafores, and went to a woman's school, it so happened that I wanted a stick of slate pencil, and had no money to by it with. I was afraid of being scolded for losing my pencils so often, for I was a real careless little fellow, and so did not dare to ask at home; what, then, was John to do? There was a little shop in the place, where nuts and tops and cakes and balls were sold by old Mrs. Dearson, and sometimes I had seen boys and girls get trusted by the old lady. I argued with myself that Christmas was coming, and that sombody or other would be sure to give me a penny then, and perhaps even a whole silver sixpence. I would, therefore, go into debt for a stick of slate pencil, and be sure to pay Christmas. I did not feel easy about it, but still I screwed my courage up, and went into the shop One farthing was the amount, and as I had never owed anything before, and my credit was good, the pencil was handed over by the kind dame, and I was in debt. It did not please me much, and I felt as if I had done wrong, but I little knew how soon I should smart for it. How my father came to hear of this little stroke of business I never knew, but some little bird or other whistled it to him, and he was very soon down upon me in right earnest. God bless him for it; he was a sensible man, and none of your children spoilers; he did not intend to bring up his children to speculate and play at what big rogues call financing, and, therefore he knocked my geting into debt on the head at once, and no mistake. He gave me a very powerful lecture upon getting into debt, and how like it was to stealing, and upon the way in which people were ruined by it; and how a boy who would owe a farthing might one day owe a hundred pounds, and get into prison, and bring his family into disgrace. It was a lecture, indeed; I think I can hear it now, and can feel my ears tingling at the recollection of it. Then I was off to the shop, like a deserter marched into barracks, crying bitterly all down the street, and feeling dreadfully ashamed because I thought everybody knew I was in debt. The farthing was paid, amid many solemn warnings, and the poor debtor was set free, like a bird let out of a cage. How sweet it felt to be out of debt.—Spurgeon.

It is the duty of all to cultivate a spirit of graciousness, to remember their friends in graceful ways. It is their duty to cultivate the kindly manner, which is the outward expression of the kindly heart. It is the manner in which the deed is done more than the deed that soothes the neglected one and brings her back to hope, which is life. There are cruel wrongs done every day, not by evil intention, but by actions that had the best intention. The rough diamond is a very disagreeable-looking stone, and the individual represented by this type is equally objectionable in these modern days, when quality is more sought for than quantity in all work, and gentleness and refinement more than gross forces.—Selected.

Sabbath School Dep't.

CONDUCTED BY REV. A. D. McCLURE.

Third Quarter—Lesson XIV.

Oct. 3d, 1897.—Acts xxi: 1-15.

Commit to memeory verses 12-14.

Subject.—Paul's Last Journey to Jerusalem.

Golden Text. "I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts xxi: 13.

CATECHISM.

Question 60. How is the Sabbath to be sanctified?

Answer. The Sabbath is to be sanctified by a holy resting all that day, even from such worldly employments and recreations as are lawful on other days; and spending the whole time in the public and private exercises of God's worship, except so much as is to be taken up in the works of necessity and mercy.

Time. A. D. 58.

Place. From Miletus to Jerusalem.

INTRODUCTORY.

Paul has now come to the close of his third missionary journey and is on his return to Jerusalem. This is accomplished in a sea voyage to Cesarea and by land to Jerusalem. Paul is now fifty six years of age. Nero is Emperor at Rome. Felix is Governor of Judea. A careful student fixes the dates of travel and the itinerary from Monday, April 4th, A. D. 58 to Wednesday, May 17th. This can be done, as Paul reached Jerusalem at Pentecost which fell on the last named date that year. During the week and in the study of the lesson a map will be helpful and it will be both interesting and profitable to search out whatever of interest attaches to the principal places. There will be abundant material in spiritual instruction to occupy the teacher with the class in showing sympathy with God's workmen, interest in the work of women in the Church and the duty of faithfulness in the face of obstacles.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. Gotten from them. "Having torn ourselves away" from the elders of the Church at Ephesus who had met Paul at Miletus as we studied in the last lesson of the third quarter. We, the personal pronoun of the first person shows that the writer of the Acts is one of the party now consisting of Luke (the writer of the Acts) Trophimus (Vs. 29) and Aristarchus (xxvii; 2). Timothy to whom was entrusted the care of the church at Ephesus went back with the elders to that city. Coos: An island about forty miles south of Mileteus and especially interesting to Luke as the birth-place of Hippocrates and had a school of medicine connected with Esculapius. Rhodes. An island and a city fifty miles south of Coos, has always been an emporium for the Eastern and Western travels. Patura. A seaport of Lydia.

Vs. 2. Phenicia. A part of Syria along the north coast of Palestine, whose chief cities were Tyre and Sidon. They went aboard. As more precious freight and with a cargo of the Gospel far more valuable than the purple of Tyre or the spices of Arabia.

Vs. 3 Discovered. Came in sight of Cyprus. The term used is nautical. The accuracy of Luke in his use of terms and references to places has been shown conclusively. Paul would think here of Elymas the sorcerer, and of Sergius Paulus and also of Barnabas whose home had been upon the island. Here is material for much spiritual meditation. Tyre. Means rock. It was a great commercial city whose glory had long before ceased according to the prophecies of God's word. The name Hiram king of Tyre, of Alexander the Great and many prophets are suggested. Ahab married a daughter of the king of Tyre.

Vs. 4. Finding. After search the members of a little Christian church perhaps organized when the disciples were scattered abroad after the stoning of Stephen. Tarried there. While the ship was unloading and taking on a new cargo. This peculiar period of time mentioned before at Troas, xx: 6, and afterward at Puteoli xxviii: 14, seems to indicate that Paul arranged to be at Troas, Puteoli and Tyre over the Sabbath to meet with fellow Christians in worship. These said to Paul that of the Spirit they knew afflictions awaited Paul in Jerusalem. But this did not deter the intrepid apostle from doing his duty.

Vs. 5. All with wives and children. The first time that children of Christian parents are distinctly mentioned, though plainly implied elewhere in the baptism of households. Kneeling down on the bench we prayed: Is one of the most tender and melting scenes of Scripture. It was an outdoor prayer-meeting. We may be too formal for that. Does it show less of spirituality? At any rate, these prayers at parting for journeys ought to be had by all Christians, as in all cases of commending one another to God.

Vs. 7. Ptolemais. One of the oldest and most famous of cities. Saluted the brethren. Show disciples in many cities and indicating how rapidly and widely the doctrines of Christianity had been spread.

Vs. 8. Came unto Cesarea. By land from Ptolemais. Philip. One of the seven deacons with Stephen. The evangelist. A home missionary.

Vs. 9. Four daughters . . . did prophesy. As Peter said at Pentecost according to the prophecy of Joel. This was not merely as virgins, nor yet as ordained. For we find no trace of any order of virgins in the early church. and Paul forbids by inspiration the ordination of women to office in the Church. They may testify and teach with covered heads and in shamefacedness and sobriety as God allows. There ought to be more meetings of women for prayer and the study of the Scriptures and to testify for Christ.

Vs. 10. Agabus, who foretold the famine to come in the days of Claudius Cæsar. (Acts xi: 28)

Vs. 11. Thus saith the Holy Ghost. As in the Old Testament, "Thus saith the Lord," showing the dispensation of the Spirit. The remaining verses are very wonderful in consecration and courage, in pathos and power. The will of the Lord be done.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. In going from place to place, like the apostle, Christians should not wait to be found out, but to seek out and find fellowship with any Christians where we may stop.

2. Praying together makes a great union of hearts and is a great comfort at parting while claiming God's care.

3 Children are welcome and important in the church. "Convert an adult and you have a unit; convert a child you have a multiplication table." Peloubet.

Saturday, "Not As I Will," Matt. 26 36-46.

Saturday, Topic, How to Make God's Will Our Will, And The Result, Phil. 2: 1-13.

Notes:

Let us note first that God's will and man's will are by nature at total variance. God is infinitely pure and holy; man is totally depraved—born in sin and at all times sinfully inclined—loving darkness rather than light. How then can these wills be reconciled and harmonized to make God's will man's? This is the question of questions, for without reconciliation man's estate is simply eternal ruin. The difficulties involved are insuperable to any power of man. There is first an overpowering disinclination. The selfishness inherent in nature disposes to do only that which seemingly accords with man's interest whether it be in either pleasure or profit—this aside even from the natural aversion to good which has been referred to. God's will by reason of the perfection of His nature often crosses man's wishes or desires in points that incite to defiance and rebellion. Again from the perversity of nature and the insidious wiles of the arch adversary, even those arrayed on the Lord's side are beset with doubts and difficulties in determining what is the will of God, when selfish interests come into the competition between the wills of God and man. So that under the stress of the temptation even the saintliest need to look to a strength infinitely beyond their own. Yet this harmony of wills must be accomplished. Men must be reconciled to God, and how shall that so utterly beyond man's power be brought about. How shall this unconditional surrender of man to God be accomplished so that man may be able to say, as Christ at Gethsemane, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt."

The result can be accomplished only by the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, applied and operated by the Holy Spirit. God out of Christ is a consuming fire, but God in Christ reconciles the world to Himself; brings man's will in conformity to His will and enlists all powers of mind and heart and soul in the promotion of His glory, by ready and hearty obedience to His commands.

The first result of this harmonizing of the wills by bringing the Divine and human into conformity is the salvation of the human soul. For it is the will of God that all men should be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth—not only the individual man, but all men and to this end it is God's will that every saved person should in his way be a missionary to the end of bringing others to a surrendering of their unsanctified wills to the will of God. None are exempt: The parent, the child, the employer and the employed, all in their several places and relations under the circumstances with which God surrounds them are called to this duty.

But the will of God is your sanctification. Progress onward and upward in the Christian life—the whole man renewed in the image of God and enabled more and more to die unto sin and live unto righteousness.

WEEK OF PRAYER, AND FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Assembly's Committee of Foreign Missions, to the Churches:

Grace to you, and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

We bring you a message of good cheer. While banks have been breaking, and business houses failing, and the life of commerce has been flowing with sluggish current through all the channels of trade, we have been enabled, through the noble, self-denying contributions of the churches, to do more for the glory of our Master in the foreign field than ever before. Last year was the best in the history of our work. The tide of prosperity is still rising. Up to the present date the receipts have gone beyond those of the same period last year to the amount of $6,996. "Come magnify the Lord with us, and let us exalt His name together."

We are not afraid to tell you this good news. We know that your hearts are too true to Christ to make His goodness the pretext for relaxing effort. You will rather feel stimulated to an ever enlarging liberality, knowing that the demands of the work grow in the same ratio with the prosperity which it enjoys.

It is with peculiar pleasure that we refer to an act of the last General Assembly, by which that venerable body offers to us the opportunity of plighting our vows afresh to Him who merits all our love. "We would call earnest attention," says the General Assembly, "to the Week of Prayer, which has been observed for several years, and would recommend that it be observed again this year, and that its observance be appointed for the week prior to the Sabbath in October when the collection is taken in the churches. We believe that this is a very important matter, for it is in answer to the prayer of God's people tha tthe blessing surely comes." Your Committee can bear unhesitating testimony to this last statement. We have abundant evidence that the signal prosperity, which has attended our work during these times of great business depression, has been due to the unusually earnest spirit of prayer that has prevailed throughout our borders.

Only let all the churches carry into effect the recommendation of our venerable court, and life yet more abundant will pour through all the channels of our work. The coffers of your Committee will be full, our hearts will be full, your hearts will be full, and the baptism of Pentecost will fall on our fields at home and abroad. Our hopes kindle, our hearts fairly thrill with joyous anticipations, as we picture to our minds the whole Southern Presbyterian Church gathered before the Throne in prayer and praise. Faith sees the approving smile on our Father's face, and hears the glad hallelujahs on angels' lips, and prophesies with perfect confidence the coming of a blessing larger than our room to receive it.

Think, beloved brethren, how close we can come to our Saviour's heart as we gather, day by day, in our places of prayer to seek the enlargement of that work which was, and is, dearer to Him than His life! He will meet with us in most loving and tender manifestation, and, when the week is over, we shall know the sweetness of His grace as never before.

Along with these tidings of cheer, and this call to prayer and praise, we send you a word of information about the demands that press upon us. These have changed very little since the meeting of our Assembly in May, and we cannot, therefore, do better than quote the Assembly's own words: "An earnest call comes up from every field for more workers. The China Mission calls for twenty-one more, the Congo for at least two, Japan needs several, Brazil two, and Korea half a dozen. For the best welfare of the work at least eighteen new laborers should be sent out. This would require about $165,000. Cannot the Church do this?' asks the General Assembly; and answers, "Surely, for God has greatly blessed this work in the past, and is ready to continue and enlarge His blessing."

Stimulated by these brave words of the Assembly, and cheered by the noble responses of the Church to the demands made upon her liberality, your Committee have ventured on some enlargement of the work—rather, they have suffered it to expand under the pressure of its own growth. This expansion necessitates expenditures considerably in excess of last year, and, therefore, the increase in receipts, to which reference has been made, must continue through the year, in order that our rejoicing be not turned into sorrow. But we will not harbour distrust. We will give no place to fear. Put a week of prayer behind the appointed collection in October, and we shall reach the end of the year with our harps tuned to yet higher notes of grateful praise.

JUDGING.

We do not know our closest friends,
Their ways we've ne'er divined,
Nor do we know the inner thought
That animates the mind.

We often say what we would do,
If we were so and so;
But who can tell how he would act
With mind he cannot know?

And yet we judge those whom we see
About us day by day,
Nor are we fully satisfied
Unless they think our way.

We long to tell them what to do,
Precisely how to live,
Just how to handle their affairs,
Exactly what to give.

We wonder why they will do this,
And never will do that,
Appointing to ourselves a place
As private autocrat.

Oh, "Judge not that ye be not judged,"
How often have we heard
These sayings of the Master mind,
But do we heed the word?

Instead of looking at the mote
That's in another's eye,
Suppose we clear away the beam
That in our own doth lie.

For when that beam is all removed,
Perhaps then it may seem
The little mote we saw so plain
Was our reflected beam.

GREATEST OF HINDO WOMEN.

Pundita Ramabai is a remarkable Hindoo woman, who is working hard for the elevation of her native sisters in India. She has just taken up temperance work and was made national superintendent of native work at a recent convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of India, held in Poona.

Pundita Ramabai is recognized in her own country as the greatest Hindoo woman that has ever lived. She is the daughter of a Marathi priest and can trace her Brahmin ancestry 1,000 years. Her father, having resolved, in defiance of the laws of custom and conventionality, to educate his wife, retired to a forest home to carry out his ideas without molestation. There, in 1858, Ramabai was born, and there, in entire seclusion, was educated by her parents. Orphaned before she was 16, she traveled several years with her brother, a noble young man, who sympathized with her in her determination to devote herself to the elevation of her countrywomen. The degree of Saraswati was conferred upon her by the University of Calcutta, she being the first woman in the empire to be thus honored.

Pundita Ramabai married a Bengalese gentleman, a lawyer, whom she freely chose—this being an instance almost without precedent. He died within two years, leaving her at twenty-four with an 8-months-old baby. She went to England, was made professor of Sanskirt in Cheltenham College, and in 1886 came to America to see her cousin graduate from the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia and to study our educational methods.

During her stay in America she lectured in several of the cities, and by this means raised money to open a school of child-widows in India.—Presbyterian Banner.

Gen. George Washington Custis Lee, son of Gen. Robert E. Lee, has presented to Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., of which he is president, two portraits as valuable, perhaps, as any two in America. One of them is a picture of Washington, the other of Lafayette, and both are the work of the distinguished Maryland painter, Charles Wilson Peale. Gen. Lee is a great-grandson of Martha Washington, and the pictures came to him by direct inheritance. They formerly hung upon the walls of Mount Vernon, and were taken thence to Arlington. Just before the latter estate fell into the hands of the Union troops, these portraits were hastily removed from their frames, and were kept in careful concealment until the war was over. Washington's portrait was painted when he was a Colonel in the Colonial forces of Virginia, and in the prime of life. Washington gave the university its first important gift—100 shares of stock in the James River Company.

Many a man who would be startled at the bare thought of sitting down and deliberately drinking a dose of poison, allows himself to be regularly and systematically poisoned day after day by accumulations of bile in the blood.

When the liver fails to do its regular work of filtering this bilious poison out of the circulation, it goes on poisoning the entire constitution just as surely as if a man was drinking prussic acid.

Every part of the body is polluted. The digestive juices are suppressed and weakened. The kidneys and skin are clogged with impurities and the lungs and bronchial tubes overloaded with morbid secretion which eat away the delicate tissue, and bring about bronchitis and consumption.

All the diseases caused by this subtle process of bilious poisoning are cured by the marvelous alterative action of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It directly increases the liver's natural excretive and purifying powers; gives the digestive and blood-making organs power to manufacture an abundance of red, rich, healthy blood.

It drives out all impurities, and vitalizes the circulation with the life-giving elements which restore perfect nutrition, solid muscular power, and healthy nerve-force.

"In August 1895, I was taken down in bed with a burning and severe pains in my stomach and under my shoulders, and dizziness in my head," writes Ira D. Herring, Esq., of Needmore, Levy Co., Fla. "My home physician was called and he said my symptoms were more like consumption than anything else. I lingered in this way seven months trying different kinds of medicine. Nothing that I ate would digest, and I had great distress in my stomach. I was persuaded to try some of Dr. Pierce's remedies or to see what he thought of my case. I wrote him and received an answer stating that my suffering was from indigestion and torpid liver, and advising me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The first bottle gave pleasing results. I have taken four bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and three small vials of the 'Pleasant Pellets.' I am able to do my work and eat what I could not before I took these medicines."

Cream Dressing for Salad.—One cup of fresh sweet cream, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, the white of two eggs beaten stiff, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of the best salad oil, two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, one tablespoonful each of mustard and salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper. Heat the cream to almost boiling; stir in the cornstarch, previously wet with cold milk; boil two minutes, stirring all the time; add the sugar and take from the fire. When half cold beat in the whites of the egg; set aside to cool. When quite cool whip in the oil, pepper, mustard and salt, add the vinegar, and pour at once over the salad.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

COLONEL GRUMPY.

He was a darling little boy,
With sunny eyes of blue,
And happy as the day was long
Unless he had to do
Some task that did not please him much,
And then he was so cross,
His mother thought her boy was gone,
And grieved so for his loss,
And said "it was a dreadful case,
That here in her own dear boy's place
Was surely Colonel Grumpy."

Her boy she said was good and sweet—
The pearl of little boys!
But Colonel Grumpy was most rude,
And broke up all his toys;
He tore his picture-books to bits,
Cracked his slate, lost his hat,
Pulled his little sister's hair,
And teased the pussy-cat.
She wished he'd go away, and then
She'd have her own sweet boy again
Instead of Colonel Grumpy.

"That Colonel Grumpy's not my boy
I'm sure is very plain,
And so I'd better send him off
To-day in all the rain.
So Colonel Grumpy, go away
In spite of wind and wet!
I want my boy who does not sulk,
Nor does he scold or fret!"
A little sob, two pleading eyes,
Then, clasped tight in her arms, he cries:
Good-by cross Colonel Grumpy!"

St. Nicholas.

HIS WORD.

"Take care, George. Don't throw down those books."

George, however, continued his restless movements, as the result of which a pile of books presently fell to the floor.

"I do dislike to see books carelessly used," said his mother, in some vexation.

"And there's a Bible among them," said George's sister.

"Well, Lill," said George, lightly, "it doesn't hurt the Bible any more than the rest of them."

"Perhaps not," she said. "Perhaps you are the one who is hurt."

"Don't make a fuss about nothing," he said, with a show of indifference. "Say, mother—Bibles are just paper and printing and binding, exactly like other books. Isn't it all superstition to say they ought to be more carefully handled?"

"I think not," she said. "The paper and printing and binding contain the Word of God, and all who truly love and honor Him must, I think, hold His visible Word in honor."

George had by this time picked up the books. As he piled them on the table, his mother, while still talking, had taken the Bible from some other books and laid it on the top.

"What's that for, mother?" he asked her. "I've seen you do that before."

"Have you?" she said, with a smile, "Well, I believe I often do it without thinking. When I was a little girl I had a dear old aunt whose love for the Lord's Word was most sweet and beautiful. It extended to its outward form, for she never could bear to see it irreverently handled, and always disliked to have anything placed over it. She was fond of telling the little story of Edward the Sixth, of England and the great Bible in the palace library.

"Tell me, mamma."

"Some young friends were in the room with him. A book was wanted from a high shelf, and one of them placed the large Bible to be stepped on. But the prince objected, and brought another book."

"Good for him," said George, much pleased. "But," he added, thoughtfully, "there were so few Bibles in those days that they thought more them."

"Perhaps so," said his mother. "I lately came across the curious old story of the woman who baked her Bible in order to hide it."

"Caked her Bible! Go on, please mother—"

"It was in the times when the Lord's faithful ones were cruelly persecuted, sometimes even unto death, if a copy of His Word was found in their possession. This woman had in her bare little cottage no place where anything could be securely hidden, and the searchers were close upon her. What could she do? She had been cooking a batch of bread, and the unbaked loaves were standing near the oven. She snatched up the precious volume and wrapped it about with dough, and when the soldiers burst in she was quietly putting her loaves in the oven."

"And the Bible was baked with them!' cried George, clapping his hands.

"Yes, and came out with little injury."

"I wonder if she ever had to do it again?"

"It is not told whether she did or not. But it seems to me, my boy, that the fact of our being blessed with many copies of the precious Word, and with the privilege of studying it without fear of molestation, ought not to lessen our reverence for it."

"You're right, mother, as you always are."—New York Observer.

TO THE READERS OF THE NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN:

BRETHREN:—I am engaged in a most interesting Home Mission work, in Winchester Presbytery, which extends across the mountains and along Lost and North River Valleys. At present we have no organization at Lost City, but we have eight members there who are of the best and most substantial people on Lost River. We have but recently determined to build for ourselves a small "house of worship" and feel encouraged in our determination both on account of its favor with Presbytery and with the individual members. Our efforts in this work shall be untiring and unceasing until in the providence of God it shall be accomplished, and hence we shall be grateful to any who may desire to further the cause of Christ by aiding us in erecting this building for the Master. Praying that He may bless and own the efforts of all who desire to promote its progress, and believing that God, through His people will supply the means for the needs of His work, I am

Fraternally yours,
IVANHOE ROBERTSON,

Send all remittances to Rev. Ivanhoe Robertson, Lost City, W. Va.

Your readers will be interested in knowing that the Bingham school has opened strongly. More than a hundred pupils have reported and they come from a territory extending from Pennsylvania and Illinois on the North to Florida and Texas on the South, and some others are expected. North Carolina is represented by such patrons as Col. Julian S. Carr of Durham, who is probably the leading manufacturer in the State, and Col. John S. Cuningham of Person, who is said to be the largest tobacco planter in the world. Some eighty pupils are in attendance from outside of North Carolina, and the school is doing better financially than any other private school for boys in the South as far as your correspondent knows. When we remember that Bingham's is the only school in the United States which has been administered by a succession of Presbyterian elders for more than a hundred years, our Church may well be congratulated on its success.

ARNOLD DeWELLES MILLER, D. D. LL.D

Arnold DeWelles Miller was born in Charleston, S. C., October 26th, 1822, and died in Charlotte, N. C., January 10th, 1892, after sixty-nine years of intense and earnest life. His whole career was marked by that ardor of spirit and that unflinching loyalty to his convictions at any cost which have always characterized the people of his native State, as well as by that fervid eloquence which has given so many of South Carolina's sons illustrious places in the annals of American oratory.

He was graduated from Charleston College with the class of 1841. Then, like many of our most scholarly ministers, he enjoyed the advantage of that priceless discipline of mind and character which is afforded by teaching, and which few other vocations afford in the same degree. He entered the Theological Seminary at Columbia at the time when Dr. Thornwell was professor and chaplain in the South Carolina College, and, like Thomas E. Peck, Benjamin M. Palmer, and John L. Girardeau, who were all his intimate friends, received an impression from the genius and character of that superb scholar, teacher, and man of God, which lasted through life. The photograph of Dr. Thornwell and that of the first wife of the late Governor Vance, for whom also he cherished an enthusiastic admiration, stood side side by side for many years on the mantel of his study at Charlotte.

After his graduation from the seminary in 1847 he and his classmate, Mr. Girardeau, were licensed together by Charleston Presbytery, reading their trial parts from the floor, a practice which he always approved, as against the present custom of having candidates for license occupy the pulpit. His first charge was Fishing Creek, an important churchin Bethel Presbytery, South Carolina, and his first sermon there was on "The Headship of Christ," a favorite theme throughout his ministry, as many of his hearers will vividly recall. While at Fishing Creek he was married to Miss Stringfellow of Chester county, who bore him two children. She died while they were still young.

He became pastor of the church at Charlotte, N. C., in 1855, but after two years he was called away to take charge of the Tabb Street church at Petersburg, Va. He resigned this charge shortly before the close of the war and gave his time to preaching to the soldiers and especially to distributing Bibles and tracts among them.

Before leaving Petersburg he was married to Miss Lily McPhail, of Norfolk, Va., whose sweet spirit, and gracious manners are remembered as a soft radiance in every community where she has lived and whose wifely devotion to her distinguished husband continued to cheer and strengthen him through all the remainder of his days. Since his death Mrs. Miller has resided with her widowed sister, Mrs. Anderson, in Baltimore.

In 1865 Mr. Miller was recalled to the church at Charlotte, and it was here, during his long pastorate of twenty-five years that the great work of his life was accomplished. Here his powers unfolded to their fullest measure. The strength of his convictions, the tenderness of his ministrations in the sick room, and the force of his preaching soon made him a recognized power in the town, and the great Church to which he gave his strength developed in every direction, increased its membership, set off a colony which has since grown into a large and flourishing congregation, built a worthy manse, improved its house of worship, built and supported a mission chapel, and, under the influence of his faithful appeals and consecrated example, gave liberally of its means for the advancement of mission work at home and abroad. The first Gentlemen's Foreign Missionary Society in the Southern Presbyterian Church was organized by him and has since supported a missionary in China. His interest in Christian work among the Jews also was unflagging. But perhaps the work which, next to his own pastorate, lay nearest his heart was the evangelization of Western North Carolina. It was his habit to spend part of every summer in the mountains, preaching at every opportunity. His visits and his sermons will never be forgotten by the sturdy inhabitants of that interesting country. Besides other fruits of these labors he found there three of "his boys" for the Gospel ministry, all of whom enjoyed his steadfast friendship and kindly counsel, and one or more his timely aid in other ways. One of these young ministers has long been an intimate friend of the present writer, who has heard him speak of Dr. Miller on innumerable occasions with a veneration and affection which must of themselves have been a rich reward for his fatherly interest, to say nothing of the large usefulness which, under the blessing of God, these young men from the mountains have all achieved in the ministry.

Dr. Miller, as has been well said, was benevolent to a fault, and many of his largest benefactions were known to none but himself and the Father who seeth in secret and rewardeth openly.

One of his most striking traits, which should not be forgotten by those who think of him as a rigid disciplinarian and a fearless defender of the faith, and which it gives this writer peculiar pleasure to record, was his tender love and oversight of the dear lambs of his flock, whose devotion to their "beloved pastor" was expressed by the gift to his old church of the beautiful baptismal font dedicated to his memory.

Dr. Miller was a man of books of the weightier sort, and had accumulated an uncommon library, especially rich in the seventeenth century masters of the Reformed theology. I was once looking over his collection and made some comment on its uniform solidity. "Yes," he replied, "Dr. McCosh of Princeton was in here once and after looking over my books remarked that he had not seen a better private library of theology in America, saying that I seemed to have no trash in it." His sermons gave evidence of their origin in that kind of workshop, being unusually full of theological matter, and fully written out. His manner in the delivery of them was marked by deep solemnity, intense earnestness and at times great vehemence, his face lighting up the while with an almost preternatural lustre. This was particularly observed at times in prayer when with upturned countenance and pleading voice with its strangely yearning tone he led his people into the presence of the Supreme Majesty. Sermons like his, full of solid matter, projected upon the minds of his hearers with singular fervor and force, naturally contributed more to the intensive life of the church than to its extensive life, yet the latter did not fail of accomplishment, as we have already noted. And indeed, in a normally developed church the two are inseparable.

Dr. Miller made occasional contributions to periodical church literature, writing always from full conviction and with rare verve, as may be seen in his discussions of the Tithe, the Restoration of the Jews, and the in thesi deliverances of the General Assembly.

He conceived a strong admiration for the great people among whom his life work lay, that staunch Scotch-Irish stock which has contributed so largely to the making of America, and which at Charlotte in 1775 stamped the name of "Mecklenburg" with imperishable renown. The authenticity of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, now happily established beyond successful contradiction by the supplementary proofs recently adduced by the the Grahams and other investigators, always had in Dr. Miller an able and zealous defender. His tributes to Craighead and the other great Presbyterians who laid the foundations of American liberty are fresh in the memory of all.

Dr. B. M. Palmer writing of him shortly after his death as "my friend and brother and playmate, and a noble champion of the Cross of Christ," sums up as follows the two emotions felt by all who knew him best when they heard the news of his summons to come up higher: "The Church has suffered a heavy loss in the death of a most faithful son and servant; but the Church of God is one, and what is lost on earth is gained in heaven."

THE FAMINE FUND.

As soon as the facts of the great destitution in India and of the suffering of so many multitudes with plague and famine became known, patrons and friends of the PRESBYTERIAN, began to send in sums of money. These sums have now aggregated more than one hundred and seventy-five dollars. Rev. A. D. McClure pastor of St. Andrews Presbyterian church, at our request, took charge of this fund and has been forwarding the same from time to time. At first he sent to the Christian Herald, of New York, as our Southern Presbyterian Church has no missionary in India. As soon as he found a Presbyterian minister in the part of India so much affected by the famine he began to send to him remittances by bills of exchange on the Bank of England. Fortunately the minister was a personal friend of Mr. McClure. He is Rev. T, S. Wynkoof, of Allahabad, Secretary to the North India Bible Society Auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society. He was formerly a Presbyterian missionary in India. Later he was a pastor in Washington, D. C., and few years ago returned to India for his present work. He is familiar with India as few men are and especially with the people and needs of the famine-stricken district. He has accepted the trust and distribution of these friends and of monies sent by other Presbyterians. In a private letter acknowledging receipt of the first remittance to him he says, "How can I thank young enough for * * * the welcome Bill of Exchange * * * in aid of the famine sufferers? "That very day I had received a pitiable appeal from a missionary in the Central Provinces, just over the border from our Northwest Provinces.

"Owing to various causes, the famine has been more severe in the Central Provinces, and the government of these Provinces not so able to cope with it. My friend begged me to send him money to buy seed corn for the villages. Poor creatures! in their long struggle with starvation, they had parted with everything they had. The government aid could only furnish them with one-fourth the seed required. Not to sow the full amount, or nearly so, means to gather only a partial crop. I was able to send at once one thousand rupees from some English famine funds in my charge, and, when your letter came, I felt that the best thing I could do was to send one hundred rupees, from your contribution, or about thirty-three dollars. Supposing the people to whom it goes are able to get from government and their own enough to sow one-half their land, this thirty-three dollars will enable them to get a full crop from at least two hundred acres. Allowing twenty acres to each little village, this will help ten such villages to tide over present distress and fill a thousand hearts with joy and hope.

"I enclose the letter which acknowledges the contribution. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell are admirable missionaries. They are not seeking what are called Famine Converts—but the influence of their living Christian charity will not be lost on the poor people whom they are helping:

"The fifty rupees which remain from your remittance, I will keep for cases of special need, chiefly among native Christians. I have in mind a family of mother, grandmother, and seven children, only one of whom is able to earn a salary. The father died recently, and in these hard times their case is a sad one."

In this connection we call attention to a series of articles appearing in The Cosmopolitan—from the pen of the well known writer, Mr. Julian Hawthorne. He was sent by the proprietors of this magazine to investigate the claims of these famine sufferers. From every point of view his articles are full of interest. But we are especially interested in his testimony to the character and conduct, the consistency and charity, the carefulness and consecration of the missionaries in India. Indirectly he makes a strong support for the claims of Foreign Missions to the gifts and prayers of Christians at home. "Visiting India makes one value Christianity," he writes at one place. After a tender and touching recital of the details of the daily life and the simple living of a missionary's home whose hospitality he shared and enjoyed, he writes: "The family sat down thrice a day to a wholesome, but Spartan meal. The husband worked with all his might from dawn to dark, and after dark in his study * * * and praying with all his soul to the God and Christ, who was more real to him than any earthly thing. His * * * wife, with faith like a little child's, and innocent as a child, yet wise and steadfast in all that touched her work, labored as untiringly and selflessly as her husband, and so did the other angel in the house." Speaking of the false notions of a missionary's life and work he says: "I confess that I had prepared myself to find something of the kind. But one must live with the missionaries in India in order to understand what they are doing and how they do it." Thus throughout a carefully well-written article a literary man on a mission purely humane, shows how good and true missionaries are and how self-sacrificingly they live and work.

THERE CAN BE no doubt that public sentiment on the subject of temperance is very much lower than it was during the agitation in behalf of prohibition and for some years afterwards. The signs of retrogression are on every hand. The need is—moral suasion, those opposed to all drastic measures and too often in favor of moderate drinking, are fond of saying. Yes, moral suasion and especially among the young. Where are our juvenile temperance societies that used to be everywhere? Are we to let the young grow up taking the chances, with the chances very many fold against their growing up to lives of sobriety? There is reason to fear too that temperance teaching is omitted in very many homes—and first of all the home is the place to get boys started right and to keep them right.

EVERY ONE at all acquainted with the subject knows that the majority of chaplains in the United States army are Episcopalians. We are stating a well-known fact without a particle of sectarian feeling in the matter. It is equally well known that most of the officers of the army are connected with the same Church. Now why are nearly all the chaplains Episcopalians? Simply because the officers choose the chaplains, and being Episcopalians, naturally, we may say inevitably, choose ministers of that denomination. But why are the officers Episcopalians? Because the chaplains at West Point belong to that Church and the dominant influence and religious training being all towards that Church the young men graduating from our military academy can hardly fail to be Episcopalians. The one must necessarily react upon the other.

We have stated the matter very strongly. The President of the United States appoints the chaplains, as a matter of fact, but he is very largely influenced, when not controlled, by the wishes of our army officers, not so much as to individuals, let it be understood, as to denominational preferences.

The President, appoints and here comes, in the explanation of the exceedingly disgraceful selections which are sometimes made for the position. A correspondent of the Independent, vouched for by that paper, states cases of appointments, because of relationship to influential politicians, or because of political services rendered by the appointee, or because a personal friend of the wife of the President, or from equally unreasonable motives. Such appointments could hardly fail in some cases to be scandalous, and the correspondent referred to cites cases: One man who being a disgrace to his Church for years, was compelled to resign or be tried for drunkenness, gambling and other misconduct became an army chaplain; another man with many gifts became unacceptable to an aristocratic church, not opposed to social drinking customs, because of drunkenness and was transferred to an army chaplaincy. After a brief service he had, it is not unpleasant to add, to be dismissed from the service—but with one year's pay. These and others are grosser misappointments, but numbers totally unfit for so responsible position get in for reasons that could not bear public scrutiny. This does not mean that all or nearly all army chaplains are irreligious men. Doubtless there are numbers who adorn their holy profession. But there is enough in the way of scandal in this service to demand some change in the mode of selection of these most important servitors of a Christian nation.

THE ADDRESSES of the Westminster Assembly are at hand. Those who attended the late Assembly, and those who were not so fortunate, will now have before them these most scholarly and every way most admirable addresses, with an introduction by Rev. Dr. F. R. Beattie, the action of the Assembly which brought about the celebration, containing the Historical Frame Work of the Period of the Westminster Assembly, the Ordinance calling the Westminster Assembly, and a List of the Members and a brief Bibliography—the whole comprising a "Memorial Volume of the Westminster Assembly" to which our Church and the Christian world is so greatly indebted. The editing has been admirably done and the mechanical part of the work is all that can be desired. The portraits all are speaking likenesses. No Presbyterian family can well afford to be without it. The price is $1.50. Presbyterian Committee of Publication, Richmond, Va.

☞ AN OXFORD TEACHER'S BIBLE, genuine addition—the very best Bible offering—will be given to any one who will send us three bona fide subscribers at $1.50 each for first year. For this service the Bible will be sent to any address given us—absolutely free of cost.

DON'T FORGET THE N. C. PRESBYTERIAN needs every dollar due. Send in promptly and send a new subscriber too if you can.

A MINISTER of another State writes: "I should congratulate you upon the wonderful improvement in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. It ought to go to every Presbyterian family."

THE STRIKINGLY correct likeness of Dr. A. W. Miller will arrest attention this week, and the delightful sketch by one who knew and loved him well. We can now promise definitely sketches of other departed fathers and brethren: Rev. Dr. Drury Lacy, Dr. Neill McKay and Dr. Marable, and we hope to give many others. We will feel obliged for any aid that may be given us in providing material for what may yet prove to be an invaluable biographical history of the Synod of North Carolina.

☞ Any suggestions as to names of those whose records should be given in the paper will be taken kindly, and any aid extended in getting photos and sketches will be most gratefully appreciated. All expense of procuring vignettes will be ours. Good strong likenesses, not too dark, make the best pictures.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

On last Monday evening the doors of the new Medical College building were thrown open and the whole building brilliantly illuminated in honor of the new members of the Medical Class. Dr. Munroe had invited about a hundred guests to meet them, and furnished abundant refreshments to console and strengthen them under the strain of so much handshaking. The receiving party consisted of Dr. Munroe, Miss Munroe, of Lenoir, Dr. and Mrs. Shearer, and the other members of the Medical Faculty with their wives. The evening was rendered still more enjoyable by the singing of Miss Cornelius and Miss Wood, of Statesville, and several of our Davidson vocalists.

Dr. Ramsay, of Hickory, preached for us yesterday, both morning and evening, to large congregations. His sermons were highly appreciated and complimentary comments were heard on all sides. He returns this morning to the meeting of Concord Presbytery at Taylorsville. Dr. Shearer is at Taylorsville, attending the sessions of Presbytery. D.

A LETTER FROM KOREA.

[The following letter to the Sunday-school children of Young's Memorial Church, Ridgeway, N. C., will be enjoyed by our young friends all over the State. This Sunday-school is under the care of Mrs. James H. Bullock, the former teacher of Mrs. Bell.]

MY DEAR FRIENDS :—What shall I tell you about this far away "Land of the Morning Calm" ? You already know that Korea, as it is called by other people, or "Chosen" as it is called by the people themselves, is in Asia, not far from Japan and very near China. It is a small country and has about 12,000,000 inhabitants—its capital is Seoul, and it has a king. The people are fine looking—but like neither the Chinese or Japanese. The men wear their hair in a knot on the top of the head bound up by a black band of horse hair. This knot is useful to hold on the curious big hat they wear, made of horse hair too or bamboo, and which does not fit the head. They also find it quite useful when they quarrel, because they can hold each other by it. Most people dress in white cotton clothes all the year, though in the winter they pad them thick with cotton. Those that are rich wear silk. The little boys wear their hair in a long plait, and never have a hat till they are married; however, many of them are married by the time they are fifteen! What would you think if all the visitors that came to your hose left their shoes outside the door and came in with their hats on ? And how would you like to go to a school where all the boys sat on the floor and each one said his lesson out loud and all at once, and if any boy stopped "hollering" the teacher would correct him ? Little girls don't go to school here. No one thinks it makes any difference whether they know anything or not. They don't have nice times like little girls in America either, for only the very rich ones have dolls, and they have to stay at home all the time and generally have a baby tied on their poor little backs. They are married, poor little girls, when they are thirteen or fourteen, to boys they have never seen in their lives. Some one picked out by a friend. Its a sad story, isn't it ? But now that the missionaries have come to teach these people about Jesus they have schools for the little girls, where they have such good times. In these schools they learn to read and to sing in Korean the hymns you love—"Jesus Loves Me," "Jesus Saviour, Pilot Me," "There Is a Happy Land," and many others. They study the Catechism too and learn from the missionary ladies that Jesus loves little girls and wants them to love Him and that when they die they will go to heaven. People out here, where they worship idols, and spirits, and even devils, don't think women and girls are of very much account, it is only the countries where God is known and the Bible taught and Jesus loved, that think much of women and girls. Aren't you little girls glad you live in Christian America ?

The missionaries have schools for boys too and they teach the boys what the little girls are taught. Then they have church and Sunday-school too, so that little by little some few of these heathen people are beginning to know about the Gospel. But it is slow work. When a new missionary comes out it takes him a long time to learn to talk in this language and then the people think their old religion is good enough. Then too, the missionaries have to put the Bible into Korean and that is very hard to do. For instance, as Mr. Gale, one of the missionaries has said : "When you try to put into Korean, 'I am the bread of life,' how can you say it when Koreans don't have bread, they eat rice. And how can you translate, 'I am the Good Shepherd' or 'Jesus, the Lamb of God' when the Koreans have no sheep ?" Our baby's nurse saw a few sheep one day that a Chinaman had brought over from China and she asked me if they were American pigs ?

Korea has a fine climate and there are many kinds of fruits here and beautiful flowers and high mountains, but the people are full of sin, and they have many sorrows and trials that they try to relieve by praying to idols or sacrificing to spirits. Won't you, who have happy homes in America, and who have the Bible and Sunday-school and all the good things God has given you, remember these poor heathen in Korea? Your teacher, who was my teacher when I was a little girl has written to me about you and that you wish to send some money to help give the Gospel to these people. I hope you will always work and pray for the heathen and remember that it was Jesus' last command to His disciples to "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel," and that meant that those that cannot actually go themselves, must give the money to send those that can go. In order that you may be more interested in these people I send you a copy of the Lord's Prayer which my teacher, Mr. Kim, wrote for me. You have to read it down the columns and from right to left. I also send you a picture of some little Korean school boys.

Hoping that you will always pray for the heathen in Korea and all over the world and the missionaries too, I am

Yours in His Service,
LOTTIE WITHERSPOON BELL.

THE SYNOD OF BRAZIL ON MISSIONS.

The Synod of the Presbyterian Church in Brazil was organized in September 1888, and embraces all the Presbyterian churches in the Republic. Within the last forty years the Presbyterian chvrches in the United States, Northern and Southern, established missions in Brazil, and the progress has been so rapid that by order of the two General Assemblies the missionaries and native ministers were organized into one independent Brazilian Synod. The Mission Boards of the two Mother-Churches established schools in Brazil as in other mission fields. The results after years of trial and great expenditure are far from satisfactory. The Synod at its meeting S. Paulo, July 1897, after a full discussion, in the interests of unity and peace, in the interests also of the Kingdom of Christ in Brazil, adopted by a four-fifths vote the following :

WHEREAS, There is urgent need for evangelization in the whole territory of our Synod and many fields are open which we cannot supply with the means of grace ;

WHEREAS, Immense sums have been spent on large schools of various kinds as a means for spreading the Gospel :

WHEREAS, There has been an almost complete failure on the part of these institutions in Brazil, both as a means for propagating the faith and for preparing a Gospel ministry

WHEREAS, They have been a cause of continued strife and bitterness and at times have deprived us of the full support and sympathy of our brethren in North America ; be it

Resolved ; That we, the Synod of the Presbyterian Church in Brazil, respectfully recommend and beg the General Assemblies of our Mother-Churches that any help they wish to give us be in the direction of aiding us in the great work of evangelization by the most direct methods, including the education and preparation of a ministry, in accordance with the plans of the Synod ; and in the support of parochial schools for the children of believers.

S. Paulo, Brazil, July 7th, '97.

TESTIMONY.

The witness of one's own personal conviction and experience is the strongest weapon that a Christian can use. I do not despise the place of reasoning, but arguments do not often change opinions; they never change hearts. Logic and controversial discoursing may prepare the way of the Lord, but it is the wilderness. But when a man calls aloud, "Come and hear, all ye, and I will declare what God hath done for my soul ;" or when he tells his brother, "We have found the Messias ;" or when he sticks to, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see," it is difficult for anybody to resist, and impossible for anybody to answer that way of testifying.

It is a way that we can all adopt if we will. Christian men and women can all say that. I do not forget that there are indirect ways of spreading the Gospel. Some of you think that you do enough when you give your money and your interest in order to help these. You can buy a substitute in the militia, but you cannot buy a substitute in Christ's service. You have each some congregation to which you can speak, if it is no bigger than Paul's; namely, Aquila and Priscilla. What talks they would have in their lodging as they plaited the wisps of black hair into rough cloth and stitched the strips into tents ! Aquila was not a Christian when Paul picked him up, but he became one very soon ; and it was the preaching in the work-shop, amid the dust, that made him one. If we want to speak about Christ we shall find plenty of people to speak to. "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord."—Alexander Maclaren.

THE BOND OF PERFECTION.

Love is the greatest thing that God can give us, for Himself is love, and it is the greatest thing we can give to God, for it will also give ourselves, and carry with it all that is ours. The apostle calls it the bond of perfection. It is the old, and it is the new, and it is the greater commandment, and it is all the commandments ; for it is the fulfilling of the law. It does the work of all other graces without any instrument but its own immediate virtue. For as the love to sin makes a man sin against all his own reason, and all the discourses of wisdom, and all the advices of his friends, and without temptation, and without opportunity, so does the love of God make a man chaste without the laborious arts of fasting and exterior discipline, temperate in the midst of feasts, and is active enough to choose it without any intermedial appetites, and reaches at glory through the very heart of grace, without any other arms but those of love. It is a grace that loves God for Himself, and our neighbors for God. The consideration of God's goodness and bounty, the experience of those profitable and excellent emanations from him, may be, and most commonly are, the first motive of our love; but when we are once entered, and have tasted the goodness of God, we love the spring for its own excellency, passing from passion to reason, from thanking to adoring, from sense to spirit, from considering ourselves to a union with God. And this is the image and little representation of heaven ; it is beatitude in picture, or rather the infancy and beginnings of glory.—Jeremy Taylor.

THE OPEN BIBLE.

So far as, and so long as England remains true to that simple, unadulterated word of God which has been purchased for us by the misery of exiles and the blood of martyrs ; so far and so long as she stands fast in the freedom wherewith God has made her free, and is not again entangled with the yoke of bondage—so far and so long as she refuses to be either driven into indifference by disgust or seduced into delusion by false religion ; so far and so long will she maintain the honor of this great people. All else—call itself by what sounding name it will—will prove to be but booming brass and tinkling symbal. Let England cling to her open Bible, let her learn from it the broad truths of primitive Christianity, and be faithful to them; let her teach it to her children, and her children to their children, and their children to generations yet unborn, and then no wind that blows, no storm that beats, will shake her invincible foundations, for she will be founded upon a rock! But let her apostasize from its pure lessons into humanity invented falsities, and I would not give fifty years' purchase either for her greatness or for the stability of her Church.—Dean Farrar.

WHAT TRUE LOVE IS.

Love is not easily satisfied. Perhaps no other test better serves to distinguish between that superficial feeling toward God or man which is called love, and that going forth of the soul toward God and man which is love. The one that is easily put off, that regards idleness in itself with complacency, that flutters but does not go forth, that exhausts itself in raptures and spoken endearments, leaving no strength for action, is not love, but a mere sentimental regard stirred by a momentary glimpse of a real or supposed good. True love is a profound enduring emotion, which causes the soul to go forth in a ceaseless yearning toward, and to appreciate and delight in and please, and seek to promote the welfare or glory of, the beloved. It does not despise spoken endearments, but it scorns to use them as a substitute for loving deeds. The love that is content to do less than love's best is something less than love.Sunday School Times.

GOLD DUST.

Were it not for sound and song,
Life would lose its pleasures;
We could not endure it long,
Such a load of treasures.
Say, what is it soothes the soul,
And the heart rejoices ?
'Tis the burst of joyous song,
Blending happy voices.

Patience is the exercise
Of saints, the trial of their fortitude ;
Making them each his own deliverer,
And victor over all
That tyranny or fortune can inflict.

How sweet 'twill be at evening,
If you and I can say,
"Good Shepherd, we've been watching
The lambs that went astray ;
Heartsore and faint with hunger,
We have heard them making moan,
And lo ! we come at nightfall
Bearing them safely home."

EACH MOMENT.

If we may commit the days to our Lord, why not the hours, and why not the moments ? We do not realize the importance of moments. Look back through the history of the Church in all ages, and mark how often a great work grew out of a mere moment in the life of one of God's servants. The moment may have been spent in uttering fine words, but they have fed five thousand, or even five hundred thousand. It is not so often a whole sermon as a single sentence in it that wings God's arrows to the heart. Again, in our own quiet waiting upon God have we not found that he can so irradiate one passing moment with his light that its rays never die away ? Are not such proved to have been kept for him ? And if some, why not all ? O, how much we have missed by not placing them at his disposal ! What might he not have done with the moments freighted with self, or loaded with emptiness, which we have carelessly let drift by ? Oh, what might have been if they had all been kept for Jesus ! How he might have filled them with his life and light, enriching our own lives that have been impoverished by the waste, and using them in far-spreading blessing and power ! We see something of God's greatness and wisdom when we fix our dazzled gaze on infinite space ; but when we turn to the marvels of the microscope we gain a clearer view of these attributes by gazing on the perfection of his infinitesimal handiworks. Just so, while we cannot realize the infinite love which fills eternity, we see that love magnified in the microscope of the moments, and revealing its unspeakable perfection of detail to our wondering sight.—F. H. Havergal.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

A memorial to John Bunyan is to be placed in one of the oldest and most beautiful of the London churches—that of St. Saviour. This is the church in which John Rogers and other priests of the Church of England were condemned to die.

Among other books for the fall the Fleming H. Revell Co., will publish from the famous author of "Probable Sons," "Teddy's Button," etc., two new works, namely "The Odd One" and "A Thoughtless Seven." Both are lavishly illustrated, the former being notably superior in this respect to anything ever before published for young readers.

Lord Macaulay's favorite recreation, after a morning spent on his ponderous History, was to seek the house of his sister and play like a child with his little nephews and nieces. His entrance was a signal for uproarious joy and mirth. At once the sitting-room was the scene of all kinds of plays—the favorite one being "Menagerie." The sofa was pushed across the corner ; Uncle Tom was lion or bear caged behind it and covered with newspapers. Or he was the wolf who talked to little Red Riding Hood ; or the Mother Goose who made up rhymes for the little ones—rhymes that are positively unparalleled in merit by later rhymes for children. For the sake of these romps he declined many an invitation to stately dinner parties, and he was rewarded with an affection on the part of his nephews and nieces such as few parents are blessed with.

Dr. Conan Doyle must have some of the peculiar aptness of Sherlock Holmes, the detective who walks his pages. But, as the Bookman tells us he refers his idea of the character to an old professor of medicine at the Edinburgh University. This man would sit in the patients' waiting-room, with a face like a Red Indian, and diagnose the people as they came in, even before they had opened their mouths. He would tell them their symptoms, he would give them details of their lives.

"Gentlemen," he would say to the students standing about, "I am not quite certain whether this man is a cork-cutter or a slater. I observe a slight callous, or hardening, on one side of his forefinger and a little thickening on the outside of his thumb ; that is a sure sign that he is either the one or the other."

His deductions were very dramatic.

"Ah !" he would say to another man, "you are a soldier, a non-commissioned officer, and you have served in Bermuda. Now, gentlemen, how did I know that ? He came into the room without taking off his hat, as he would go into an orderly room. He was a soldier. A slightly authoritative air, combined with his age, shows that he was a non commissioned officer. A rash on his forehead tells me he was in Bermuda, and subject to a certain rash known only there."

Seize this moment of excited curiosity on any subject to solve your doubts ; for, if you let it pass, the desire may never return and you may remain in ignorance. —Wirt.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Immanuel Church, Wilmington:—For the past two Sundays the services have been conducted by Rev. J. M. W. Elder, of Virginia, who faithfully labored in this field several years ago before the organization of this church.

Installations:—Rev. E. C. Murray, D. D, has been installed as pastor of Mebane, Bethlehem, and Saxapahaw churches. The installation services at Bethlehem were conducted during the sessions of Orange Presbytery. Rev. W. P. McCorkle preached the sermon and charged the pastor, and Rev. S. O. Hall charged the people in his usual happy vein. The services at Saxapahaw were all conducted by Rev. J. McL. Seabrook on Sabbath, Sept. 13th. At Mebane Dr. Murray was installed Thursday, Sept. 16th, Rev. L. B. Turnbull, D. D., preaching the sermon and charging the pastor, and Rev. W. P. McCorkle charging the people.

Mebane Church:—Has received two new members. The opening of the William Bingham School has largely increased the congregations and Sunday-school, and added new life to the church.

Bethlehem:—The good people of Bethlehem church, Orange Presbytery, have lately bestirred themselves and greatly improved and beautified their church building and grounds. The underpinning of rock, the stone steps, the ceiling, and the pulpit, have all been taken out and replaced with new materials and after new plans. The ceiling has been considerably raised and a recess constructed for the new pulpit. And the whole inside of the church has been newly painted. The outside had been painted over not long ago. It is purposed soon to put in new seats and a new floor. Embowered in her grand old grove of oak and hickory, Bethlehem is now a thing of beauty.

The meeting of Presbytery was a blessed spiritual feast to this people; and the overflowing and deeply interested congregation and their lavish hospitality made the occasion a delightful one to the Presbyters themselves.

Westminster Church, Charlotte:—We learn from the Charlotte Observer that next week Mecklenburg Presbytery will be asked to organize Westminster church. Mr. E. D. Latta has offered to donate a site for the church and to contribute $500 for its erection.

Graham Street Church, Charlotte:—Has extended a second call for Rev. W. A. Wynne, of Bramwell, W. Va. The congregation have reason to believe that Presbytery will reconsider its action in declining to place the first call into the hands of Mr. Wynne.

Asheville Presbytery, Additional:—Rev. T. H. Law delivered a timely address in the interest of the American Bible Society and Presbytery took the following action; "In view of the great and glorious work of this most venerable society, and of its diminished resources and ever widening field that Presbytery regrets that so few churches contribute to this cause and would urge our pastors and sessions to see that the order of the General Assembly be obeyed and take up a collection in October for this cause."

Presbytery expressed high appreciation of the labors of Rev. R. P. Smith and Mecklenburg Presbytery was asked to give us, in view of our large missionary territory, at least one-half of his time.

(2) That in dividing his time between the two Presbyteries, Bro. Smith be not hampered by hard and fast lines, but that he be allowed to arrange times and seasons according to the exigencies of the work, after consulting with the chairman of the Home Mission Committee of the respective Presbyteries.

Presbytery also expressed its high appreciation of the labors of Rev. Wm. Black, the Synodical evangelist, and Synod was asked to give as much of his time as is possible in justice to the Home Mission work in other Presbyteries.

Evangelistic powers were granted to Rev. J. L. Wicker, J. T. Wade and J. B. Cochran, the latter confined to Graham, Cherokee and Clay counties, with the following restrictions: When an evangelist in virtue of the powers bestowed upon him by the Presbytery, receives into the church applicants for membership, who purpose identifying themselves with some adjoining church or forming a new church organization themselves, a careful list of the persons so received is to be kept by the evangelist, and members received in this way are directly amenable to the Presbytery until such time as they shall be regularly transferred to the roll of some particular church.

The agent on Sunday-schools made no report, but Presbytery feeling the great need of awakening a greater interest in the Sabbath-school work, appointed Rev. J. T. Wade, the agent, and Rev. J. B. Cochran a committee to arrange for a convention to be held at next spring meeting on the day before the meeting of Presbytery.

The following actions in regard to Colored Evangelization, was taken:

1st. That the attention of churches be called to the needs of Stillman Institute for the training of colored men for the Gospel ministry and the Synod's Academical and Industrial Institute at North Wilksboro and also to the General Assembly's work for the colored people.

2d. That pastors and sessions see to it that the collection for this cause is taken in December.

Presbytery adjourned with the usual services to meet at Murphy first Tuesday in May, 1898, at 7.30 p. m.

Rev. Byron Clark has returned to his charge at Mt. Washington' Md., and on last Sabbath preached to a large congregation of young people.

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Stuart and Miss French had a pleasant farewell meeting at Moore Memorial church, Nashville, Rev. Angus McDonald, D. D., pastor, on the evening of the 19th, and left for San Francisco the next morning to sail thence for China, Oct. 2d, per S. S. City of Peking.

The Southern Presbyterian state sthat Mr. Thornwell Jacobs who has been spending his vacation in Clinton, S. C., and laboring regularly at the new chapel in the factory settlement returned last week to Princeton Seminary to continue his theological studies.

Rev. Dr. Jas. Y. Fair, of Savannah, is spending a portion of his vacation at Saratoga, N. Y.

Rev. Dr. G. R. Brackett, of Charleston, is expected to return to his charge on the first Sabbath of October. Dr. Brackett's health has greatly improved during his vacation which he spent in Maryland.

We take pleasure in copying the following from the Salisbury world: The many friends of Mr. T. W. Lingle, of this county, will be pleased to learn that he has been awarded a second year's scholarship abroad. Mr. Lingle, it will be remembered, was given a scholarship at Heidleburg and Leipsig, Germany, last year, where he has been prosecuting his studies in philosophy.

The scholarship was awarded solely on merit, Mr. Lingle having led his class in philosophy. That he should have received a second year's scholarship is something unusual, and something of which he and his friends may well feel proud.

THE ORPHANS' PICNIC AT MOORESVILLE.

The summer is ended, and with it the merriest picnic season known for many years past; such auspicious weather for happy gatherings in woody glens could not fail to call forth all lovers of such rustic pleasures. Ere these pleasures are entirely forgotten the readers of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN should know of the most important of these festive occasions, viz.: The Mooresville Picnic, for the benefit of the orphans' at Barium Springs—the only one in the State given exclusively for these eighty little Fatherless Ones.

Mocksville has had her "Masonic Picnic." for Oxford Orphans, for nineteen years. In 1893, several well-wishers of the orphanage at Barium Springs, in and about Mooresville, decided to have in this growing young town, an annual picnic for the Fatherless Ones at the Barium Home; accordingly, its friends in neighboring churches and communities were requested to help in the laudable enterprise, regardless of denomination. Committees were formed in each church to solicit baskets of nice eatables—everybody, everywhere invited to attend. The Old North State Orchestra of Statesville when asked to render their most valued services—promptly and generously replied—"we will aid you, gratis (expenses paid.) This kind act brought great joy to the managers of the picnic. Attractive speakers were selected and a beautiful grove put in fine order. The morning of this first orphaus' picnic dawned clear and bright, those most interested in its success, after all things were ready, wondered anxiously if the desired guests would come. They came! Came from all directions, bringing baskets and boxes of good things with them.

The grand band played. The speakers spake. The orphans sang, (Mr. Boyd had brought in wagons his children.) The elegant dinner was spread and enjoyed, each one feeling that 25 cents was cheap for such a repast! Friends met friends and all had a good time.

The orphans' picnic had proven a remarkable success in every way—and had come to Mooresville there to stay! Net proceeds this first year $63 and some half dozen barrels and boxes of cake and bread "carried over" for the Fatherless Ones. Each year since 1893, this worthy enterprise has greatly increased in its number of visitors and its contributions to the orphans'. $505, was the gross receipts of the picnic of 1897. In the five years the net receipts have been $1,109.86; same forwarded to the treasurer of the orphanage. This handsome sum means much thought, careful preparation, laborious efforts on the part of the Executive Committees and the loving services of many mothers and daughters in Mooresville and all its vicinity, preparing their best dainties for this occasion—could any one for a moment think

"Love's labor lost?"

This year the grove was much larger than formerly, it can easily accommodate 20,000 persons and as many horses and vehicles. There were three tables, each 300 feet long, a commodious speaker's stand and nice seats arranged under the shade of the trees, also "lovers' retreats, "resting places," besides several restaurants, where was served extra fine ice cream—splendid iced lemonade, ice tea, hot coffee and hot tea.

Let's take a peep at the "living mass of humanity from various sections of the country." Statesville ever loyal and generous to the cause, sent on the a. m. train five cars, filled with her nobility; the northbound train was well filled also. From 7 a. m. to 2 p. m., that August morning all roads led to the grounds—and crowds gathered in, from the cities, towns, villages and hamlets. They came walking, riding, horse back, mule back, in single buggies, double buggies, handsome phaetons, with prancing steeds; in wagons large and small, packed till there was "na room for twa" more. There were representatives from Statesville, Charlotte, Huntersville, Taylorsville, Concord, Newton, Salisbury, Goldsboro, Raleigh. A goodly number of D. D's., M. D's, and Ph. D's., were present, in fact, a most distinguish looking audience of ladies and gentlemen—for this is no common picnic. In all this vast assembly of some 5,000 or 6,000, not one disorderly or drunken person was seen or heard. Interesting, distinguished speakers held the attention of the crowd at 11 a. m. and 2 p. m.—while sweet songs, sweetly sung by the orphans and soul stirring music by NorthCarolina's best orchestra lent variety to the programme, and gave delight to the many listeners. On the stage sat the eighty beautifully behaved, modestly attired, fatherless ones—in their costumes of white. As their little voices pathetically sang—"Take Me Back to Home and Mother," there were tearful eyes among the auditors. Is there not in the heart of each little motherless one, howsoever tenderly nursed and cared for, ofttimes the inexpressibly longing for home and mother! Thankful indeed should we be, that these bereft ones have such motherly teachers and protectors as Rev. Mr. Boyd and family!

When the bugle blew,
The crowd withdrew—

to the groaning tables. Verily the ladies give their best to the orphans, such elegant breads, tempting meats, delicious cakes of every variety, pies, pickles, fruits, &c., &c.

All was ready: the expectant multitude had assembled around the tables and stood, "hands off," looking longingly, waiting patiently. For what? The blessing, and the cornet signal to—"help yourselves!" Then the picnicers seemed truly happy. There was a bountiful supply for all and barrels of good things left to send the orphans. After the afternoon address the ever obliging Old North State Orchestra discoursed their sweetest music. Mr. Boyd's large family of little ones sang again and recited some very pretty pieces. Every body seemed happy—smiling bright faces greeted you on every hand. But the happiest day must end and ere the setting sun bids adieu to the merry throng we will say "goodbye to all"—"Come again next year."

The night after the picnic Dr. Thornwell, of South Carolina, gave to a delighted audience in the academy hall of Mooresville, his eloquent and charming address on his European travels.

PRRSBYTERIAL NOTICE.

There will be no meeting of Tombeckbee Presbytery until further notice on account of quarantine for yellow fever. By order of moderator.

A. B. Coit,
Stated Clerk.

We invite attention to the article from the Henderson Gold Leaf on the subject of building a chapel in connection with Home for the Aged and Infirm of Vance county. It is suggestive of a way in which great good may be done.

MRS. EMILY J. SKINNER who died in this city on the night of Saturday last will be missed and mourned not only by those in the saddened home circle, but by many within the bounds of natural relationship and many beyond who came under her tender thoughtfulness and loving care; for her's was a kindly heart that ever prompted and sustained a helpful hand. At rest in Heaven, let this be the tribute which records her life on earth:

A wife devoted,
A mother wise and loving,
A friend ever kind and true.

Our heart goes out in tenderest sympathy to those who are bereaved.

TO BUILD A CHAPEL AT THE VANCE COUNTY HOME.

The following appeared in this week's issue of the Henderson Gold Leaf. (The Home for the Aged and Infirm is about five miles from the town of Henderson):

A few week ago the Rev. A. R. Shaw, accompanied by Rev. T. M. Johnson, preached at the Home for the Aged and Infirm; and immediately after the service Mr. Shaw called attention to the necessity of a chapel at the Home, saying that the ministers in town were willing to preach without compensation if a house of worship be erected. It was soon ascertained that the people at the Home and in the community were exceedingly anxious to have such a house.

By a public vote the ladies present were appointed a committee to raise funds in the community; the pastors in town a committee to apply to the Board of County Commissioners for an appropriation; two gentlemen in each of the town churches a committee to solicit contribution for the purpose of erecting a chapel.

Subsequently the Board of Trustees in the Methodist Episcopal church generously donated a small building which will soon be transferred to the Home. Expense will be incurred in moving this building, refitting and, perhaps, enlarging it. A few days ago Revs. Dr. Hufham and Mr. Shaw were assured by a prominent member of the Board of Commissioners that the application for $75 would be granted at the next meeting. This amount will be supplemented by private contribution. Vance county is still marching in the front.

HOEING YOUR ROW.

A homely phrase, suggestive of patient work under a broiling sun, a hand to hand conflict with the soil; the secondary meaning is that of persistent, energetic and steady performance of duty. It may not be pleasant; very probably there is something else going on which you would much more enjoy; perhaps you are tired, and this drudgery is obscure and you will get no thanks for it. Nevertheless you have it to do; it is your task; you must hoe your row. Having begun, you must persevere until you have reached the appointed conclusion of your particular stint. Nobody else can do your share; you must do it yourself.

A sort of Spartan indifference to mere comfort and convenience, a Puritan sense of responsibility, a very commonplace but nevertheless very admirable virtue, are all, more or less, implied in the every-day accomplishment of an every-day task in the careful hoeing of your row.

Perhaps you live with uncongenial people, who constantly rub your fur the wrong way. Perhaps you are handicapped by imperfect preparation for the work you have undertaken. Perhaps your environment has been an unhappy one, and certain parts of your nature have never been developed as they might have been in more favoring condition. Never mind. Without asking special consideration, without fretting, without weakening in the face of difficulty or danger, you must just bear steady forward, hoeing your row.

After a while you will arrive at a place where you will discover how disciplinary are the processes through which one passes in simply accomplishing a regular task in a regular and possibly a humdrum way. The pianist, for instance, in the finger practice which is repeated and re-repeated, and gone over hour after hour, day after day, week after week, gains a smoothness, precision and facility which could be acquired in no other way. A great deal of skill in many lines is simply the accumulation of years of all-day labor, the faithful hoeing of the row leading to the most wonderful and gratifying results.

One sometimes has disagreeable things to do, things which one would like to shirk, things which are among the penances and humiliations of life. If they are clearly in the ordering of duty, if they belong to the catalogue of must-bes, then the only escape from an accusing conscience is in getting them done with at the earliest practicable moment. They somehow come into the realm of that steady, self-repressing, self-forgetting routine of actions which may be described as hoeing one's row. Blessed be drudgery, a wise man has pithily said, and blessed be whoever accepts drudgery in a cheerful and contented and even thankful spirit. For after the hoeing of the row there follows the green leaf, the bloom, the fragrance and the glad abounding joy of harvest. These follow. Before these came the hoeing of the row.—Harper's Bazar.

THE OLD BELL ROPE.

The first Friday of each month is the time which the women of our church have chosen for their missionary meeting. Usually the church bell rings fifteen minutes before the appointed hour, so as to give due warning; and those of us who live near the church wait to set out until we hear the first stroke of the bell. But one afternoon not long ago, the hour came and passed without the accustomed summons. After vainly waiting for sometime, we started, and found a few other ladies in the chapel, wondering, as we did, what was the matter. One by one some late comers dropped in, and a last we had our meeting; but it was not so successful in point of numbers as it would have been if the bell had rung.

We found afterwards that the sexton had not forgotten his duty, but that the trouble was with the bell-rope, which, after many years' service, had suddenly broken that afternoon when the sexton took hold of it.

The next morning one of us met a faithful member of our church. "I have just been," said he, "to get a piece of that old bell-rope to keep as a memento. It has hung in the church tower for over forty years."

It seemed, at first, as if a bit of old rope was an odd thing to keep as a treasurer, but the longer I thought about it the more interesting it appeared. All these long years that rope had hung in the tower. Every time that the sexton rang the bell the rope had been the connecting link between the two. For church services and Sunday-school, prayer-meetings and funerals, on weekdays and Sundays, it had helped to call the people together—I wonder how many thousand times!

Ours is a fine old church. Strangers often stop in to admire its lofty arches, its beautiful stained glass windows. The people who worship there are proud of its beauty. They like to look up at its slender spire, and love the sound of its ancient bell. But who among them all ever gave a thought to the bell rope? Yet, in its way, how useful it has been to the church!

Perhaps there are some quiet people in the church, always in their place when they ought to be, earnestly listening to the domine's sermon, ready to help every service along to the best of their ability, yet scarcely noticed or thought of any more than the bell rope was. Never mind, they will have their reward.

But how is it with you, reader? Are you always to be depended upon for the Sunday services, or when the second one comes, do you think a morning sermon is enough for you? Are you doing anything in the Sunday-school? Do you cheer your pastor by being always at the prayer-meeting? Are you ready to say a word for Christ, or to help the sing ing? Does your influence ever bring a wanderer back into the church, or turn a thoughtless soul towards the special meetings from which your minister is hoping so much? How has it been this year past? Can you say truly that you have worked in any of these ways for our Lord? Or is it possible that one who has been called a Christian, who claims to be a follower of the Master, has been of less service to the Church than an old bell rope.—Christian Intelligencer.

QUARRELSOME PEOPLE.

Some people are born with quarrelsome tendencies, but by far the greater number of those who spend their time in petty contentions have a quarrelsome disposition thrust upon them in childhood. Take, for example, a family in which there is a habit of bickering over trifles. One person announces at breakfast that Uncle Robert and Aunt Amanda are coming to call to-day after their drive from the farm and their visit to Cousin Sue's. Another instantly declares that the two relatives have no intention whatever of calling at Cousin Sue's, and a third says they are coming to-morrow and not to-day. The matter in dispute could be easily settled by a reference to the letter which gave the information, but nobody thinks of this and the household is agitated and upset by an undignified and absurd squabble to no purpose whatever.

Worse still, the home atmosphere is disturbed, and the children learn to be cross and contradictory, human nature being prone to learn the worse rather than the better thing on every possible occasion.

It is a good rule in home life to avoid all arguments which tend to irritate or wound. Blessings on the memory of a saint of ninety years who once said to me, I being a girl of fifteen at the time; "Dear child, never insist on the last word about anything. It isn't worth while. You can keep your own opinion, but let your friend express his if he wants to, and refuse for your part to quarrel about a trifle."—Baltimore Advocate.

SOCIAL FAILINGS.

Beware of doing harm in society. Yes, the word may be a strong one, in reference to the social gatherings of a little neighborhood of professed Christians; strong, yet not too strong. Pride may come there. Our Saviour noted as one of the crying sins of the Pharisee his love of the "chief rooms" (places) at feasts. Beware of those false disciples who love the foremost seats in church and the chief places at feasts! And vanity may come there—vanity of dress, vanity of face, vanity of manners, and vanity of conversation. We come, not to give pleasure, but to please. Souls have lost been lost in society. To be a good talker, to be a clever jester, to be a pungent story teller, to be a desired element in general conversation, these things have become an ambition, an aim and goal of life, just as others have found it in riches or in honors. Pride may come—and vanity—and, alas! charity may not come here. It comes not, or it stays not, where scandal is; where discussion of other men's matters, other men's conduct, other men's characters is: where idle tales, purposeless at best, probably but one-third true, more than possibly false to the core, are retailed, commented upon, laughed over, though the appearance of the person discussed would instantly silence and abash the loudest! These things are the unchristian use of society. But in all watchings against evil there should be a positive striving after good. It is not by encountering our enemies in detail that we best overcome them, whether in speech or in life. Let the negative have its positive. Let a high aim and a Christian motive go with us into society, and we shall not be there like men armed for self-defense or chained against offending, but rather as free and large-hearted friends fearing no evil because God is with them.—Dean Vaughan.

BE READY.

I beg you to get ready to meet our returning Lord.

What is the way to be ready to meet Jesus? It is the same Jesus that went away from us who is coming, then let us be doing what he was doing before he went away. If it is the same Jesus that is coming, we cannot possibly put ourselves into a posture of which he will better approve than by going about doing good. If you would meet him with joy, serve him with earnestness. If the Lord Jesus Christ were to come to-day I should like him to find me at my studying, praying or preaching. Would you not like him to find you in your Sunday-school, in your class, or out there at the corner of the street preaching, or doing whatever you had the privilege of doing in his name? Would you meet your Lord in idleness? Do not think of it.

I called one day on one of my church members, and she was whitening the front steps. She got up all in confusion, and said:

"Oh, dear, sir, I did not know you were coming to-day, or I would have been ready."

"I replied, "Dear friend, you could not be in better trim than you are; you are doing your duty like a good housewife, and may God bless you."

She had no money to spare for a servant, and she was doing her duty by keeping the home tidy. I thought she looked more beautiful with her pail beside her than if she had been dressed according to the latest fashion. I said to her:

"When the Lord Jesus Christ comes suddenly, I hope he will find me doing as you were doing, namely, fulfilling the duty of the hour."

I want you all to get your pails without being ashamed of them. Serve the Lord in some way or other. Serve him always. Serve him intensely. Serve him more and more. Go to-morrow and serve the Lord at the counter, or in the work-shop, or in the field. Go and serve the Lord by helping the poor and the needy, the widow and the fatherless. Serve him by teaching the children, especially by endeavoring to train your own children. Go and show the drunkard that there is hope for him in Christ, or let the fallen woman know that Jesus can restore her. It is what Jesus has given you the power to do.—C. H. Spurgeon.

No one can be too careful that he wrong not his fellowman. He may repent; the other may forgive; but, when penitence and pardon have done their utmost, still "beyond, out of their reach, stands injury unchanged and changeless."

Subject.—Paul a Prisoner at Jerusalem.

Golden Text. "If any man suffer as a Christian let him not be ashamed." 1 Peter iv. 16.

CATECHISM.

Question 61. What is forbidden in the fourth commandment?

Answer. The fourth commandment forbiddeth the omission, or careless performance, of the duties required, and the profaning the day by idleness, or doing that which is in itself sinful, or by unnecessary thoughts, words, or works, about our worldly employments and recreations.

Time. A. D. 58.

Place. Jerusalem.

INTRODUCTORY.

The journey described in our last lesson ended in Jerusalem, and completed Paul's third missionary journey. This was his fifth visit to his early home since his conversion twenty one years before. He received a hearty welcome from the disciples making his home in the house of Mnason. The next day the elders and leaders of the Church, of which James the brother of our Lord was pastor, met and Paul reported to them the wonderful things which God had wrought by him among the Gentiles since his last report to them, eight years before. At the former report there was a settlement by formal vote as to the necessity to keep the law of Moses. But some were not convinced and now the friends wished Paul to put their doubts at rest and to remove the effect of false rumors by an open act of keeping the law. He was seen in the temple by the Jews who had been his enemies at Ephesus and arrested. He made an address on the castle stairs. The present lesson begins in the midst of that address.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 17. I was come again to Jerusalem. Three years after his conversion, after going for three years into seclusion in Arabia, Paul made the first of his five visits to Jerusalem. While I prayed in the temple, showing that he still honored the temple as the house of worship to God. I was in a trance, or ecstasy, like that into which Peter fell on the housetop at Jaffa. This is not probably the vision Paul refers to in 2 Cor. xii. 3. Here he receives a positive and direct command.

Vs. 18. Get thee quickly out of Jerusalem. His own inclination and prayer was to preach to his own people, but the Lord commanded him to go to the people that would hear him. They will not receive thy testimony, as the Jews were then proving true.

Vs. 19. And I said. What Paul said to his Lord meant that "he desired to make some amends for his persecuting activity and the part he had taken in Stephen's execution. He felt, perhaps, that his words and testimony might convince some of his rigid fellow-Pharisees and old companions.

Vs. 20. Thy martyr Stephen. The Greek work here translated martyr means and is translated in the R. V., "Witness" had begun before the close of the first century to have the specific Christian sense which was so well known in the second century.

Vs. 21. Depart. For God had other and more important plans for Paul than He had for Himself.

Vs. 22. This word: Does not refer merely to the word "Gentiles," but to the whole of the last part of Paul's defense, in which he explained that his mission to the Gentiles was by the commandment of the Lord. Such an assertion to them was rank blasphemy. Away with such a fellow. "The mob burst forth again like a pent up, volcano bursting its barriers.—Pelouhet.

Vs. 23. They cried out, with ejaculations of range and indignation, and cast off their clothes, not to stone him, for he was guarded, but like the act of throwing dust in the air an oriental way of expressing uncontrollable rage. These acts of those near only inflamed the populace.

Vs. 24. Examined by scourging: Claudius Lysias, the Roman officer, supposed that there must be something dangerous in the prisoner and scourged him to find out the cause, and nature of the offense Paul may have committed. It was in those turbulent times which immediately preceded the final outbreak of the Jews when the Romans felt compelled to be severe.

Vs. 25. Bound him with thongs. R. V., "tied him up with thongs," with straps to the whipping post. Is it lawful &c.? "The magic of the Roman law produced its effect in a moment."

Vs. 26. The Centurion, Lysias went to the Chief Captain of the city.

Vs. 27. Art thou a Roman? The pronoun is very emphatic. "Thou—art thou a Roman?"

Vs. 28. Obtained I this freedom—passed from the position of an alien to that of a citizen. But I was free born, from the fact that his father had become a citizen.

Vs. 29. About to examine him by scourging.

Vs. 30. The chief priests and all their council: Was the Sanhedrin, which met at this time in a room just outside the temple walls. Here Paul made his statement under the protection of the Romans. This statement follows in Acts xxiii. The Romans insisted on the hearing to secure the rights of a citizen.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. We should look for the true cause of any evil. Here it was in the mob not in Paul.

2. Paul used every power to protect and promote the right, though not merely to save himself from suffering.

3. How blindly men fulfill God's purposes. These Jews and Romans are seeming to work in opposition. But God uses them both to carry out His purposes. Paul is to go to Rome. Both shall contribute to that result.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Oct 3rd, 1897.

HARDSHIPS.

Text for the week:

Consider Him that endured such contradiction against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds. Heb. 12: 3.

Daily Readings:

Monday. Bricks without straw. Exod. 5: 1-14.
Tuesday. Job. Job. 19: 20-27.
Wednesday. The apostles. 1. Cor. 4: 6-13.
Thursday. Joy in hardship. 2 Cor. 7: 1-16.
Friday. From great tribulation. Rev. 7: 11-17.
Saturday. "Endure hardness." 2 Tim. 2: 1-13.
Sunday. Topic. Enduring hardship for Christ's sake. Heb. 12: 1 13. (A missionary topic.)

Notes:

Without going farther we may find exemplars among the Livingstones, Patons, Judsons and hosts of others who as good soldiers of Jesus Christ endured hardness. But it becomes the province of every Christian man who enlists as a soldier of the Cross to endure hardness; none may escape, the minister at home, and the private member, the parent or child, the employer or the employee, all have hardness to endure if they would win the crown of life. We all must fight if we would reign.

Of all forms of hardness few can be compared to lack of sympathy in Christian work or behavior. The lone Christian, lone in the very midst of a society utterly uncongenial, is to be pitied whether it be in the abode of luxury or in the most abject hovel of the heathen poor. But most of all perhaps is the hardship of non success. God does not always reward even untiring consecrated labor with what the world knows as success. For men have labored lifetimes and seen no fruit for their labors: they have toiled unrewarded until life ceased in despondency and a wretched sense of unfruitfulness in all their labor—but God rewards at last. No one who serves God faithfully ever loses His reward. This command to endure hardness is only to follow in the footsteps of our Lord who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame—and to him who obeys shall be the reward to reign with Christ forever and forever.

ANNUAL RECEPTION AT PEACE, SATURDAY EVENING.

In the spacious halls and parlors at Peace Institute there was a scene of glad hearts and general merry-making Saturday evening. When Mr. and Mrs Dinwiddie threw open their hospitable doors and hearts as well, alike to all whom we term "new" and "old." When the hearty hand shake had been given, each one felt as if she had known the other a life time During the evening the teachers most delightfully entertained us with recitations, songs and piano selections. A very important feature of the evening and dear to the school girls' hearts, was the refreshments. We were loath to say, "Good night," but the bell reminded us that the evening was already drawing to a close. Thus we separated after having formed new attachments and feeling "at home" with one another.

In Memoriam.

MRS. JEANETTE (TILLET) ALLISON. As the cultured eye of the artist easily grasps the beauty of the landscape, so it is with the eye in reading some characters They are so transparent and natural, so simple and sun-beam-like, that a casual glance reads the whole volume. Such was the character of Mrs Allison. When you once saw the face you read the law of kindness in clear outlines, when you beheld the eye it was easy to divine intelligence, when you heard the voice you knew it came from a tongue seasoned with grace, and in her mien "whatsoever things were true, lovely and of good report" were so radiant that the child could discern them. As some texts of Scripture are so complete in setting forth a truth, that touching them seems to mar their beauty, so it is with some characters, they are so beautified both by nature, training and grace, that to attempt an analysis destroys the symmetry. Such is the character of which we attempt an outline. She was born in Iredell county, N. C., on 17th of September, 1847. She was the second daughter of Rev. Jno. Tillett, of sainted memory, and in his day a prominent minister of the North Carolina Conference. When about fifteen years of age, an age when she most needed a mother's counsel, she was bereft of her by death, but with a true daughter's instinct, she ever fondly cherished the memory of her mother. At this age she became a comforter to a sorrowing father, and a mother, teacher and companion to three younger brothers. How well she did this arduous task and delicate mission eternity alone will fully tell. As a result of her training one of her brothers is now a very prominent minister of the M. E. Church, South, and occupies a professor's chair in Vanderbuilt University and another is an eminent lawyer and also an active member of the same church. How few mothers have excelled this noble sister or have been more amply rewarded for their training! As to the beginning of her Christian life, according to her own testimony, she was one of the favored few who never knew a time when she did not believe in the Saviour, and as a result of this experience, at the early age of seven years, she made a public profession of faith and joined the Methodist church. Having laid her Christian foundation well and early, as we might expect, we find her a daily diligent student of the Word of God, and an active worker both in the church and Sabbath-school. As her Lord and Master went about doing good and especially to the poor, so did she by grace strive to imitate His example. When appointed teacher in the Sabbath-school she did not seek the cultured and congenial, but the poor and ignorant. Once she entered a home, Christless and ignorant, and by her kindness, persuasion and persistence, she brought them to her class and taught them to read the story of the Cross; and doubtless this family was only an instance in many cases which she accomplished much for the Master. It was her delight to minister to the suffering poor and neglected, often carrying them an appetizing dish or frequently a religious paper or book. Being well trained in her father's pious home, and educated at Greensboro Female College, an institution under the control of the North Carolina Conference, and also having spent a number of years in teaching in which she was quite successful; she was well prepared for her Master's work—a work she loved so well. On the 12th of September, 1876, in Pittsboro, N. C., she was happily married to Rev. T. J Allison of the Presbytery of Orange. Soon after her marriage she connected herself with the Presbyterian Church. She studied well and accepted heartily the standards of the Presbyterian Church, but at the same time she ever cherished a fond recollection for and rejoiced in the success of the Church of her childhood As she had been a faithful daughter in the manse, we could but expect that she would be faithful as the queen of the manse, and such she was. As she had given her heart to her husband she looked not only well to his household, but with her whole heart she devoted her time and talent in assisting him in every department of his work, and until the cares of a family and the ravaging hand of disease prevented, she was an ever present teacher in the Sabbath-school and a prudent and active leader in all missionary and benevolent causes. Every pastoral charge of her husband will bear testimony to her efficiency as a faithful pastor's wife, and to the many noble qualities of her beautiful Christian character. In the home where the true test of character is best shown, is where her's shone the most resplendent. With a fine discriminating and analytic mind, with a strong individuality and a practical judgment, she was a wise counsellor to her husband in the pastorate, and knew well the merits of a sermon, i. e., she knew how to commend and how to criticize pulpit efforts—an invaluable help to the preacher. In the training of her children, she observed well the law of mental development and as early as she saw in them a knowledge to discern right and wrong she began, like Lois and Eunice in the case of Timothy, to teach them the Scriptures, praying with and praying for them. She threw around her children the good influence and carefully guarded them against the evil. We have now seen this lustrous character as it was exemplified in the home, the church, as a daughter, sister, wife and mother, let us now enter the sick room, that best evidence of God's love, as well as discipleship, and see if this character still shines with such rare brilliancy. Nearly four years before her death an incurable disease laid its hand upon her, and for weeks she lay bound and tortured with this excruciating malady, but in this she charged not God foolishly, nor murmured against the dispensation of His providence. With Job she could say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." With David she could say, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil," and with Paul she could say, "I know in whom I have believed." Her conflict with disease was long protracted and intense, but never for one moment did she doubt her acceptance with Christ, nor her faith waver in the great doctrines of the Westminster standards which afforded her (as she said) in all her sufferings great comfort All that a loving, provident husband, all that medical skill and change of climate could do was of no avail, so far as averting the onward march of the enemy—death, and on September 3d, 1897, as "fades a summer cloud away," without a struggle, calmly and peacefully she dies. As her life built on the cardinal virtues of God's Word had been one of bright ness and beauty, so her suffering scenes and peaceful end, leaning all the while was one of sunshine and sweetness. On the 5th of September Mrs. Allison was buried in the old historic graveyard of Sugar Creek church and her funeral was conducted by Rev. S. W. Newell, basing his words of comfort on the 23d Psalm. A mourning husband, five motherless boys and a host of friends weep over the death of this estimable Christian woman, Dear Brother, as you mourn your loss, realize the gain of her, for whom you weep.

"In heaven there's rest—that thought hath a power,
To scatter the shades of life's dreariest hour."

R. A. MILLER.

ALLISON. On September 3d, 1897, Mrs. Nettie Tillet Allison, wife of Rev. T. J. Allison.

The deceased was a sister of Mr. C. W. Tillett, a prominent lawyer of Charlotte, N C. She was the possessor of many talents. All of which were used nobly, earnestly, and with untiring zeal and energy, in doing what she could for the upbuilding of the Master's Kingdom. As our Heavenly Father has in tender mercy and loving kindness called her from a period of great suffering, to her crown of rejoicing, to sit in reality at Jesus feet, and join the redeemed host in songs everlasting, We, the ladies of Sugar Creek resolve, that in grateful acknowledgement, of the blessing that she dwelt in our midst and was one of us, even for so short a time, we will consecrate ourselves anew to the Master whom she loved and served so well. That we will take up our part of the Lord's work and finish it in such a way, that we, too, may receive the commendation, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." We desire to express our grateful appreciation of the fact, that her last resting place was chosen in old Sugar Creek, and the ancient Oaks that for more than half a century have kept watch over the graves of our honored dead, now cast their lingering shadow over her grave.

Our secretary is instructed to inscribe a copy of this tribute on the pages of the record of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, send one to the family of the deceased, and one each, to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN and Christian Observer

Tribute of Respect.

McRAE. At a meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Society of Smyrna church, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved 1st. That in her death we humbly recognize the hand of "Him who doeth all things well."

2d. That in her death we have sustained a great loss, but we comfort each other with the thought, that, though called from service of earth, she has entered into the higher and nobler service of Heaven.

3d. That these resolutions be transcribed in our minute book, a copy be sent to the bereaved ones, also a copy to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

Mrs. Henry McCallum,
Miss Ella Graham,
Miss Mary McCall,
Committee.

SMITH. Miss Sallie Smith, at the home of her father, Mr. Paisley Smith, near Lumber Bridge, 11th of September. Her health had not been declining long, the inroads of her disease were rapid and her sufferings great toward the last. She died trusting her blessed Saviour. We felt that an humble and retiring Christian had gone into the presence of the Father. P.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE BEST.

"Christ wants the best. He in the far off ages
Once claimed the firstling of the flock, the finest of the wheat,
And still he asks his own with gentlest pleading
To lay their highest hopes and brightest talents at his feet.
He'll not forget the feeblest service, humblest love,
He only asks that of our store we give to him
The best we have.

Christ gives the best, He takes the hearts we offer
And fills them with his glorious beauty, joy and peace,
And in his service, as we're growing stronger,
The calls to grand achievements still increase,
The richest gifts for us on earth, or in the heaven above,
Are hid in Christ. In Jesus we receive
The best we have.

And is our best too much? Oh, friends let us remember,
How once our Lord poured out his soul for us,
And in the prime of his mysterious manhood
Gave up his precious life upon the cross.
The Lord of Lords, by whom the worlds were made,
Through bitter grief and tears gave us
The best he had.

—Exchange.

OUR BEST.

"Our greatest need is somebody to make us do our best."

Did Emerson ever write a truer line? The poverty, weakness and want, which we see all about us in the physical, intellectual and spiritual realms, are not the result of man's lack of ability and talent, and they would quickly disappear if some influence could induce each member of the human family to exercise fully and in the right directions the capacities which he already possesses.

I am acquainted with a young man who carried off the highest honors at school and college, but his father, when congratulated on his son's talent, replied that the boy was naturally no more of a scholar than most boys, but that his mother was determined that he should excel, and that stimulated by her constant ambition he had made the efforts necessary to success. Benjamin West said, "My mother's kiss made me a painter."

Ah, mothers, what opportunities are your! By example and persuasion, patiently and perseveringly teach the dear children to be satisfied with nothing less than doing and being their best, to go on day by day.

"Without halting, without rest, Lifting better up to best."

Sometimes it is the influence of a friend that brings out the best there is in a man. John B. Gough upon the lecture platform, moving thousands to temperance and manhood and God, by his matchless eloquence, was the staggering, drunken John B. Gough, at his best, and humanly speaking it was the sympathetic touch and encouraging word of a friend that brought him there.

In "The Changed Life" Henry Drummond says, "There are some women in whose company we are always at our best. While with them we cannot think mean thoughts or speak ungenerous words. All the best stops in our nature are drawn out by their intercourse and we find a music in our souls that was never there before. Suppose even that influence prolonged a month, a year, a lifetime, what might not life become? Here even on the common plane of life, talking our language, walking our streets, working side by side are sanctifiers of souls."

"Sanctifiers of souls," how well the term describes Drummond himself. The possessor of such a blessed influence must ever be unconscious of it, yet we may well pause and ask ourselves if our friendship and intercourse brings out the best in our associates. But do some sigh because their environment brings out their worst traits and the influence of their companions in life constantly tends to lower their ideals?

Listen to Drummond again. "If to live with men, diluted to the millionth degree with the virtue of the Highest, can exalt and purify the nature, what bounds can be set to the influence of Christ?"

And we can each one have Christ for constant companion and nearest friend. Can there be any more powerful incentive to be and do our best than love for Christ and desire to please him?—Helen A. Main, in Interior.

The Roman mother who with her mantle defended the body of her child from the ravenous birds of prey is a perfect type of motherhood in all times and among all people. To protect her offspring from harm is the overwhelming instinct of motherhood.

Modern mothers are coming to understand that the best protection they can give their children against the preying accidents of life is to transmit to them an abundance of natural health and hardihood. But a mother cannot confer health and strength upon her offspring unless she has it in some measure herself.

Prospective mothers should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, which gives perfect health and strength to the special organs concerned in motherhood.

Taken early during the expectant time, it makes the coming of baby entirely safe and nearly painless. It insures cheerfulness and recuperative energy to the mother and constitutional vigor to the child.

It is the only perfect and positive specific for all weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

Mrs. F. E. Forgey, of Carns, Keyapaha Co, Neb., writes: "I write to you again concerning my daughter, Mrs. D. Billings. She has taken two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription.' She thinks the medicine did her a world of good She was confined the 19th of February. Was sick but a short time and has a 10 pound daughter Got along nicely afterward. Looks good, complexion looks clear, and she says she never felt so well.

MOTHER NASTURTIUM.

Mother Nasturtium
Has a parcel to-day
To send to her sister
Just over the way.

A tiny, wee parcel,
So dainty and small,
A speck of rich pollen
So needful to all.

But whom will she have
For expressman, pray?
Why, kind Mr. Bumble-Bee,
I'm sure you will say.

She'll hang out her card,
His attention to call.
The bright, yellow petals
On a green stem so tall.

And what will she give
To Bumble-Bee gay?
A drop of sweet honey
He'll ask for his pay.

He'll carefully take
The small pollen ball,
At just the right house
He'll soon let it fall.

BIBLE HEROES.

CHAPTER 3.

Hugh's Hero.

All through the week the children tried to get Hugh to give them some idea of who he was going to chose as his hero, but Hugh could keep a secret when he wanted to, and he wanted to keep this one.

Grandma was very glad that he did not tell them anything about it, for she was sure that they would feel more interested if their curiosity was excited.

On Friday, at the dinner table Mrs. Allen said:

"This is the evening for the meeting of the Guess Club, I believe. Suppose that you meet in the sitting room, there will be more room, especially if your honorary members attend."

She made the remark to every body, and for reply she received a storm of noes!

"No! no! no!" cried Artie, his cheeks flushing into a deeper rose, "gamma's woom's de bes'. All de nice sings is dere. Eh gramma?"

Grandma was laughing, because all of the children were talking at once, but as soon as Artie put the question to her directly she rapped on the table with her knife, and then, holding up her other hand, said:

"All in favor of holding the meeting of the Guess Club in the sitting room say aye"

Mama's voice sounded very lonely, for not even the other honorary member agreed with her.

"All in favor of grandma's room say aye!"

Such a racket as there was in response! but grandma's "aye" was head very plainly.

As soon as the noise was hushed grandma said:

"I think that we will meet in my room as usual, and the honorary member who made the motion to change will find that there is plenty of room for both of the h. ms. whenever they want to come."

The children greeted this remark with much applause, and they gathered as usual around the fire in grandma's pretty room, and Hugh gave his hero.

"My hero was the son of a king and I think he must have been handsome as well as brave, though the Bible does not say so.

When he was right young he did a grand thing. His father had enemies that were powerful and cruel, and they had a great army of well trained men. My hero's people were very much frightened and hid themselves in the mountains, because they had no weapons to fight with, only the king and his son had swords.

And the son thought that he would spy out the enemy's garrison, and maybe he could find out how to fight them. So he took one young man and went over. He believed that God would help him, and that he did not need a great army.

Then they stood where the sentries could see them, and the enemy thought they were coming out from the caves where they had been hiding, and called to them;

"Come up and we will show you something!

And my hero took that as a sign from God, and said to his companion; "Come after me, for the Lord hath delivered the enemy into our hands." And they climbed up the steep rock and killed twenty men, and that scared all the others, and God helped them by sending an earthquake too. Now, his father didn't know that he had gone, and instead of being glad that the enemy were beaten he got mad and said he would put whoever did it to death, but the people would'nt let him.

My hero did other brave and beautiful things, and was one of the most unselfish friends that ever lived, but I can't tell you any more, more, because you will guess too easily."

Mama's hand was up, and Will said;

"Seems to me that I ought to know who that is."

Jack said; "Well, I b'lieve it was David."

"No! no!" said Will, "David didn't do that."

Nellie was afraid to guess, and Grandma said:

"Well! let the honorary member tell us, and then she can give us a hero next time."

"No," replied Mrs. Allen. "I will tell you this much about Hugh's hero—that I think made his friendship so wonderful. He really seemed to love his friend's honor more than his own, and was willing for him to be king in his place."

Jack and Will and Nellie all clapped their hands and called out;

"Jonathan! Jonathan! Jonathan!"

"Yes," said Hugh, "but mama made it easier for you all."

I will give my turn to Artie," said Mrs. Allen and now I must go to have supper brought in.

Then grandma opened the table drawer and showed the pop corn and a bundle and said:

After supper we will see who can guess what is in my bundle The first one who guesses right shall pop the first corn. D.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor: I thought I would write to your good paper as you were so kind as to publish my first letter. We have two little calves, there names are Easter and Lucy. We have had our picnic at Buffalo church, but I did not get to go, I was sick, but I am well again. My oldest brother left home the 6th of this month to go to Davidson College. I am not going to school now, but I will be glad when it starts. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday that I can. Miss Minnie Fields is my Sunday-school teacher and Mr. J. M. Hendrix in our superintendent. I must close now hoping to see this in print.

Your Friend,

Dear Mr. McLaurin: I am only four years old, but I know the PRESBYTERIAN when I see it and get my mother to read me the little letters every week. I am too little to write so mother will have to write for me. My best little friend, Kate McKelway, went to heaven not long ago and every night I beg God to let me go too. I do miss her so. I sweep the leaves off our porch every day to make my missionary money. Good bye.

Your baby friend,
DOUGLAS SOUTHERLAND.

Dear Presbyterian: I am a little girl eleven years old, my birthday comes February 28th. I was two years old when I came here to the Home. The Centre Building is almost finished. We have service in the Centre Building. The Centre Building is so pretty. It is covered with slate, the stepes are made of stone. The workmen are putting the ropes in the windows and are painting in side. The Centre Building has three stories. We have two new girls in the Home. Mrs. Rice teaches us how to sew and Mr. Rice teaches the boys how to work on the farm and in the shop. I study Wordbook, Old Greek Stories, Geography and Arithmetic. I love to go to school. The first and second grades go to school in the morning and the third and fourth in the evening. Emma Whitman has gone to Taylorsville to spent some time with Miss Lillie Tidball. I am in the third grade. Preacher Kennedy was here last Sunday. Mrs. Boyd reads the PRESBYTERIAN to us every week, we love to hear it.

HOME MISSIONS IN FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

The summer with its financial leanness is nearly over, and the money season upon us. It is fitting that at this time, when various debts of long standing are being paid, the debt to our faithful home missionaries should receive substantial consideration. Nearly all the churches in Fayetteville Presbytery pledged money for the cause of missions within the bounds. But few of these pledges have been paid as yet, consequently the workers in the fields have considerable inconvenience. There is now no excuse for delay, and all churches are earnestly requested to collect the pledges as promptly as possible. As there is no room for these to be taken up by collection baskets, the best method is a subscription list, carried over the congregation by the deacons, or by a committee of our unordained deaconesses. Many who cannot afford more than five cents for a collection basket, can put fifty on a subscription list, while those who throw in quarters, will write down dollars after their names when presented with such a paper. The pledges of the different churches are as follows:

Aberdeen $6, Antioch $10, Ashpole $50, Barbecue ——, Bensalem ——, Bethesda $25, Bethel $30, Bethlehem $5, Big Rockfish $12, Bluff ——, Buffalo ——, Cameron $15, Cameronian Group $40, Carthage $25. Centre $25, China Grove $6, Church of the Covenant ——, Culdee ——, Cypress $8, Dunn $10, Euphronia, not stated, but same as last year. Fayetteville $100, Flat Branch $8, Galatia $30, Gulf $10, Gibson $5, Haywood ——, Hope Mills ——, Ida Mills $35, Iona $10, Jonesboro $10, Kenly $5. Laurel Hill $30, Lebanon——, Laurinburg $75, Longstreet $5, Lumber Bridge ——, Lumberton ——, Maxton $25, McMillan's $2, McPherson $5. Midway, $5, Montpelier ——, Mt Carmel ——, Mt Pisgah, $10, Mt. Tabor ——, Mt. Vernon Springs ——, Oakland $5, Pee Dee $15, Philippi ——, Philadelphus ——, Pittsboro $5, Pocket ——, Red Springs ——, Salem $5, Sandy Grove ——, Sanford, $10, Sardis ——, Shannon ——, Shiloh ——, Sharon ——, Sherwood ——, Smithfield $10, Smyrna $10, Spout Springs ——, St Andrews $12, St. Pauls ——, Summerville ——, Union $10, Wadeville $10, White Hill ——.

Some churches are blank on the pledge list, probably having no representative at Presbytery to deliver the pledge. All such are heartily assured that they are not pledged to remain blank, but may send about a list and take up all the money possible for the cause. The August collections for this cause have not all been reported yet. Please forward promptly to Mr. John A. McAllister, Lumberton, N. C., or to the undersigned, and let the pledges follow as soon as possible.

HUGH CRAIG,
Treasurer.

THE "NEW DAY."

"The night was dark, though sometimes a faint star,
A little while a little space made bright.
Dark was the night, and like an iron bar
Lay heavy on the land; till o'er the sea
Slowly, within the East, there grew a light
Which half was starlight, and half seemed to be
The herald of a greater. The pale white
Turned slowly to pale rose, and up the height
Of heaven slowly climbed. The gray sea grew
Rose-colored like the sky. A white gull flew Straight toward the utmost boundary of the East,
Where slowly the rose gathered and increased.
It was as on the opening of a door
By one who in his hand a lamp doth hold
(Its flame yet hidden by the garment's fold)—
The still air moves, the wide room is less dim,
More bright the East became, the ocean turned
Dark and more dark against the brightening sky—
Sharper against the sky the long sea line.
The hollows of the breakers on the shore
Were green like leaves whereon no sun doth shine,
Though white the outer branches of the tree.
From rose to red the level heaven burned;
Then sudden, as if a sword fell from on high,
A blade of gold flashed on the horizon's rim."

Culture, art, and science cannot solve the mysteries of spiritual life; but to him who has seen the Lord, all is plain. He sees Him in song and sacrament, in labor and sacrifice, in pain and pleasure; indeed, you must extract his very consciousness from him before you can rob him of his experience.—*Dr. R. S. MISS MATTIE B. INGOLD, M. D.

The subject of this sketch has lately gone, with the last party of missionaries and our Secretary, Dr. Chester, to Korea, as a medical missionary. She is the youngest of eight children, six now living. Her father, Isaiah Ingold, formerly of Guilford county, N. C., is now living at New Stirling in Iredell county. Her mother, was Lavinia Coltrain, of Randolph county. When our missionary was but four years old her mother died, and soon after this Miss Mattie left her father's home to be cared for by other kind friends. Her mother, at the time of her marriage was a member of the Society of Friends, but united with the Methodist Episcopal Church some time afterwards. Her father, and his family have long been connected with the German Reformed Church—the Rev. J. Ingold, her uncle, being one of her earliest teachers, at Hickory. At the age of fourteen, she became a member of the Presbyterian Church, and was under the pastoral care of Rev. P. P. Winn, in Iredell county.

Full of ambition and earnestly desiring to avail herself of every opportunity of self help and improvement, she moved to Rock Hill, S. C., in the year 1888. Here she manifested a noble spirit and from the beginning of her efforts she won the admiration of her many friends in her self-denying struggle for an education.

In 1891, she graduated in the Graded School of Rock Hill, and became a teacher in this school for two years. About this time, the First church, desired to support a foreign missionary, and the pastor called for a volunteer from the congregation. From a child, Miss Mattie had a desire to become a missionary, and she soon responded to the call of her pastor, and was immediately accepted by the congregation. Being anxious to prepare herself more thoroughly for her work, she attended a female college at Lenoir, N. C., and afterwards began a course in medicine in Baltimore, Md. At her graduation she won every prize that was offered by the college to her class and a special prize offered by the Faculty. She was offered a position at once as resident physician, but as it was expected that she would sail in a few weeks for Korea, she did not accept it. After some correspondence with the Committee of Foreign Missions and at her earnest request, arrangements were made for her further study of medicine and surgery in some hospitals in New York and Baltimore. She spent the past year most satisfactorily in this work, and, doubtless, goes out as thoroughly equipped as any medical missionary of our Church.

Her friends believe that she will be a most valuable accession to our missionary force and that a life of great usefulness is before her if God in His providence spares her life.

She is supported in her labors by the First Presbyterian church of Rock Hill, S. C., of which church she is a member.

"One great weakness of our present day Christianity is that there is too much drilling in the army of the Lord and not enough real fighting. Churches multiply societies and agencies, and make a great show of activity; but what are they accomplishing of solid work in the suppression of sin and evil, and the spreading of Gospel righteousness? The question of raising money has become so prominent in all church operations that the question of fighting sin and the devil has largely become a dead issue that needs very much to be raised."—The Lutheran.

When God deals with you, He is always definite, and the impression grows stronger every time you pray. But any impression from God's Spirit is always corroborated by two things. First by the word. The Spirit of God and the Word of God are parallel lines. And secondly by circumstances. If you are truly called of God, circumstances will coincide with the spiritual impulse. —F. B. Meyer.

The fact is that the essentials of Christianity are now beyond being moved from the rock on which they are built by any antiquarian discovery that can be imagined. This is not meant in any mystical or Hegelian sense; but is only to say that the truth and beauty of the life and teachings of Christ have so commended themselves to the minds and consciences of men and have become so inwrought with the whole complex of modern civilization, that they are practically independent of external evidence.—The Nation.

Burns sings;

O wad some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourse'l's as ithers see us!

Burns may have been sincere in that wish, but not many average men and women will join him in it. We don't want to appear to ourselves as we appear to others. We want to think of ourselves as better than we are—as better than others. Carnal human nature is brimful of vanity and conceit. The savage chieftain, who thought that he was a sort of demigod, was presented with a mirror, and told that he could see in it just how he looked. He gazed for a moment on the hideous features it revealed, then threw the mirror down and trampled on it.

The beginning of all true knowledge is to know ourselves—Herald and Presbyter.

"TWO MEN."

No two men are the same, however much they may resemble each other in this vast multitude of human beings. So is God's various workmanship in the race. We can see a difference though we may not be able to define it between any two. Only the Creator can do that and describe each one. The Lord Jesus Christ could and did describe each and define the difference between two men whom He created in the parable of the Pharisee and the Publican.

There were many in the crowds that followed Christ who were not His disciples as believers on Him. Of these He saw some who "trusted in themselves that they were righteous and despised others." To reveal these to themselves, to rebuke their self-righteousness and self-conceit, and that they might escape He spake this parable. The parable is short and simple, but so clear and graphic that we can see these "two men," and take warning or comfort.

The one a Pharisee was pictured not so much to condemn that class among the Jews, as to show that the same spirit is ignoble and despicable wherever found. This man was very religious. He believed in God. He was ready to thank God for His supposed superiority and excellence. He went up into the temple to pray. But he was not pious and he did not pray. His words "God I thank thee" were not true thanksgiving of one sensible of entire dependence on God and unworthy of His blessings. With words he said, "I thank thee," when, in reality, he was telling God how remarkably good he thought himself. He was praying "with himself," not to God in humility. He even stood not as merely a proper attitude of prayer, but as posing for effect, to make an impression. He was looking around and wondering what was thought of him. Even in his prayer he saw the poor Publican and contrasted himself as he saw himself with that Publican as he thought him to be. His boast in three separate counts, was first, that he had not done any harm to his fellowmen, by fraud, force or fornication, second, that he was very religious, in fasting and paying tithes, enough, as he thought to put God under obligation, and third, that he was better than all other men, especially this Publican.

"The other a Publican," was not religious with any cant or religiosity, but he really worshipped, praying in the temple. He stood afar off, as if conscious of the dislike of all to his calling and the haughty disdain with which the Pharisee, and those who felt as he did, despised him. Then, too, he was very sensible of sin and felt unworthy to press close to the altar and the holy place. His prayer was personal. He forgot all else and cried, "God be merciful to me." His prayer was humble and penitent, confessing himself a sinner, and full of pathetic pleading for himself the sinner. There was petition in his prayer. He did not utter general and vague desires or deal in meaningless vaporings, but presented a petition. He asked God for something definite. That is the essential element of real praying, the very vital intention of true prayer. He based his desire and expectation to be heard on the propitiatory sacrifice offered on the altar. "Be merciful" means, look on the sacrifice offered on my behalf and on that account grant me thy mercy, even the forgiveness of sins and "thy favor which is life."

If man, human, were asked to choose between these "two men," from their appearance in the temple which was to be respected, admired and blessed, the choice would be in all probability the Pharisee. But the choice would have been incorrect. Our Lord Jesus Christ who knew the heart and describes these two men from that point of view, gives the right judgment between the two. "This man (the publican) went down to his house justified rather than the other (the pharisee)." That is God pardoned and accepted the publican as righteous in his sight, through His mercy ministered on the ground of propitiation. The pharisee trusted in himself that he was righteous and despised others, even this publican. The publican trusted in God and sought acceptance by the sacrifice offered. This latter was accepted with God. The judgment of God is just, and His mercy is ministered only as His justice is satisfied. This puts to shame all self-trust, or self-righteousness. This makes the sinner who is broken-hearted with penitence for his sin and looks to the merit of the atonement provided in the sacrifice of Christ safe and encourages all sinners to come to Christ for salvation.

"Not the righteous, not the righteous, Sinners Jesus came to save."

Let not the self-righteous think to be saved or that they can put God under obligation to accept their worship or offerings because of their goodness. Let not the sinner despair, neither let any one hesitate to come to Christ because of feeling unworthy to come. "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Whosoever comes and cries as did the publican, "God be merciful to me a sinner," will be justified. Hear Him say: "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

IT IS STRANGE how far and how deep good men can be led off into lines of error and that too in the sacred name of charity. Here is a case of a Christian congregation offering the use of their church, to a Hebrew congregation for purposes of worship—against which we here have naught to say—and its acceptance as an acknowledgment that Jew and Christian stand alike before God. Against this which is bepraised as "broadminded," we have this to say that if it really means that those who deny Christ and reject the New Testament Scriptures stand on the same spiritual plane with those who take Him as their Lord and Saviour and believe there is no salvation in any other—the whole action is a most impious insult to common sense. The praise of the world leads men to do many things as wicked as they are strange.

Unity! Christian unity! To some people there seems to be a charm in this words that carries them beyond the bounds of all right reason. These are willing to lug in every conceivable form of error if only it comes in the name of religion. Now it is proposed to have at Nashville a sort of reproduction of the Parliament of Religions —of which it might be supposed we have had full enough—and Rev. B. Fay Mills is to be a prominent representative of the Christian system. Mr. Mills is a duly accredited Presbyterian minister. He claims also, we believe, to be a member of a Congregational church, and yet he has been preaching in Unitarian pulpits rank Unitarianism. He has cut loose from his moorings; in the language of the day he has broadened. And so we are led on to note how prone are men not under strict ecclesiastical control to stray into error. Mr. Mills is an evangelist. He has been most successful and for a long time followed strictly orthodox methods, but whether led astray by the love of applause, or swerved from the straight channel by the offsetting current of sensationalism no one seems prepared to say. He is preaching now it is said the Gospel of progress. And nearer home we have faith healing and anointing and all sorts of sensational teachings and devices in lieu of the plain, simple preaching of the Gospel of Christ. With what a sense of relief one turns away from all this to those who, obeying their Lord, stand in the ways and follow the old paths and themselves walking therein, lead others to find rest to their soule.

GENERAL NEAL DOW, the great Prohibition leader, whose name will go down as one of the greatest benefactors of the race, died at his residence in Portland, Me., on the afternoon of Friday last, after a week's illness. He was born in Portland, March 20th, 1804. His labors, in behalf of temperance mainly, have lifted Maine from a wofully low state to a position of prosperity scarcely surpassed by any State in the Union and saved tens—rather hundreds of thousands—from the dire evils resulting from the liquor habit. Individuals and families, everywhere have cause to rise up and thank God for what Neal Dow was enabled to do.

We clip from the telegraph dispatches:

"An appreciative writer said a few days ago that Neal Dow would die with the assurance that in the matter of prohibition he had 'touched the button,' leaving posterity to 'do the rest.' The expression is apt. Gen. Dow was the father of the Maine prohibition law. It may be that the law is evaded, but it is upon the statute books and will remain there; and Neal Dow put it it there. Gen. Dow was a soldier, but his fame rests upon his temperance work. He has been heard in probably every State of the union upon the rostrum in advocacy of the temperance cause, and he made three trips to England at the special invitation of the Temperance Alliance of the United Kingdom."

Neal Dow fought gallantly on the Federal side in the late war, and was honored by people after that time with the mayoralty of his native city.

PRINCETON INN—the Princeton grogshop—found numerous defenders among the alumni of Princeton University. It was said there was "no bar"—only an eating house with beer for "trimmings." The correspondent of the Voice pays his respects to the Inn and its defenders in showing that it really and truly is "a death-trap for students"—nothing more nor less than a liquor shop of the very worst kind. We have not space at command for more just now, but may enlighten the public further next week.

WE WOULD be glad to pass over the matter of divergence from our Standards by Rev. Dr. Houston, so honored and beloved by our Church, but the case is in such shape now that we feel we must present it to the readers of this paper. More than once since July, 1895, Dr. Houston has informed Louisville Presbytery of his disagreement on certain points with the accepted doctrines of the Presbyterian Church, and the Presbytery enjoined him not to teach the views he holds and to meet the court this fall in conference. Our missionaries in China assembled in conference also asked Dr. Houston to meet the Presbytery for a discussion of the points of difference. The Presbytery which met on 7th ult, heard Dr. Houston fully and a committee was duly appointed on the matter. No more than this we think is necessary, by way of introduction.

The committee reported as follows:

The committee appointed to consider what action should be taken by the Presbytery in regard to the views submitted by Rev. M. H. Houston, D. D., in his letters of 1895, and October 19th, 1896, and in his oral and written statements before the Presbytery, would make the following report:

Dr. Houston's views fall into two classes, viz:

First—Those which relate chiefly to order.

Second—That which relates to doctrine.

1. In respect to order he holds and teaches:

(a.) That the Lord's Supper is a household as well as a church ordinance; as household ordinance it may be administered by the head of a Christian family in the home; and as a church ordinance it may be administered by a private member of the church. The committee regards these views and practices as inconsistent with the Confession of Faith, chapter 27, section 4, which says respecting the sacraments: "Neither of which may be dispensed by any but by a minister of the Word, lawfully ordained;" inconsistent also with the Book of Church Order, paragraph 35, where in speaking of the minister of the Word it is said that "as he dispenses the ordinances instituted by Christ, he is termed steward of the mysteries of God" (see also paragraph 33); inconsistent also with the Confession of Faith, chapter 29, and the Directory of Worship, chapter 11, from both of which it is clear that the Lord's Supper is a church ordinance and to be administered by an ordained minister.

(b.) That there is no valid distinction between teaching and ruling elders, and that every ruling elder is a minister or pastor, and may perform all the functions assigned by our Book of Church Order to the minister or pastor. This is plainly contrary to our Book, and it is necessary to cite only one passage, paragraph 33. "The ordinary and perpetual officers in the Church are teaching elders or ministers of the Word, who are commissioned to preach the Gospel, and administer the sacraments and also to rule; ruling elders, whose office it is to wait on government; and deacons."

(c.) That unmarried women (widows and virgins) may pray and prophesy—that is, speak and expound the Scriptures in church assemblies made up of both sexes. This the committee believes to be inconsistent with the teachings of the Directory of Worship, in chapters 2, 3, 5, 6, 8; and this interpretation is sustained by the General Assembly in its action taken at Charlotte on this subject. See Minutes of the General Assembly for 1897, page 16.

In these several matters it is clear that the practices to which Dr. Houston's teachings lead would tend to subvert the fixed order of the Church, and the Committee recommends that the Presbytery enjoin upon Dr. Houston that he refrain from these practices, and that he do not allow such practices among those to whom he ministers and over whom he has authority.

2. Dr. Houston, in written and oral statements, has presented a theory of sanctification, which differs in certain particulars from the confessional doctrine. After most diligent endeavors, the committee confesses itself unable to give a definite conception of Dr. Houston's theory. So far as the committee understands Dr. Houston's views, they appear to be divergent from the Standards and the Scriptures; but in consequence of our inability to discover as yet the precise extent of the divergence, and in the exercise of a charitable judgment, we are unwilling at present to advise the institution of judicial proceedings. The Presbytery, however, expresses the opinion that Dr. Houston's views involve dangerous tendencies, and we require him to observe great caution in respect to the teaching of his doctrine of sanctification. It is the hope of the Presbytery that further study and prayer will bring our brother into complete accord with our Standards.

Respectfully submitted.

J. S. LYONS,
Chairman.

Dr. Houston presented in reply a paper which was not satisfactory to Presbytery and by leave he withdrew it. Afterwards he gave notice of complaint to the Synod of Kentucky against the action of Presbytery.

The following from the Christian Observer report brings an account of the proceedings up to date:

Presbytery met at the First church, Louisville, September 21st, Dr. F. B. Converse in the chair, and Mr. H. W. Hunter, Clerk.

Dr. Houston withdrew the "complaint" to Synod of which he had given notice at the previous session, and which he had lodged with the Stated Clerk, and he presented in its stead the following "statement:"

I respectfully request that the following statement be admitted to record in answer to the action taken by Louisville Presbytery in my case, September 9th, 1897:

First—In the matters of the administration of the Lord's Supper and the prophesying of women in the church, I submitted to my brethren of the Presbytery clear evidence, as I believe, from God's word as to what the practice of the Church should be. I was prepared to submit also evidence from God's Word as to what should be the practice of the Church in regard to the functions of elders or pastors. Though the evidence was from God's Word, the Presbytery did not discuss it, nor pronounce on it, in the light of God's Word. They condemned the practices solely on the ground of their being inconsistent with the Standards and the Order of our Church. In this, I hold that the Presbytery erred. "The Supreme Judge, by whom all controversies of religion are to be determined, can be no other but the Holy Spirit speaking in the Scripture." (Confession of Faith, chapters I. and X.) The Word of God, which is contained in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, is the only rule to direct how we may glorify and enjoy God" (Shorter Catechism, Q. 2). "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." (Isa. 8:20.)

Second—I was sent to the United States by the China Mission, for the purpose of laying before the Louisville Presbytery the views of Scripture which lead to the practices above referred to. Members of the mission were troubled in spirit lest the teaching of our Standards on these matters should be found not to agree with the teaching of the Holy Spirit in the Scriptures. The mission, therefore, in a letter which they submitted to the Presbytery, declared that "though none of us are desiring to depart from the Standards, neither are we wishing to be found among those who tempt God, or resist his Spirit in the conversion of the Chinese." They said, therefore, in substance, that they sent me, with the Rev. J. L. Stuart, to assist in the matter, as Paul and Barnasbas were sent to the first council in Jerusalem when a difficult question had arisen in the mission field. The council, after a full discussion of the teaching of the Holy Spirit in the Scriptures, returned answer that "it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us." It was such an answer as this that the China Mission desired. But the Presbytery did not discuss the matter to ascertain what the teaching of the Holy Spirit in the Scripture is, neither did they return answer that it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to them. They merely returned answer as to what the Standards of the Church teach. In this matter the Presbytery did not follow the Scriptural example brought before them by the China Mission, nor did they meet the hope entertained by the mission in sending me to this country.

Third—In view of many unscriptural and misleading theories of sanctification that are now being spread through the land, I accept with profound sympathy the requirement of the Presbytery that great caution be observed in preaching this doctrine. I believe, however, that the best method for combating error is to meet it with clearly-defined Scriptural truth; and that all who come after us may judge whether the doctrine of sanctification which I preach is clear, definite, safe and life-giving, according to God's Word, I append hereto a succinct statement of this doctrine.

This was considered in committee of the whole and was then referred to a special committee consisting of Dr. Hemphill, Dr. Lyons, Rev. J. C. Molloy and Mr. H. W. Hunter. It report, after amendment, was adopted, and is as follows:

The committee appointed to frame a statement to be spread on the records of the Presbytery covering the objections presented in Dr. Houston's statement would make the following report:

The Presbytery directs particular attention to the fact that Dr. Houston was not before the Presbytery in the capacity of a representative of the China Mission commissioned to make certain inquiries of the Presbytery, but in the character of minister of the Presbytery whose views and practices were subjects of investigation. Accordingly, the action of the Presbytery was based upon Dr. Houston's oral and written statements and not upon the communication from the China Mission. After the action regarding Dr. Houston was taken, the Presbytery took from the docket the communication from the China Mission, and believing that the views of the Presbytery on the matters embraced in it were clearly expressed in the paper already adopted, it directed that a copy of this paper be forwarded to the China Mission as an answer to their communication. Notwithstanding Dr. Houston's criticism, the Presbytery is of the opinion that the members of the China Mission will find this answer ample and sustained by satisfactory reasons.

In respect to the objection that the Presbytery has treated Dr. Houston's views and practices in their relation to the Standards rather than the Scriptures, it is sufficient to say that the Presbytery has proceeded on the affirmation found in paragraph 152 of the Book of Church Order, viz., "The Confession of Faith and the Larger and Shorter Catechisms of the Westminster Asrembly, together with the formularies of government, discipline and worship, are accepted by the Presbyterian Church in the United States as standard expositions of the teachings of the Scripture in relations to both faith and practice."

Touching the third paragraph, which relates to the doctrine of sanctification, the Presbytery contents itself with affirming anew its action on this subject, and with declaring that it expects Dr. Houston to abide by the action of the Presbytery.

Presbytery adjourned to meet at Bardstown during the sessions of Synod, at the call of the moderator.

THE LIFE OF DR. McREE.*

SKETCH BY REV. R. F. CAMPBELL, D. D.

GIVEN ON THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE DEDICATION BY DR. McREE OF THE SWANNANOA PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The interesting sketch of the life of Dr. James McRee; given by Rev. R. F. Campbell, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Asheville, on the occasion of the celebration of the anniversary of Swannanoa Presbyterian church, Wednesday, [Sept. 8th,] was, in full, as follows;

In the year 1730 two brothers bearing the patronymic McRee, emigrated from County Down, Ireland, and settled in North Carolina. One of them, content to cease his wanderings when he reached the shores of the new world, made his home near Wilmington. The other, possessing, perhaps, a more enterprising and adventurous spirit, pushed on to the Piedmont region of the State, and settled in Iredell county. It was here that his son, James McRee, the subject of this sketch, was born on the 10th day of May, 1752. His father, having the high appreciation of education so characteristic of the Scotch-Irish, sent him to the College of New Jersey at Princeton, where he entered the junior class in 1773 at the age of 21, and whence he was graduated two years later. He studied theology at Bullock's Creek, S. C., under the direction of the Rev. Joseph Alexander, D. D., a man of fine talents and accomplishments and a teacher of great reputation through the Carolinas, as well as a preacher of uncommon power and popular gifts. The teaching and preaching of such a man could not fail to make indelible impression upon the mind and heart of the young divinity student, and there can be no doubt that James McRee owed much of his success in the ministry to the influence of Dr. Alexander.

In those days there were no theological seminaries, unless such men as Dr. Alexander may be considered as having constituted within themselves epitomized seminaries. It was probably out of a sense of the debt he owed to Dr. Alexander's instruction, that Dr. McRee afterwards received young men under his own direction as students for the Gospel ministry.

In April, 1788, James McRee was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Orange, and soon thereafter received and accepted a call to become the pastor of the Steele Creek congregation in Mecklenburg county. Those were the days of long pastorates, and Mr. McRee was content to spend twenty years with this, his first charge. Doubtless much of the staid character, solid intelligence and pure Presbyterianism of the Steele Creek community of to-day could be traced back to the influence of James McRee. The same remark might be made in regard to Centre church, thirty miles north of Steele Creek, where his next pastorate extended over a period of thirty years.

In 1810 Mr. McRee received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from the University of North Carolina. About the year 1830, just when I have not been able to find out, Dr. McRee crossed the Blue Ridge mountains and became pastor of Piney Grove or Swannanoa church. How long he served this church I do not know, but on the 8th day of September, 1839, just 58 years ago to-day—he dedicated to the worship of God the frame building that stands at the foot of this knoll, which was the second edifice erected by this congregation, the first having stood on a hill about two miles west of the present building near what is known as Berea Baptist church.

Dr. McRee married Miss Rachel Cruser of Staten Island, New York, who survived him, living to the remarkable age of 95 years. They had three sons, Abram C., James and Hamilton; and three daughters, who became the wives respectively of Samuel Davidson, Joseph Gudger and Daniel Smith.

Mr. A. C. McRee of Lowndesboro, Ala., son of Abram C., and grandson of James McRee, says in a letter to his kinsman, Mr. Samuel W. Davidson of this community; "I have heard my father say that grandfather preached 69 years of his life. I have one of his sermons preached on the occasion of a Fourth of July celebration at Charlotte in 1785. I have also some of his old books, among them Scott's Family Bible. His watch, an old silver piece, is still an heirloom."

Several weeks ago I wrote to Mr. McRee to send me this sermon by express, and it was my intention to read extracts from it on this occasion. But I have heard nothing from him, and have concluded that he valued the manuscript too highly to allow it to take the trip, at which I do not wonder.

The Presbyterian Encyclopedia says: "Dr. McRee was dignified in the pulpit, fluent in delivery, and a most popular preacher." The Rev. W. W. Pharr, D. D., pastor of Centre church, writes: "I often heard him spoken of by some of the old people when I first came to Centre, but those old people are all gone. They spoke of him as an able preacher. They also spoke of him as always neat and fastidious in his dress. He was a good talker and paid much attention to the rules of etiquette."

Col. A. T. Davidson told me he had often heard his mother speak of Dr. McRee as a man of great ability and of fine gifts as a preacher. She also spoke of his meeting death with great calmness and with perfect trust in his Saviour.

I have heard two anecdotes of Dr. McRee, one illustrating his Scotch-Irish caution, and the other his absorption in the office of devotion.

He used to drive a gig of a very old-fashioned pattern. In visiting his people, whenever he went to a house he always had his horse unhitched, even if he did not expect to stay more than a few minutes. When asked why he did so, he replied (with what, I suppose, we might call horse sense), "Buck never told me that he would never run away."

The other story is told by one of his grandsons and illustrates the old minister's piety and also the prominence given to family worship in those days.

It was his habit to gather the members of the household about the family altar morning and evening. So devout was the old man's spirit that these precious exercises would often be extended to half an hour or more, and were especially long on the Sabbath days. One Sunday morning whilst the family were on their knees, this grandson heard the hounds giving forth the music of the chase—the sweetest of all music to the ears of a young Nimrod. He struggled against the promptings of the flesh as long as he could, but finally, unable longer to resist the temptation, he rose quietly from his knees, tipped as noiselessly as he could from the room, seized his gun and ran in the direction of the hounds. He hadn't gone far before a deer bounded into view. He raised his gun, shot the deer, and returned to the house to find the family still on their knees. He crept quietly to his place, knelt as reverently as ever, and rose with the rest without their having discovered that he had left the room.

Dr. McRee died on the 28th day of March, 1840, and his sacred dust, along with that of his kinsmen who have followed him to man's long home, sleeps here in the old graveyard under these sentinel pines; and from his silent tomb has issued the call that brings together to-day his descendants and theirs to do honor to the good man's memory and to join hands over the hallowed graves of the godly ancestors whose worship made the spot whereon we stand holy ground.

OUR LITTLE FRIENDS IN CHINA.

Shanghai, Aug. 7th, 1897.

My Dear Little Friend Eugenia Fore:

It is near three months since the date of your letter (May 19th), and more than a month since I received it. But a few days before it came I began a letter in reply—telling about a trip we had, and when your letter came then I knew who the little girl was for whom I had been writing

We have a little missionary here just your age, my little niece Josey Woods, and she went with us on this trip, and so when your letter came I told her how diligent and punctual you had been at school, she was very much interested.

Josey has a little sister three years old named Lily and I have three babies, the oldest of my flock Mary is four and then Josey's little brother Samuel is five. So these three little cousins Samuel, Mary and Lily, with three other little girls their age play together a great deal, but Josey has no one her own age to play with. Henry her oldest brother is thirteen and he is a great big boy and doesn't care about playing with dolls. Henry likes to play baseball and soldier, and he spends a great deal of time with his pets. The favorite just now is a blackbird which can talk like a parrot and whistle like a mocking bird. This strange bird was quite tame and flew into Henry's window. He enticed it in with some food and put it in a cage; afterwards when the Chinese owner came for it, he bought it for 30 or 40 cents.

Now I must tell you about our trip, for that will give you some idea how we do missionary work. Our party consisted of Mary who is four and Josey who is ten, three big missionaries and a Chinese woman.

We mounted wheelbarrows at Mrs. Graham's back gate. Pillows and quilts made the barrows endurable for they have no springs and the roads are rough.

We went a little over two miles along a much frequented road. We met and passed all sorts of people. Some riding donkeys, some mounted on small horses, others on wheelbarrows like ourselves, but most of them walking and many of them carrying bundles on poles across their shoulders. An old woman by the roadside sold refreshments, tea and a smoke of tobacco. I asked her if she was getting rich to which she assented.

We followed the path down to the Yellow River, or all that is left of it since it changed its course some thirty or forty years ago. We crossed in a little ferry boat which is half as long as the stream is wide. Every one crossing the ferry pays cash, the tenth part of a cent.

The object of our journey was to visit a young man who is Mrs. McCormick's teacher. His family live at this small town, and we never before had had an invitation to visit it, so we were very glad to go.

When we got across the river there was the young teacher to welcome us and conduct us to his home. His house was built of mud, with earth floor and thatched roof. The plan was very simple. A tiny yard or court, this humble, but neatly built house filling one side. The house had one sitting-room in the middle with a bed-room on either side opening into it. Two families lived there. A shed outside served as kitchen. The inside of the house and the partitions were all covered with course matting and the ceiling the same.

When we entered the yard the wife met us and greeted us kindly. She had rather a sad face. Afterwards we learned that she had lost three little children.

There was one baby left to them, a plump little girl of five months. She was dressed in a pink flowered coat and yellow flowered pants, and her name, what do you think it was? Saucepan! The neighbors began to crowd in, and such numbers of children! They all wanted to see us and many of the nicer women came in and had a chat. We were served to a very nice dinner, and felt that we had made some impression on the neighbors.

While we were waiting for the dinner to be cooked I took a little stroll outside with the two girls hoping to divide the attentions of the crowd and give Mrs. Graham a better chance to preach, but it only attracted more people, and when we came back we had nearly the whole village at our heels. We were very tired when we got home after a day of it.

Thank you so much for writing to me. I hope you will each take turns in writing me, and think of me as your own friend.

Very lovingly yours,
FRANCES WOODS.

WHY HE QUIT.

A professional gentleman, who was accustomed to take his morning glass, stepped into a saloon, and, going up to the bar, called for whiskey. A seedy individual stepped up to him and said:

"I say 'squire, can't you ask an unfortunate fellow to join you?"

He was annoyed at the man's familiarity, and roughly told him:

"I am not in the habit of drinking with tramps.

The tramp replied:

"You needn't be so cranky and high-minded, my friend. I venture to say that I am of just as good family as you are, have just as good an education, and before I took to drink was just as respectable as you are. What is more, I always knew how to act the gentleman. Take my word for it, you stick to John Barleycorn and he will bring you to just the same place I am."

Struck with his words, the gentleman set down his glass and turned to look at him. His eyes were blood shot, his face bloated, his boots mismated, his clothing filthy. "Then was it drinking that made you like this?"

"Yes, it was and it will bring you to the same if you stick to it."

Picking up his untouched glass, he poured the contents upon the floor and said:

"Then it's time I quit," and left the saloon never to enter it again.—Classmate.

GOOD MANNERS AND GOOD MORALS.

Good manners are a part of good morals. We all acknowledge the truth of the trite saying that true politeness comes from the heart, and that it is only the outward and visible sign of that inward grace which makes us give up in small things to the comfort of others. The polite person must always be more popular and give more pleasure to others than the rough and boorish one. A little courtesy costs nothing but a little thought, and it makes the wheels of society move vastly more smoothly. We do not mean that the form of good manners should take the place of reality, but unselfishness can be cultivated, and with its growth naturally comes politeness.—Ex.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for October will contain a contribution to the new psychology, under the title The Psychology of Belief. W. B. Parker, the author, a former pupil of Prof. James, of Harvard, treats this somewhat difficult subject in a clear and comprehensive manner, claiming that belief is just as much an essential in the human organism as is breathing or any of the other vital processes, and showing that alcohol in common with the other stimulants is a direct encourager of it.

Lady Marjorie Gordon, daughter of Lord Aberdeen, is the editor of Wee Willie Winkle, a juvenile magazine, and has just received from Mr. Kippling the following contribution:

"There was once a small boy of Quebec,
Who was buried in snow to his neck.
When asked: Are you friz?'
He replied: 'Yes, I is,
But we don't call this cold in Quebec.'"

Dr. Weir Mitchell, whose novel "Hugh Wynne," proved to be one of the most successful serials The Century has printed, has written another novel that will appear in this magazine during the coming year. It is called "The Adventures of Francois; Foundling, Adventurer, Juggler, Fencing-Master, and Servant during the French Revolution." The scene of the story shifts from Paris to the provinces and back again, following the wanderings of the eccentric hero, who participates in many of the thrilling scenes of the Revolution. Andre Castaigne, the French-American artist, will illustrate the novel.

"Anthony Hope" will lecture in America during the month of October, November and December, returning to England in January when his story "Simon Dale" will probably appear in book form.

Yet Speaking. A collection of addresses of A. J. Gordon, D. D., the late lamented pastor of the Clarendon Street Baptist church, Boston, is published by Fleming H. Revell Co., New York, at fifty cents, in cloth. In one hundred and fifty pages there is not one that is dull or unimportant. The preface is happily written by his wife, so long his helpmeet indeed.

What A Young Boy Ought to Know, by Sylvanus Stall, D. D., Philadelphia. The Vir Publishing Co. Price $1 net. This volume of 190 pages is well written, and chaste in dealing with the problem of training boys to personal purity and giving them judicious and needed information as to their bodies and organs. The author discusses his subject wisely and well and makes such a book as all parents ought to own and use.

"It has been read and is commended in highest terms by such persons as Drs. Theodore L. Cuyler, Joseph Cook, Josiah Strong, Bishop Vincent, Anthony Comstock, John Willis Baer, Mrs. Alice Lee Moque, Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, Dr. Kate Waller Barrett and many other equally prominent persons."

Manual of Bible Morality, by Shaler G. Hillyer, D. D. B. F. Johnson Publishing Co., Richmond, Va. Cloth. pp. 224 This text book for schools by a prominent educator is meant to supply as far as possible the demand for a book to be used in our public schools which forbid for sectarian objections the use of the Bible. Dr. Hillyer has been for more than forty years a practical teacher and for nearly twelve a professor in Mercer University. Dr. Noah K. Davis attributes to him most of the value of his student life.

The author gives an exposition of the Ten Commandments, clear and helpful and thereby puts the world of teachers and especially of our South land under obligation. The book is well written and will do much important service for morality as the Bible teaches it in the Decalogue wherever used. We commend it to our public and private school teachers.

The pastors of sister denominations sent letters of congratulation and Rev. J. B. Morton delivered an eloquent address, on Christian Unity.

Resolutions presented by Mr. John Webb were unanimously adopted expressing unbounded delight and gratitude that all debts, claims and obligations of any kinds against the church had beendischarged and cancelled; thanking Rev. Robert I. Devin for his kindnesses and Christian charity which enabled them to bear the burden of debt on the church so long and at so low a rate of interest; especially expressing appreciation of the helpfulness of the Ladies' Aid Society, and of a member who had assumed a large proportion of the debt; and Mr. Geo. W. Watts for a handsome donation and promise of more if necessary; to Rev. A. S. Caldwell, the pastor, and to Rev. J. B. Morton for their efforts and aid in raising the debt and finally and above all it was resolved that "we would render our profound gratitude and praise to our Heavenly Father for His great goodness and grace; whose leading, helpful hand has brought us to this happy hour."

A very cheering article appeared recently in the Outlook in which the writer showed the steady and distinct increase in contributions by American churches toward missionary work. In 1820 the total contribution amounted to $40,000; in 1840 it had risen to $859,600; in 1860 to $2,481,400, in 1880 to $7,669,900; and in 1890 it stood at $18,888,700. These figures relate to 14 leading denominations and the American Tract Society.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES FOR SEPTEMBER.

The month has been a most prosperous one for our Home Mission work. Rev. William Black has been engaged in work in Asheville Presbytery, and has held two meetings, at Davidson River and at Inanda There were twelve additions to Davidson River church and six or eight at Brevard, besides additions to the Methodist and Baptist churches. At Inanda, a mission point of Oak Forest church, there were twenty professions of faith, and it is possible that this may become a separate organization.

Rev. L. A. McLaurin has organized the First Presbyterian church in Yancey county, at South Toe, with twenty-three members. Several others are waiting to receive their letters of dismission to the new church. There is a flourishing school there also.

Rev. Edgar Tufts reports the building at Pineola ready for use and there is a self-supporting school with great promise of usefulness at this point. He expects to organize a church there in the spring. There have been several additions to Cove Creek church. These points are in Wautauga county.

Messrs. Gillespie, Wharton and Grey have been most active and zealous. Mr. Wharton has returned to the Seminary and the other two brethren have selected sixteen of the most promising points for regular supply during the year. During special services held there were thirty-eight who professed faith in Christ and the First Presbyterian church in Ashe county will soon be organized A good subscription has already been raised for the building.

The Superintendent has visited the churches of Laurinburg, Laurel Hill, Salisbury, Mooresville and Center, held two meetings, at Laurinburg and Spencer, secured a petition, which has been granted by Concord Presbytery, for the organization of a church at Spencer, which will be grouped with China Grove, thus forming a new field, and has secured $1,120 00 in cash and subscriptions for the support of the work.

FOREIGN MISSION RECEIPTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

The receipts for Foreign Missions during September were $3,006.96, being a loss, compared with the same month last year, of $1,970.34. The increasing needs of the work, its growth and importance, the condition of the heathen who daily perish in great numbers, and sink into Christless, hopeless graves, are all urgent reasons for rallying to the support of this great cause. "The love of Christ constraineth us."

NOTICE.

On account of the quarantine, caused by yellow fever, and in accordance with the request of the session of the church and people of Marshall, Texas, and the advice of the health officer of that city, the meeting of the Synod of Texas is hereby postponed, to meet in Marshall, Texas, December 2d, at 7.30 p. m. RED SPRINGS SEMINARY.

The remarkable success of this college for girls has been a continual wonder to every one acquainted with it. Under the efficient management of its energetic President, Rev. C. G. Vardell, and his accomplished wife, who is musical director, aided by a full and able corps of teachers, this seminary has taken its stand among the very first of our colleges for girls. Depending upon its merits and the advantages offered to draw patronage, its halls were filled the first year with 112 students The second year opened Sept. 15th with 125 students, and the prospects are good for 150 before the end of the year. Though seventy-five boarding students can be accommodated in the college buildings, these are already full.

Among the influences that have led to these unprecedented results are: 1. The manifest blessing of God, for whose glory it was founded by Fayetteville Presbytery. 2. The thorough training given, physical, intellectual, and spiritual. The very low cost; $125 pays for board, tuition, contingent fee, medical fee and washing, while music or painting is only $30 extra. The property is held for the Presbytery by a Board of Trustees. The teachers are all employed on a regular salary, and the profits, if any go towards building up the school.

But one shadow comes in, to mar this bright picture. In order to offer these advantages at so small a cost, the buildings and equipment must be furnished This has involved a large indebtedness on the part of the Presbytery. The need is great. The call of the Master, whose work is threatened, is urgent upon every member of the Church, and every one interested in Christian education, to come at once to the aid of this institution which promises to be such a mighty power in the building up of Christ's kingdom.

To the members of Fayetteville Presbytery especially, and to the friends of the Seminary everywhere, in the name of the Seminary and the Saviour for whose glory it was founded. I most earnestly entreat you not to wait for a personal solicitation for aid, but send at once or as soon as possible your contribution to,

NOTES FROM LOUISVILLE SEMINARY.

The fifth session of the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary began on Friday, October the 1st, 1897. There were thirty-one men on the grounds. We are expecting only about fifteen more, for owing to the recently established policy of our Board of Directors, in regard to the Student's Aid Fund, we shall not have so large a number of men as formerly. Last session we had sixty-seven men in roll.

Our opening exercises will be held at the First Presbyterian church, on Monday, October 4th, 1 p. m. The Rev. William Hoge Marquess, D. D., will make the address to the students today.

The Seminary address is 105 East Broadway. We shall be glad to give information in regard to the workings of our Seminary to any who may be interested. We ask the prayers and cooperation of all of God's people that we, the young men of this Seminary, may be thoroughly furnished in every way for the great work of life, to which we believe the Lord has called us.

THE COLLECTION FOR THE BIBLE CAUSE.

The pressing needs of the American Bible Society at this time, coupled with the great and increasing importance of its work, call for the earnest consideration and liberal contributions of all our churches. I therefore urge the pastors and sessions to see that the cause be duly presented and the people encouraged to contribute to it. The third Sabbath in October, it will be remembered, is the time specially named by the General Assembly for this collection.

Documents furnishing information concerning the work, and envelopes for the collection will be mailed freely to such as request them.

TESTIMONIAL OF ESTEEM.

The session of the Second Presbyterian church, Charlotte, N. C., having lost through death, under the appointment of God, a much lamented fellow-elder do set forth the following as a slight testimonial of their esteem for him, and high appreciation of his worth and service:

Realizing, as we do, the importance of the office of ruling elder and the stringent qualifications the Word of God requires of those who fill the office, we as a session bear testimony to the efficiency and faithfulness of the late Jno. E. Oates.

We believe the consciousness of having nothing that he had not received, of having received nothing for his very own, to be used according to his own will, the ever present sense of obligation to administer his Master's goods, as He would, and for His purposes, was clear and active in him. Religion with him was not a thing of magnitude, but of quality. Right was right, and wrong was wrong, as really in a small matter as in a great affair. When right and wrong were involved he knew neither friend nor foe. Amid all the various influences of his official life he maintained with singleness of heart and undistracted accuracy of eye the truth of God.

He was verily a man known for his sterling worth and devotion to his Lord. Many offices of importance in the Church he was called to fill, that he was faithful to every trust committed to him, is the testimony of his brethren. In his every act he showed that he dearly loved the Second Presbyterian church, his counsel was always given in love, so keenly alive was he to the interest of Zion that on him we learned to depend. Well may we say of him as was said of David, "Thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty." He was indeed an ensample to the flock over which God had set him as overseer.

Nothing save the severest sickness ever caused him to absent himself from the house of God. His child-like faith in the Great Book and the influence of its teachings in his life made him one, of whom it could be said, "he has been with Jesus and learned of him. His faithfulness in the church and in his dealings with men convinced all that he had great faith in God, for men know that real steadfastness and godly fidelity, like good works, imply and presuppose belief and trust in God, and in whomsoever there is genuine faith in relation to the Gospel and the God of the Gospel there will be true faithfulness.

One of the plainest duties of stewardship is that we bring conscience and deliberate consideration to bear upon our administration of this world's goods. This man was faithful in that he spent not according to his own whim and fancy, and let his giving depend not as it so often does, on little better than accident or habit. In all that he handled and in all that he spent he caused equally to pass under the inspection of deliberate conscience. With him stewardship meant deliberation, and intelligent consideration, and conscientious disposal and administration as of a fund that was not his, but put into his hand.

He saw that love and sympathy and beneficence, patience, courage, dauntless devotion, could find ampler training and nobler opportunity of exercise no where better than in the war with evil, nor faith a richer culture, or hope a more entrancing aim, than in that victory over sin and sorrow and death, which if Christianity be true, is one day to crown the strife of ages. He lived for this. He found his dearest work here. He let love to God and man be the animating principle of his being, confident that death, come when it would, and carry him where it would, he would not be unprepared for it; knowing that the rending of the veil which hides the secrets of the unseen world, the summons that would call him into regions unknown, need awaken in his breast no pertubation or dismay, for he could not, in God's universe, go where love and truth and self-devotion are things of nought, or where a soul filled with undying faith in the progress, and identifying its own happiness with the final triumph of goodness, shall find itself forsaken.

PRESBYTERY OF ABINGDON.

The Presbytery of Abingdon met in Draper's Valley, Va., Sept. 7th, 1897, at 8 o'clock p. m. The opening sermon by Rev. R. E. Henderlite, moderator. The attendance both of ministers and elders was unusually good. Rev. T. A. Wharton was made moderator. Rev. J. E. Wood and Elder T. L. Tate were appointed temporary clerks.

Rev. J. R. Crews was excused from attendance at this meeting and Rev. I. N. Naff directed to write him a letter expressive of the sympathy felt for him by Presbytery in his long affliction. The pastoral relation between Rev. S. T. Martin and the church of Newbern, Va., was dissolved. Orders were made for the organization of new churches at Stonega, Scott county, Va., and at Cook, Carroll county, Va.

Reports were heard from all the various communities of church enterprise, such as Education, Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Bible Cause and Colored Evangelization and were all encouraging except the latter two. Almost nothing has been done for the Bible Cause and comparatively little for Colored Evangelivation. However, measures have been devised and recommendations adopted which it is hoped will prove effective in both these departments.

There are eight candidates under the care of Presbytery, three in their senior year and the other five pursuing their studies in one or other of the classes of the seminary. There are two Synodical evangelists laboring within our bounds, and five others laboring as a whole or in part as home missionaries in our destitute regions. There are two missionaries in the foreign field from this Presbytery, viz., the Rev. G. W. Painter and Miss Blanch Dunlap. Contributions to this great cause are greater than ever before and a lively interest was manifested especially in this cause.

The report on the Minutes of the General Assembly called attention to all its enactments and recommended the approval and adoption of them by Presbytery.

The prospects for future prosperity and success were encouraging throughout.

In view of his great age and declining years, the Rev. I.N. Naff was made stated clerk, emeritus. Rev. G. H. Gilmer was elected unanimously as the acting stated clerk.

Marion, Va., was selected as the place for the next stated meeting of Presbytery. The time fixed for Tuesday after the last Thursday in April next, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Presbytery adjourned to meet at the call of the moderator, during the meeting of the Synod of Virginia in Fredericksburg, Va.

THE NEED OF REST.

Do not devote all your time to action, but reserve a certain portion of it for meditation upon eternity. We see Jesus Christ inviting his disciples to go apart, in a desert place, and rest awhile, after their return from the cities, where they had been to announce his religion. How much more necessary is it for us to approach the source of all virtue, that we may revive our declining faith and charity, when we return from the busy scenes of life, where men speak and act as if they had never known there is a God. We should look upon prayer as the remedy for our weaknesses, the rectifier of our faults.

Even the exercise of charity is often a snare to us. It calls us to certain occupations that dissipate the mind, and that may degenerate into mere amusement. It is for this reason that Chrysostom says that nothing is so important as to keep an exact proportion between the interior source of virtue and the external practice of it; else, like the foolish virgins, we shall find that the oil in our lamps is exhausted when the Bridegroom comes.

We cease to pray to God as soon as we cease to love him, as soon as we cease to thirst for his perfections.

The coldness of our love is the silence of our hearts before God. Let our hearts be full of love, and they will pray. The ardor of our wishes must render us fit to receive the blessing. For if we do not feel a strong desire for the success of our prayers, if we feel a chiling indifference in approaching him who is a consuming fire, if we have no zeal for his glory, if we do not feel hatred for sin and a thirst for perfection, we cannot hope for a blessing upon such heartless prayers.—Fenelon.

OUT OF THE DEEP.

Thou art weary and heavy laden; thou who fanciest at moments that the Lord's arm is shortened, that it cannot save, and art ready to cry, "God hath forgotten me," take comfort and look upon Christ. Thou wilt never be sure of the love of God unless thou rememberest that it is the same as the love of Christ, and, by looking at Christ, learnest to know thy Father and His Father, whose likeness and image He is, and see that the Spirit which proceeds alike from both of them is the spirit of humanity and love, which cannot help going forth to seek and to save thee simply because thou art lost. Look, I say, unto Christ; and be sure that what a good Samaritan did to the wounded traveller, that same will He do to thee, because He is the Son of Man, human and humane. Art thou robbed, wounded, deserted, left to die, worsted in the battle of life, and fallen into its rugged road, with no counsel, no strength, no hope, no purpose left? Then remember that there is One walking to and fro in this world, unseen, but ever present, whose form is as the form of the Son of Man, and He has time, as He has will, to turn aside and minister to such as thee! No human being so mean, no human sorrow so petty, but that He has the time and the will and the power to have mercy on it, because He is the Son of Man. Therefore He will turn aside even to thee, whoever thou art, who art weary and heavy laden, and can find no rest for thy soul, at the very moment and in the very manner which is best for thee.

When thou hast suffered long enough, He will stablish, strengthen, settle thee. He will bind up thy wounds and pour in the oil and the wine of His Spirit—the Holy Ghost, the Comforter—and will carry thee to His own inn, whereof it is written "He will hide thee secretly in His own presence from the provoking of men; He will keep thee in His tabernacle from the strife of tongues." He will give His angels charge over thee to keep thee in all thy ways; and He will give thee rest at last in the bosom of the Father, from which thou, like all human souls, comest forth at first, and to which thou shalt at last return, with all human souls who have in them the Spirit of God and of Christ and of eternal life.—Charles Kingsley.

The same old power! The other day we heard of a young man, who had begun a course of thievery from his employers, being so impressed with a sermon on the case of Zaccheus that he immediately went and confessed his thefts to his employers and restored, if not fourfold, yet what was required. He is now using all his energies though pursued by a kind of persecution, to make known that Gospel which saved him. So the Gospel has lost none of its power. It can, by the blessing of the Spirit, reach out and save to the uttermost. Millions of souls are alive on earth to-day to testify to the omnipotence of the Gospel of Christ. It is the "power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."—Christian Instructor.

In Christ. Those two words contain the very secret, the sole secret of the Christian life. To have died with Christ unto sin, to have risen with Christ to righteousness, to grow in Christ by holiness—that is to be a Christian.—F. W. Farrar.

Is a man were his own enemy, what hard stories he could tell on himself.

Sabbath School Dep't.

CONDUCTED BY REV. A. D. MCCLURE.

Fourth Quarter—Lesson III.

Oct. 17th, 1897.—Acts xxiv: 10-25.

Commit to memory verses 14-16.

Subject.—Paul Before the Roman Governor.

Golden Text. "Fear thou not; for I am with thee." Isa. xli: 10.

CATECHISM.

Question 61. What are the reasons annexed to the fourth commandment?

Answer. The reasons annexed to the fourth commandment are: God's allowing us six days of the week for our own employment, his challenging a specia propriety in the seventh, his own example, and his blessing the Sabbath day.

Time. Soon after the last lesson.

Place. Cesarea.

INTRODUCTORY.

God's overruling Providence is seen in Paul's protection and for the furtherance of the Gospel. The attack of the Jews to destroy Paul, saved him from their power and transferred him to the protection of the Romans. By them he was taken to Rome and through his imprisonment was protected and permitted to preach the Gospel in safety. This was reached by stages. He was first transferred to Cesarea. Then he stood before the king and governor having opportunity to preach the Gospel to those who would, otherwise, have been beyond his reach. All the time he had the Lord's promise and the vision of the Lord to comfort him. It is interesting to follow the plot and its machinations against Paul. He had escaped the first attack. Then forty men took an oath to kill him. Paul's nephew learned of this, and revealed the plot to the commander, who arranged to take Paul at once to Cesarea under strong guard. Five days after this the accusers represented by Ananias, the high priest and Tertullus, a professional advocate. This latter began his address before the Governor Felix with gross flattery and then preferred three charges of treason against Rome, heresy against the Jewish religion, and sacrilege in profaning the temple. Our present lesson is chiefly Paul's reply to these charges.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 10. The governor. Felix a freedman of the Emperor Claudius made procurator of Judea through the influence of his brother, Pallos, a favorite with Nero. Paul....answered, the accusations of Tertullus. Many years. Six or seven. A judge. This position of his office emphasized. Paul's opening words were courteous, while those of Tertullus were fulsome.

Vs. 11. Mayest understand. Canst find out by inquiry as judge. But twelve days. Not more than twelve days. To worship and therefore in a spirit contrary to all sedition, treason or tumult.

Vs. 12. Neither in the temple. Is placed first in answer to the accusation of Tertullus. Disputing. Discussing disputed questions. Paul was a quiet, peaceful worshipper. Raising up the people. Stirring up a crowd, for the crown was raised by the Jewish people and not by Paul.

Vs. 13. Neither can they prove. They had not brought witnesses nor attempted to prove this.

Vs. 14. Heresy. Means a sect. Our word heresy is derived from the Greek word used here. The way. Was Christ who in Himself opens up the way to God, and to Heaven through Redemption. Paul showed he was worshipping the God of his fathers; their God, holding to the law and the prophets. The emphasis was on the word law which Felix would understand and see that Paul was more true to the law than his accusers and more ready to abide and live by the law.

Vs. 15. Have hope toward God. Was another reason which the Jews (had to confess they) also held, that there shall be a resurrection from the dead.

Vs. 16. Herein. In accordance with and on account of this belief and this hope. Do I. "Also" as correct reading. Exercise myself. Make this my practice. Toward God. In heart and worship and men in conduct.

Vs. 17. To bring alms. Large sums collected showing how much Paul cared for his people. And offerings. Probably connected with purifying in the temple.

Vs. 18. Whereupon. In making these offerings with no crowd, neither with multitude, which the Jews raised, seeing that certain Jews from Asia, who were responsible for the uproar.

Vs. 19. Who ought to have been here as the parties who began the attack to object. Bring formal legal accusation.

Vs. 20. These same. These men here in the absence of those who should have been present and accused him or testified.

Vs. 21. Except it be. He had not done any evil and there was only one thing which could be construed into an evil. One voice. Exclamation, or saying. Touching the resurrection. Here he quotes his own words which he had meant to set the Jews against each other, because there was a difference of view among them on this subject.

Vs. 22. More perfect (exact). Knowledge. Which he had acquired in his residence among them. Of this way. The claims of the Gospel. Deferred them. Put off further hearing of the case until Lysias, who had arrested Paul at Jerusalem could come from Jerusalem to Cesarea.

Vs. 23. To keep Paul - Who was a prisoner in charge of a centurion. To let him have liberty. Indulgence by a relaxation of the prison rules for evil men.

Vs. 24. Drusilla. The daughter of Agrippa, and wife of Aziyus whom she had left and unlawfully married Felix. They had one son who perished in the ruins of Pompeii. A. D., 79.

Vs. 25. As he reasoned. Discoursed on the moral majesty of Christianity, of righteousness, or moral rectitude by faith in Christ, temperance, self-control, and the judgment to come. Of rewards for virtue and punishment of vice. Felix trembled Better as R. V. "Was frightened" because of his sins. He sent away the preacher, not his sins.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. Take especial notice of God's Providential oversight and overruling.

2. Paul needed rest physically and seclusion spiritually and opportunity to write some of his epistles.

3 He had Luke his physician with him, who during this two years had occasion to write the Gospel of Luke.

N. B.—What an awful thing it is like Felix to put off the settlement of our moral responsibility!

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Oct. 17th, 1897.

WORK.

Text for the week:

"Be ye not slothful, but followers of them who by faith and patience inherit the promises. Hebrews 6:12.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Nothing Undone, Josh. 11 15-23.

Tuesday, At Thy Word, Luke 5: 1-11.

Wednesday, Whatsoever, John 2: 1-11.

Thursday, The Heavenly Vision, Acts 26: 12-20.

Friday Short Service, Exod. 32: 1-8

Saturday, Faint-Hearted. Matt. 14: 22-33.

Sunday, Topic, "Whatever He would like to have me do."Exod. 19: 1-8.

Suggestions in brief:

Work at God's command, or in obedience to His will as it may be made known.

Work promptly and heartily.

Work constantly and perseveringly.

Work faithfully and thoroughly.

Work with due preparation of prayer and study that you may work wisely and effectively and without discouragement.

Notes:

One principle we would lay down as in all cases specifically applicable to Young People's Societies: that societies should be conducted as a part of the church and under the control and authority of regular church government It is from looseness in this regard that the errors and defects of the system arise, that wrong practice results and that antagonism is engendered. It is to secure this that the Presbyterian Church favors the formation of West minster Leagues, the Methodis Epworth Leagues and other churches their distinctive organizations. Independency in ecclesiastical matters is always dangerous, because contrary to the principle of law and order enjoined in the Scriptures.

All Christian work is work of God and for God Such work as God will approve and so bless, and establish. It should be done absolutely and unquestioningly when known to be at His direct command or in accordance with His will as revealed in the Scriptures. It should be done as remembering that now it is day, but the night cometh when no man can work. Immense damage and loss occur from procrastination and from lack of wise direction. Be not slow therefore to accept wise counsel and to act promptly upon it. Work should be done systematically. Working at odds and ends occasionally brings good results. A word spoken in season without even premeditated plan or purpose may save a soul, but due regard to ways and means and action in co-operation and under wise leadership must be the main reliance for most blessed results

But heartrightness is the special indispensable requirement for all successful work in the Christian life. Rightness of heart that makes love for Christ the actuating motive of all work, and that insures that holiness of life which will win its way wherever its goes. Heartrightness which comes from hearty communion with God through meditation on His Word and which holds sweet and constant converse with God in prayer.

STEVENSON.—At the home of her grandfather, Mr. Jas. E. McFarland, on Sept. 23rd, 1897, Ola Sallie Bell, daughter of Mr. Joseph Stevenson, of Statesville, N. C., aged 8 years, 1 month and 14 days.

"And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." Zech. 8: 5.

KEITH.—At his home near Cameron, N. C., on Sept. 30th, 1897, Mr. Jacob M. Keith in his 49th year. He had many noble traits of character, and for a number of years had been a consistent member of Cameron Presbyterian church in which his venerable father and older brother are ruling elders.

HARRINGTON.—At the home of her mother, Mrs J. McK. Harrington, in Cameron, N. C., on Sept. 30th, 1897. Little Mackie, in her 8th year. Her bright open face, affectionate disposition and winning manner endeared her to all who knew her. She was always somewhat of a fragile flower and the Great Gardner has gathered her for the sunnier clime.

PATTON.—At his home, Stainback, N. C., on Sunday, Sept. 12th, Mr. George Patton, seventy-four years of age.

Since early manhood he had been an earnest and consistent member of Cross Roads church. He enjoyed the esteem of all, and his name was "as ointment poured forth." In late years he suffered much, but with unmurmuring patience. It was upon the day of rest that he found that 'rest which remaineth unto the people of God.'

FAUCETTE,—At Stamps, Ark., Sept 20th, 1897, Miss Laetitia Alan Faucette. She was reared in Orange county, N. C., educated at Statesville Female College where she united with the church, and came to this place a few years since. Her life was so bright and lovely that she made every one love her. Indeed the hearts of those in the home seemed bound up in her life. But her short life was not only such a one as is beautiful on earth, but one that gives the assurance of being among the most beautiful of heaven. She and her brothers and sisters were soon to be together in a new home of their own, which she was fondly anticipating, but she has found a new home indeed that is far better where she will await thir coming.

DUPREE.—At her home, near Burgaw, N. C., on Sept. 20th, 1897, Mrs. Louisa Dupree, widow of the late Joseph Dupree, in her seventy-third year. She was a devout member of the Burgaw Presbyterian church; a good woman and an earnest Christian.

On the following Monday, September 27th, after a week's grieving and suffering, her daughter, Martha Cora Dupree, in her thirtieth year, was removed from this life by the wise providence of a loving God. She was a member of the Baptist church.

PATTON.—On Sept. 19th, 1897, near Asheville, N. C., Mary Cleve, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Patton.

The nine months of this little life were made up of days of weakness and suffering, and it is sweet to think of her at rest with the Good Shepherd, who "gathers the lambs in His arms and carries them in His bosom." May He gently lead the bereaved parents until they shall join this dear little lamb of the flock in the everlasting fold above.

"Ere sin could blight or sorrow fade,
Death came with friendly care;
The opening bud to Heaven conveyed,
And bade it blossom there."

From the Ladies' Missionary Society of Ashpole church, in memory of Mrs. ORA P. McCALLUM (nee) Thompson, wife of Lawrence McCallum, born June 5th, 1846, died July 14th, 1897.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father hath seen fit to remove from our midst this beloved fellow worker, therefore be it,

Resolved 1st. That we bow in submission to God's will, thanking Him for her example of patience through months of suffering and pray that our faith in God may be as unwavering.

2nd. That we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved husband and children, and hope that the Word from which she gained so much comfort "may be a lamp to their feet," guiding them through life.

3d. That our society has sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. McCallum who gave liberally though kept from active labor by bad health.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and a copy to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

Address THE PRESIDENT.

Rev. John Stanly Thomas, of Newbern, N. C., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at this place. He arrived here last Saturday morning and preached his first sermon here last Sunday night. It was an excellent discourse and enjoyed by all who heard him. He will also preach at Hopewell, Mount Williams, Pike and Keith churches.

Mr Thomas is a son of the late Judge Charles R. Thomas, of Newbern, N. C., who was Secretary of State during the administration of Governor Zebulon B. Vance in 1864 and 1865; Judge of the Superior Court, and twice a member of Congress, and comes to our community most highly recommended as to his moral and spiritual character, and as one with the rare gift of power to touch the soul chords of both young and old combined with strong personal magnetism.

Among the high institutions of learning which he has attended with credit and honor are the University of North Carolina, Princeton and McCormick Theological Seminaries, and the Moody Bible Institute, (Chicago.)

He is a young man of pleasing address and personal attractions, and we bespeak for him much success in his new field of labor.—Pender Star, Burgaw, N. C.

WORK.

Anywhere, everywhere, something to do!
Something for me and something for you!
Work for the hand and work for the head,
Work for the winning of daily bread.

Never a day dawns but brings its own task;
What, only for you and for me? is to ask:
Some are chosen to sweep and others to spin,
Some to sew, some to reap, while some gather in.

Some must build ships, and some guide the helm.
Some fashion our garments, and some rule the realm;
Some must fell forests, some the broad field must till,
Some paint and some carve, some grind at the mill

Some must buy and some sell, some traverse the sea;
Some God's preachers and judges and singers must be;
Let each to his taskwork list for the call—
Christ worked, and the Father works high over all!

Some work in the shadow and some in the sun.
Some in joy, some in pain; but the Master is One,
Calling all to their tasks, portioning each his reward,
As he ceases his toil at the word of his Lord.

Work while the day lasts, work with a will;
Soon will the night come, when all will be still;
Sweet will it be, at set of the sun,
To hear from the Master the welcome, "Well done!"

DR. MACDONALD IN HIS HOME.

A visitor to Dr. Macdonald's sanctuary last winter says that it was reassuring to hear his voice still full and sonorous declaring that he felt well—well for an old man. "I shall be seventy-two before the year ends, and that's far on; it's about time to be going Home." Younger men often come, he said, to see him, that they might tell him how much they had learned from making acquaintance with Robert Falconer and Alec Forbes. On Wednesday afternoons he is still at home to many strangers and friends, and after tea he will often read from some favorite poet like Browning, with added comments and elucidations in that style of which he is a master. For it must not be imagined that Dr. Macdonald is decrepit. Most fine days see him on his tricycle on the Bordighera roads. He talked very freely and cordially to his visitor of the Scottish novelists. It was refreshing to hear his genuine and generous appreciation of their work. Mr. Barrie he considered the foremost of them all. He had been especially delighted with The Little Minister, and also expressed his admiration for parts of Margaret Ogilvy, which was "somewhat in the nature of an elegy." He spoke warmly of Ian Maclaren, and recalled how he had himself lectured and preached in Sefton Park Church. He recognised Dr. Watson's great power of humour and also of pathos, "for these two are near akin; the springs of laughter and tears lie close together." He noted that Dr. Watson has brought the Highlander down into the Lowlands, and depicted him in that setting—" a thing which seems new at least to me. I myself," he added, "am a pure Highlander on both sides, though I have no Gaelic." Speaking of Mr. Crockett, Dr. Macdonald recognized very readily the verve and vigour of his narrative and how it carries you irresistibly along. He had been impressed with The Gray Man, and referred to the much-discussed episode of the cannibalism among the cave-dwellers. "Terrible, but quite true; it is on record. I remember it was once pointed out to me in an old volume, and only yesterday I was trying to search out and verify the reference.—The Book man.

For jelly choose a very ripe, tender pineapple, and cut in small, diamond-shaped bits; line the bottom of a mold with orange or lemon jelly; put on the ice, and when set put in a layer of pineapple; cover with unset jelly, return to the ice until set, and continue in this way until the mold is full. Care must be taken not to make the jelly too stiff. Powdered sugar sprinkled through the pineapple brings out the flavor and makes it tender, but all the jelly should be properly sweetened, very little must used.

The Astronomy of Life.

When an astronomer foretells the exact minute at which two planets will cross each other, we know there is no magic about it. The whole universe is governed by laws. A man who studies these laws of nature carefully and reduces them to a science, can count on exact results every time

A doctor knows that certain remedies affect certain diseases.

When a disease seems to have no remedy, the doctors pronounce it incurable. All the time Nature may have the remedy right at hand, but it will only be discovered by the doctor who has studied longer and deeper than others into this particular disease.

Consumption seemed for a long time without a remedy, until Dr. Pierce made his wonderful "Golden Medical Discovery" 30 years ago. It has proved to be a marvelous and almost unfailing specific for consumption and all forms of lung, bronchial and throat difficulties.

Its effects seem almost magical but its operation is based upon simple natural laws. It has the peculiar property of enabling the blood-making glands to manufacture healthy, red blood and pour it abundantly into the circulation. This nourishing, vitalizing effect is rapidly manifested in the lungs and bronchial tubes where it stops the wasting process and builds up healthy tissue.

It is readily assimilated by stomachs which are too weak to digest cod liver oil, and it is far superior to malt-extracts as a permanent and scientific flesh-builder in all wasting diseases.

"Twenty-five years ago eight different doctors told me that I would live but a short time, that I had consumption and must die," writes Geo. R. Coope, Esq., of Myers Valley, Pottawatomie Co, Kans. "I finally commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and am still on the land and among the living. I have faith to believe that it has lengthened my life for the last twenty-five years, and I have so much faith in all of your medicines that I want one of your 'Common Sense Medical Advisers.'"

Dr. Pierce's medicines are recognized as standard remedies throughout the world His "Pleasant Pellets" cure constipation

OCTOBER

Now the leaves are all turning red, yellow and brown,
And over-ripe apples and nuts tumble down.
The blackbird is screaming his way to the south;
The squirrel is gathering the nuts in his mouth;
The owlet is building her nest in the tree;
The ant is as busy as busy can be;
The cricket is singing his warning of snow,
And cold, dreary winds are beginning to blow.

BIBLE HEROES.

CHAPTER 4.

Artie's Hero.

You will remember that after Hugh's hero had been guessed by Mrs. Allan, she said that she would help Artie to get a hero for the next time, instead of giving one herself, you will also remember that just before they went to supper Grandma had shown them some ears of popcorn, and a bundle and had said that after supper, whoever guessed first what was in her bundle should pop the first corn in the new l'archer.

Well, when they finished supper it was as good as a game of Observation, the way they started at that bundle. Grandma wouldn't let any body feel it.

"Well, Gamma, can't we smell it then?" "No, indeed! I think you would guess it right away then."

At last Nellie, who had been very quiet, clapped her hands and called out;

"Brown sugar! brown sugar!"

"Right!" said Grandma, "but how did you happen to guess it?"

"I saw a little grain of sugar on the table, and it wasn't white."

And so Nellie had the pleasure of parching "the first turn," and the sugar was opened out and the corn rolled in it, and the children found it very nice.

The next Friday evening was stormy, but that did not keep the Barkers away. Nobody wanted to miss Artie's Hero.

"It is just the kind of evenin' to have somethin' particular to do, aint it Grandma" asked Jack.

"Yes, and how nice to have a cheery fire to sit by in a happy home, children."

"Yesh, an' a Gamma w'ats so niche too," added Artie as he cuddled up to Grandma, while they waited for mama to come, for he was not willing to begin without her.

At last Mrs. Allan was ready, and when she entered the door there was Mr. Allan just behind her, and all the children stood by and clapped their hands.

"Howd'ye do Mr. Honorable member" cried Jack with a low bow."

Artie's bright face flushed and he looked a little scared, for he was not quite so well acquainted with his papa as Jack was, he had not known him so long!.

However, mama whispered to him, and he ran up to his papa and held his mouth up to kiss him and said:

"We glad to shee you Mitter Honawawy," and then he handed Mr. Allan a chair.

Grandma rapped on the table and said;

"Now, little man we want your hero," and Artie stood up near his mother, and after he had put his hands in his pocket awhile, he began:

"My hewo was a l—ittle bit a baby boy vonce en 'is mama ver scared 'bout 'im an—an, oh, 'ee ver born in a far away country vere 'is papa 'ad to work very 'ard an' dey didn' love to live dere, one single bit, but dey 'ad to, 'cause Dod vanted to make dem very sorry for bein' naughty An' one de ole bad king got mad cause der ver so many ittle chillen an 'ee said: "Dere's too many 'ittle boys, one day dey'll be fighten' me, an take all my country. An 'ee wanted to kill all de bebies, an 'ee mama, I mean my hewo's mama didn' vant to hab 'er 'ittle baby kilted too, en 'ee dis begged Dod to tell her how to fix it. An Dod tole her; "Make a 'ittle backet (basket) and 'ide you 'ittle boy dere. An 'er made it in a huwy (hurry) I tell you!

Den a putty lady comed dere 'an 'er said:

"Oh vat a putty baby! I b'lieve I'll take it home for myself.' An one day my hewo gyew up a gyeat big man—an 'ee fought all dose bad peoples an' took millions an' millions back to dere ole land, but 'ee got mad one day an Dod tole 'im 'ee couldn't go all de way, 'an so 'ee died, an' a beau'ful angel comed an' burvied 'im. An—oh—'ee did bwing all de commandments down so we could learn 'em. An' dat's all 'bout my hewo."

Of course everybody had guessed Artie's hero very soon after he began, but he was too excited to see the hands and Grandma put her finger to her lips, for them to be silent, and mama shook her head when they began to laugh, for they both thought the little boy showed that he knew a good deal about Moses.

As soon as he finished Jack and Nita both called out:

Moses! Moses! and grandma frowned and said:

"Why yes, it must be Moses" and Artie answered in a very proud and confident tone:

"Yesh, my hewo is Moshes. I like 'im de best of all, cause he was de patientest one;"

"I think that both Jack and Nita will have to give heroes next time, as they both gave the name," said grandma.

"Yes," said Jack "an we can make 'em short. "Everybody laughed for it sounded funny, but they all knew that it was the stories, and not the heroes that Jack wanted short.

Just then Mr. Allan glanced down at his coat pockets, and the children looked too, and discovered that they were stuffed with something. They made a rush at them and found that they were full of caramels, and the rest of the evening they were busy picking papa's pockets.

A GOOD NAME.

Not every one who aims at a good name aims well. Desire for a good name, coupled with the desire to be worthy of a good name, may incite one to good deeds, but the ambition that is satisfied with the name alone is apt to lead one to bad deeds as to good ones. One who is more solicitous to be called truthful than to be truthful is often tempted to tell a lie to save his reputation for truthfulness. Many a man has sacrificed the little character he had that the world might give him credit for a better. The only good name worth having is that which blossoms from a good life.—Sunday School Times.

DO YOU NEED A GOOD TEACHER?

SAY SOME.

It don't pay to thresh the oats that are to be fed on the farm.

"She—"What is this mineral wool one reads so much about?"

He—"Mineral wool?" Why that's the wool they shear from hydraulic rams."

A valuable acquisition to the writing world is a new patent splitless pen, which cannot scratch or become crossnibbed, and writes on the coarsest or roughest as well as on the finest paper. It produces fine, even lines of any delicacy or thickness, rendering it especially valuable to artists and architects, and it is almost indestructible.

THINGS USEFUL.

Always cut onions, turnips and carrots across the fibre.

* * *

When you boil a cabbage, tie a bit of dry bread in a bag and put in the kettle. French cooks say that all the unpleasant odor will be absorbed by the bread.

* * *

Melt four tablespoonfuls of sugar until a light brown, pour it into six custard cups, and shake them quickly so that the caramel will line them. Beat three eggs without separating; add to them three tablespoonfuls of sugar, and then a cup and a half of cream; mix thoroughly; add a tablespoonful of vanilla, and pour the mixture in the cups on top of the caramel. Stand them in a bakingpan of hot water and bake in the oven ten or fifteen minutes, until they are set in the centre. Turn out while hot on individual dishes, and set aside to cool. Serve very cold.—Ladies' Home Journal.

* * *

Icing for Cakes.—Take three-quarters of a pound of ground almonds, half a pound of sugar, enough raw eggs to mix to a paste; put on the cake and dip a broad, flat knife in boiling water; smooth the almond paste over the top and around the edges; put in a cool oven for about half an hour to set. For sugar icing, take three quarters of a pound of icing sugar, one ounce of corn starch, the whites of two eggs, the juice of about half a lemon and a few drops of vanilla. Beat for about twenty minutes; spread over the almond icing; smooth with the knife dipped in boiling water, and put in oven, as before.—Boston Traveler.

THROUGH PEACE TO LIGHT.

I do not ask, O Lord, that my life may be
A pleasant road;
I do not ask that Thou wouldst take from me
Aught of its load;
I do not ask that flowers should always spring
Beneath my feet;
I know too well the poison and the sting
Of things too sweet.
For one thing only, Lord, dear Lord, I plead—
Lead me aright;
Tho' strength should falter, tho' the heart should bleed,
Through Peace to Light.
I do not ask, O Lord, That Thou shouldst shed
Full radiance here;
Give but a ray o' peace, that I may tread
Without a fear.
I do not ask my cross to understand,
My way to see—
Better in darkness just to feel thy hand
And follow thee
Joy is like restless day, but peace divine
Like quiet night;
Lead me, O Lord, till perfect day shall shine,
Through Peace to Light.

—Adelaide Proctor.

Seek out some ministry, consecrate the business talent, and in the savings-bank of provident fund, in the committee or council of the church, "rule with diligence," or go forth and visit. The tired watcher in the sick-room release for a few hours of needful slumber. Take to the bed-ridden child some plaything, to the destitute family some comfort. And, whether you offer the brief prayer, or read the words of Jesus to the invalid, "show mercy with cheerfulness," try to do it as if you came and went in Christ's own company; and then, long after you have left, the consolation will remain.—*James Hamilton, D. W. S. MOORE.

The subject of this sketch was born in May, 1834, in the old county of Guilford. His father died when he was quite a child and he was reared by his widowed mother. His early life was spent on the farm, but at the age of seventeen he entered a store in Fayetteville as clerk for one of the oldest merchants of that day. In 1853 he returned to his native county to serve in an old mercantile house in Greensboro, and here, with exception of one short interval, his subsequent life has been spent.

In 1858 Mr. Moore married Miss Callie Woodburn, who still lives to cheer and soothe him in his journey through life.

He professed religion when a boy and has never had occasion to regret the step then taken. Soon after his marriage he united with the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro, by certificate from the Methodist Protestant Church; the first member received under the pastorate of Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith.

Very soon after this with the Sunday-school—then very small—and since for thirty-seven years, he has made Sunday-school service a special work for the Master, having seldom been absent, except when away from the city. For a great part of the time he has been Secretary and Treasurer of the school.

For some years he served on the Board of Deacons and for twelve or more years has been a ruling elder in the church which he has made his spiritual home.

Of the membership of one hundred and twelve when Mr. Moore united with the First church there now remain only some ten or twelve—the others for the most part having passed over to the better land. The venerated pastor, his bow still abiding in strength, still breaks to the people the bread of life.

Mr. Moore has always been trusted and used by his brethren in conduct of finance.

For five years he was Treasurer of Orange Presbytery and now is and for many years has been Treasurer of Guilford county Bible Society and Treasurer of the new church building.

He began business independently in 1865 at first with limited capital. Notwithstanding in the vicissitudes of mercantile life around him and tho scores have failed of success, he still prosecutes his business with industry, honesty and energy; striving always to live so as to show that 'Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever.

When men fulfill the law of Christ, they do not need any other law to make them do right.—Ram's Horn.

This sense of sin, which lies like a black pall over the entire face of humanity, has been all along the point of departure for every preacher, writer and thinker within the Hebrew or Christian fold; and it is the gradual and palpable decline of it in the literature and society of to-day that is the darkest of all the signs now overshadowing what is in some respects, the bright and hopeful promise of the future.—Gladstone.

Three things to delight in—Frankness, freedom and beauty.

Service is better than gain. What a man does for God, or for his fellows is more advantageous to himself than what he gets in any other way from God, or from his fellows. It is more important for him to know, as he prays or as he works, what others want that he can give or do, than what he wants from them. This may seem a strange thought or principle to a man, but he should remember the words of our Lord Jesus, when he himself said—and surely he was not mistaken in this—"It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Sunday School Times.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

Don't try to hold God's hand: let Him hold yours. Let Him do the holding, and you do the trusting.—H. W. Webb Peploe.

Conscience is always true to the best light it has. No man can go against his knowledge of right without a sense of guilt; when he goes against his conscience he cannot even respect himself.—Rev. George Schaffer, D. D.

* * *

The atmosphere that is formed about a pure life has as much pervasive power as any other atmosphere. It is silly to think that a man's influence is gone because something gets in his way. Satan can easily shut a good man out of sight, but he has his hands full when he tries to keep the influence of a good man's life and character from pervading the world around him.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

* * *

Even among Christians, how often there are divisions and bitternesses among those who work together! The fruit of the Spirit, which is love, is often absent in Christ's own people; * * * but when the Holy Spirit comes not only in his power for service as a gift, but when he comes in divine grace to fill the heart, there is victory over sin, power not to fulfil the lusts of the flesh, ability to live peaceably among our brethren.—Rev. Andrew Murray.

* * *

What we need at the present time is an army of contented workers, who are willing to fill places of moderate influence, who will do their best in full knowledge of the fact that wealth, fame, even general recognition, will never be theirs. The majority must lead commonplace lives; they will never be very rich or very brilliant in any direction, but they may, nevertheless, live nobly and make the world purer and better for their existence. American children no longer need to have their ambition stimulated. What they need to be taught is to do their best and be content with such things as they have, and to feel that "godliness with contentment is great gain."—Ex.

TO THE PRESBYTERIANS OF NORTH CAROLINA.

The treasury of your Orphans' Home is empty, and some bills for support during the month of September are unpaid. How are the expenses of October to be met? You will not permit your orphan children to suffer hunger and cold.

Yours in the care of the fatherless,

R. W. BOYD,
Supt. Orphans' Home.

"How are the expenses of October to be met?" It is for the Presbyterians of North Carolina to say. Who will send $5? Who will send one? Who will send provisions if they cannot send money?

"HE WILL NOT HEAR."

"Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save: neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that He will not hear." So spake the prophet to his generation and wrote it down for the instruction of all ages.

Possibly we have passed this by as an ancient word, when it is meant for us. If so, we need now to consider it in the light of our necessities, and in the instruction it offers for our information and guidance. It is an ancient word, just what the people then needed. It comes down to us for our good.

We are not what we ought to be. We are not what we might be. We have failed to accomplish what we hoped for and have fallen far short of what God has a right to demand of us. In this view our lives are full of failures. What is the reason? It is here as the prophet said of God in that time, "He will not hear." The cause for this is our sins. These must be found condemned and cast out. There is need to cry: "Search me O God." He alone can show us the truth about ourselves. He alone can show us our true condition.

In the light of His word we shall find manifold sins and abounding iniquities. It will not avail to excuse ourselves by calling these infirmities. They are sins, even all our transgressions, disobedience and failures and neglect of duty. Instead of excusing ourselves for violence of temper or hasty words or rash deeds, we need to confess that all are sinful and we ought to seek deliverance.

If we will open all the doors to our hearts, if we will not try to cover up the idols, if we will not put into dark corners the things which we have used to waste our time and to weaken our moral strength, if we will be thoroughly honest with ourselves in God's sight we shall find sins enough to give God reason to say He will not hear our cries for help and stretch out His hand to deliver.

We may begin anywhere only to find everywhere and of every kind these sins. There are the secret sins, those things which we do without the knowledge of our fellowmen and vainly try to persuade ourselves that God does not see. The sins may be in deeds done in darkness or in the thoughts that we hardly dare to indulge at first, but come to allow freely by and by, or in imaginings, at first low, then vile and growing to base and corrupting. They may be sins of our means and sources of getting information or of the spending of hours in reading and study. The books we read may be bad. The subjects we delight in may be corrupting or low. There may be sins in eating and drinking and in dress. Our Lord said, "Therefore take no thought saying what shall we eat? or, what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed?" Here will be a rebuke for most of us, as we sin in the things we desire and in the unrestrained indulgence of our appetites and tastes.

The Master will show us these things as He sees them, if we invite Him and wait for Him and do not draw back from the revelation and refuse to let Him have His way. He will insist upon a thorough examination of our home life, habits and spirit. There he will show husband and wife, parents and children, masters and servants, too often indulging in selfishness and thoughtlessness. The business affairs should all be conducted with Him as Senior Partner. No Christian has the right to be engaged in a business which He will not bless and direct. What changes will be seen to be necessary, what methods discontinue, what principles discarded if the sins of our business are to be shown to us by this Searcher of Hearts, and Revealer of what is right and wrong. It will appear that the greed of gain grasps many—that selfishness prevails, that harshness of employers and unfaithfulness of those employed are sins all too common. What will He say of the sins of our religion, "the iniquities of the holy things?" We neglect to pray in private and to study His Word. We forsake the assembling of ourselves together. We come critical, instead of humble and prayerful, to social or public worship. We seek everything from God and to do nothing for Him. That is enough even as we can see ourselves and know our lives to show why "He will not hear." How much more of sin must He see?

We need to see, acknowledge, renounce and put away sin and seek pardon, acceptance and cleansing that God may bless and use us.

THE PRESBYTERIAN QUARTERLY—OCTOBER 1897.

If any one expected that this strong defender of the faith and supporter of the truth would lose interest or decrease in value by the reduction of its subscription price to the amazingly small sum of one dollar for so valuable a publication, let such an one get this current number, which is not inferior to other numbers and is equal to the best of our Theological and Religious Periodicals. There is not a page from 415 to 570 without especial interest and value. The subjects are all important and the writers careful, thorough and devout in spirit. Two writers of our sister, the Northern Presbyterian Church as others in former numbers have done, show their estimate of the value of the Quarterly and the character of its clientelle by contributing valuable articles to its pages. This number begins, continues and ends well, and it would be unjust to all to call any title or name of its author without giving every one, unless we be justified in saying that the last review notice in the name of its writer and the value of his contribution is not the least of the good things of this very good number. It may be had for forty cents single copy or one dollar a year from the publishers, Whittet and Shepperson, Richmond, Va.

IT WERE FAR preferable to have more fully discussed the infamy of Princeton Inn and the shame of Princeton University in our last issue, but time and space did not then permit. We return to the subject with a feeling far removed indeed from pleasure, but must fulfill our promise to our readers and our duty to the public. The Voice it will be remembered attacked the "Inn" as a liquor saloon, where the properties and accessories of such a gateway to perdition would be found in full blast—this while the license they determined upon had not been issued—at least before the "Inn" was duly and formally opened. Numbers of the alumni of Princeton College then came forward, most of them of great reputation and of highest Christian character, to say that nothing more intoxicating than beer would be sold, that there would be no bar, but that the beer would be served in bottles in the grill-room—which we take to mean the restaurant, or place where lunch or meals were served Others who could not approve of the temperance feature, expressed sorrow very like to disgust that the Voice had censured the faculty at large, and had implicated the Presbyterian Churches as by connivance, or at least inculpable difference. Some of course went so far as to approve of the beer selling feature as really a temperance measure—there are always such people on hand to make themselves ridiculous. For a time quiet reigned. But the "Inn" was opened and proceeded at once to discredit the claims of its friends and to justify the charges of its enemies. A correspondent of the Voice it seems went in and out on the night the "Inn" was opened and here is a small part of his experience:

"I am now prepared to state positively, finally, and from personal knowledge that the famous "grill"-room of Princeton is run as a common saloon. * * * * Whisky as well as beer is sold openly by the drink or by the pint. I spent the greater part of last evening in this "grill-room," coming and going. At one time I did not see less than fourteen students drinking, therein, and the greatest number was forty-one. They were all boys. Not one had even sprouted a mustache; all appeared to be from fifteen to twenty-two years of age. They were smoking, drinking and singing. During the whole evening there was not a solitary symptom of anything to be eaten. There was not a solitary piece of table or any other piece of furniture which is usually found in places where eatables are prepared or sold. * * * * *

The thirty or forty boys who spent the evening there did nothing but drink, smoke, sing, and tell stories. The air was black with smoke. Whisky was served indiscriminately, as well as beer. I saw beardless youths, apparently no more than sixteen or seventeen years of age, drinking whisky.

"Shortly after 11 o'clock, as I returned to the Inn for the last time, I met two students reeling away from the place, pitifully trying to whistle the same tune at the same time. The Inn was said to be closed. The curtains were drawn tight, and all was dark from the outside; but entering from an inside passage I found exactly forty-one students drinking and singing. More were there than at any other time during the night."

There is a great deal more in the Voice of September 30th—which any one desirous of so doing can readily obtain—but we have given enough to justify us in saying:

All that is charged is true, or it is not true. If not true the Voice ought to be made to answer in condign damages—and so the Voice will if this is false testimony. The trustees and faculty will see to that; they cannot afford to ignore it and Jersey justice will do its full and proper share in the work of punishment. But if it is true, and as yet, we have seen no denial, nor attempt at denial, then the trustees and faculty of Princeton University owe it to themselves, owe it to the Presbyterian Church, which is so largely interested in the University, above all owe it to the parents of the boys who are training at the University to suppress this moral pest-house at once and forever. The Presbytery of New Brunswick and the Synod of New Jersey, too, now that the infamy apparently has been established—although Princeton Theological Seminary is not directly involved—must have, it would seem, something to say in this matter.

DR. DABNEY'S LECTURES AT DAVIDSON COLLEGE.

The series of lectures on the Otts' Foundation, delivered by R. L. Dabney, D, D., LL, D., began on yesterday by the delivery of the first of the series in the church here. The subject of the lectures this year is the Atonement of Christ a defence of the doctrine of penal substitution against the doubts and heresies which are rampant in much of the so-called "modern theology."

The distinguished lecturer was introduced by Dr. Shearer, who had sat at his feet in past years as a devoted student, in fitting terms and for an hour his audience listened to a most masterly argument. As it will be impossible to give even an abstract of the other five lectures in my next week's letter, I will not attempt to give the different heads of the discourse. The first part of the lecture consisted of the clearest and most powerful presentation of the arguments for the rejection of the doctrine of penal substitution I have ever heard or seen. None but a most able debater could have so presented them, no one not sure of the justice and truth of his position and of his own ability would have done so. The remainder of the argument carried the denial of this doctrine to its logical conclusion, showing that with its rejection went all that the Christian heart held most dear. With its denial our whole system of belief is undermined and falls apart.

The other lectures of the course will be delivered during the next six days, four during the week, and the concluding one on next Sabbath morning, Oct. 17th. Mrs. Dabney is with her husband at Dr. Shearer's. A good many visitors from a distance will attend the course of lectures, and all feel that it is a rare and precious privilege to hear this venerable champion of the truth, who has lost none of his learning and power, pleading for the faith once delivered to the saints. THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath was designed to be a benevolent as well as a religious institution; that is, it was intended for our temporal, as well as, for our spiritual good. This weekly cessation from all worldly employments affords a favorable opportunity for restoring to their accustomed vigor and activity, the energies both of the body and mind which the labor of six consecutive days may have enervated. And it, also affords a precious opportunity for meditating on the works and attributes of God, for studying His Holy Word, for the examination of our own hearts, and for immediate communion with God in the public and private exercises of His worship. In these senses the Sabbath is said to be made for man, and not in the perverted sense that it was made for man to profane by devoting it to worldly amusements and employments. In order to show how prone some men are to pervert this holy day to the interest of their secular business I will relate an instance which is said, to have occured in this State, several years ago.

A minister invited another minister of a sister denomination to assist him in a meeting of several days. And on Sabbath evening after the meeting had closed, the invited minister was at his buggy, arranging to leave for his home, when he was approached by a member of the congregation and informed him that he had some mighty nice mutton down at his buggy, and he wanted to know, if he would buy some of it to carry home with him. Upon the minister's reproving him for violating the Sabbath, he said, "O, well, the Bible tells us that the Sabbath was made for man, and, if you will not buy any of my mutton, I know our preacher will." That man seemed to think that the Sabbath was made for his convenience to sell mutton on. And many now-a-days act, as if they thought this holy day was made for pleasure, recreation and worldly gain.

The perversion of the Sabbath from its original design and purity, is, as much a violation of the fourth commandment, as is the disobeying of its requirements.

In the time of our blessed Saviour the Pharisees had perverted this sacred day by attaching such a degree of rigor to its observance as to exclude even works of necessity and mercy. And for this superstitious and overmuch rigid notion, our Saviour reproved them, and showed them, by exemplifying it in His own conduct, that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath—that is, the Sabbath was made with respect to man and not man with respect to the Sabbath. After man had been created, then the Sabbath was instituted for his welfare and happiness. And it is wrong to do anything on this day, under the plea that the Sabbath was made for man, that is contrary to the requirements of the fourth commandment. This holy day contemplates man's best interest, temporal and spiritual, and therefore its law should always be interpreted favorable to his real comforts and wants which are not required to give way to that which was made for him.

In vindicating his disciples against the charge, made by the Pharisees that in plucking the ears while passing through the corn on the Sabbath to satisfy their hunger, they had violated it, our blessed Saviour referred them to what David did, when fleeing before the face of Saul, faint, weary and hungry, he had come to the tabernacle and finding no other bread there than the shew bread he partook of that, which under different circumstances would have been wrong for him to do. And in order to justify His disciples in plucking the ears of corn on the Sabbath to satisfy the cravings of their appetites. He, also, referred them to the priest in the temple, who profane the Sabbath by preparing beasts for sacrifice and burning them, and yet are blameless, because it was necessary and commanded.

And further, when the Saviour was about to heal the man with the withered hand in the temple these same captious Pharisees were on hand, ready to find fault. And to convince them of their hypocrisy, He drew an argument from their conduct on the Sabbath, showing them that the principle on which they acted in lifting a sheep out of the pit into which it had fallen and in leading an ass or an ox to the watering on the Sabbath, applied with more force to His healing the afflicted man on the Sabbath; because he was so much more important than the animals that perish. These two cases, one of which is a case of necessity and the other of mercy, decide what works are lawful to be done on the Sabbath; or, in other words, they teach us that the law respecting the Sabbath, does not operate in cases of necessity and mercy, a principle, especially respecting the first, which is recognized by all laws.

Then, our blessed Saviour has descended by His own example and explanations to teach us the proper use of the Sabbath. He did nothing that did not strictly come under the head of necessity or mercy. And whoever undertakes to devote this holy day to any other works than these, goes beyond what his teachings and example authorizes him to do. Besides he arrogates to himself to do what the Son of Man claimed the special right of doing, as being Lord of the Sabbath—that is to say what works may be done on this day. He, who presumes to add to the law of the Sabbath, or to take from it, does so at his peril.

We had just as well tamper with any other one of the ten commandments, as with the fourth, and so far as the act of disobeying God is concerned, we had just as well steal, bear falsewitness, commit adultery, or murder, as to violate the Sabbath. For the fourth commandment was promulgated at the same time, and under the same awful emblems that the other nine of the decalogue were. It has the same honor and dignity attached to it that they have, and the same binding force and perpetuity. This is the law, including the fourth commandment, that Christ says He came not to destroy, but to fulfil. And while we are not under the law now, as a covenant of works, yet we are still bound by it as a rule of duty, to render strict obedience to its requirements. Besides its moral and positive nature, the fourth commandment has annexed to it an example of God's resting on this holy day and of His sanctifying it, as an additional reason why we should remember the holy Sabbath day to keep it holy. And yet, it is a lamentable fact, that many church members and even some preachers so far disregard the rest and the sanctity of this holy day, as to profane it by availing themselves of the use of trains on this day for pleasure or worldly gain.

The running of the Sunday train is just as much a secular business as would be the running of a cotton mill or any other worldly business on the Sabbath, because it is not run in the interest of necessity or mercy, and while, perhaps it would be shocking to the moral sense of these same parties, even to think that they would encourage or patronize, in any way, the running of a cotton mill on the Sabbath, yet they do not hesitate to go to a ticket office on this day and buy a ticket and enter the train for a ride, thereby encouraging and endorsing this form of Sabbath desecration to the extent of their patronage. Thus they are not only violating the Sabbath themselves, but they are encouraging thousands and thousands of others on the line of the road to do so.

It is estimated that four million of persons in our country violate the Sabbath on railroads, steamboats, postal service, telephone operations, street cars, getting out and distributing Sunday papers, &c. This is a most deplorable state of affairs to exist in a Christian county. And it is appalling too, to think, that the Church, to a very great extent encourages the existence of this sad state of affairs, which is not only paganizing our country, but herself, to some extent, as well, by patronizing the Sunday train and the Sunday paper, and by other forms of Sabbath desecration. There are those in the Church whose perception of what is morally right or wrong is so badly blunted and perverted that they even contend that the running of the Sunday train instead of desecrating the holy Sabbath tends to the glorifying of God by enabling some preachers to reach appointments on this day that they could not reach otherwise. This kind of reasoning is contrary to moral truth, it has involved in it, the principle that it is right to do evil that good may come.

A minister who obtains a conveyance from the livery stable or uses the street car or the train on the Sabbath in order to reach his appointment, thereby encouraging, perhaps hundreds or thousands of others to violate this holy day for his own accommodation, has no reason to expect any good to result from his preaching when the opportunity to do good is obtained in contravention of the fourth commandment. Besides his example is a stumbling block in the way of the salvation of others, he discounts his own piety in the estimation of all good people, he disqualifies himself to preach consistently and successfully against Sabbath desecration—the crying sin of our land—and he impairs his own usefulness as a minister generally.

Well, the question may be asked here, what must a preacher who does not keep a conveyance of his own do then? Why (in the language of another) let him do just as he would if there were no livery stable, street cars or Sunday trains, or in other words, as he professes to follow the blessed Saviour as his great exemplar, let him do, as he may think from a thorough knowledge of the Bible, what the Saviour would be likely to do under similar circumstances if He were here in His humanity as He once was. The servant ought, to be above his master. We have no account of the Saviour's riding but once, and that was to fulfill a prophesy.

THE PROSPECTS FOR YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION WORK AT THE UNIVERSITY.

Our Association had the pleasure of welcoming at our annual reception on Friday night two hundred and seven new students. With the faculty families and the old members the occasion was made a very delightful one. Refreshments were served, spicy talks made, and the purpose and work of the Association presented.

The work for the year has been divided up among fifteen separate committees, of from three to four men each. These committee men, fifty in number, compose the systematic working force of the association.

Perhaps the most important phase of our work falls to the Bible Study Committee. This is the source of the spiritual life and growth of the individual members, the study of the Bible. This committee arranges for the leaders and courses of instruction. The leaders are all students who have been trained in the Southern Students' Summer School at Knoxville, Tenn. The classes meet every Sunday afternoon. Two classes for the coming year will study the life of Christ by Salmon; one will be trained in the Personal Worker's Bible Training Class, using Torrey's "Christ Among Men;" our missionary class, studying the lives of missionaries under the leadership of one who is preparing himself for the foreign field; and in addition to these we hope to have an advanced class in the Life and Letters of St. Paul.

Our association has short devotional meetings four times every week with an average attendance of about forty. This is the only association in the State that has meetings so often.

Another important feature of the work is in the hands of the Monthly Sermons' Committee. This committee arranges for a sermon every month by some one of the leading preachers of this and other States, each denomination being represented in turn. This part of our work especially lends dignity to our Association in the eyes of the faculty and town people, who all join with us on such occasions.

Some of our other committees are committees on Membership, Publication, Missionary, Building, etc. The Building Committee have succeeded in raising the subscription list for our building up to $11,000. We hope in the near future to have a building of our own erected on the campus, where we can hold our devotional meetings, Bible classes, and reception for new students.

Since our college has become the largest of Southern Institutions we are greatly in hopes our membership in the Association will grow in the same proportion. Efforts are being made to see every man in the University about joining.

These are the most important phases of our work. Another thing which might be mentioned is that we will pay for State and International work $35 this year.

The association has need for feeling more encouraged than ever this year, for the increasing interest the faculty are taking in our work. President Alderman has appointed a standing committee of three members of the faculty, all of them experienced in association work, to meet and advise with us on all questions of common interest. There is also a plan on foot of attempting to have formed in town a ladies' auxiliary to help out in the way of receptions, etc.

This is, so far as can be seen at present, the plan of work and bright outlook of our Association for the year.

A GREAT MAN'S MOTTO.

It is said of the great Swedish botanist and scientist, Linnæus, that he had placed over his door the motto: "Live innocently, God is present."

Linnæus was a busy man, and during his life classified and named all the known plants and animals of the earth, besides writing a great many books on plants, natural history and science; but he knew where to look for success, and believed that the only useful life was a Christian life. Beginning in poverty he was lifted above want by his marked success in his profession, and he often told his friends that he was grateful to God only, for the great success he had attained, counting his own work nothing compared with the assistance God had given him.

If God helped Linnæus for being a Christian in his profession, He will help us at home, in the office, and in whatever we undertake to succeed.

If we keep before us the motto, "Live innocently, God is present," it may save us many a regret when another year closes. It is a constant check rein, guiding us to the right. —Exchange.

A VOICE.

One evening, it is said, two soldiers were placed as sentinels at opposite ends of a long passage leading from the rock of Gibraltar to the Spanish territory. One had lately been converted, and was that night musing on the preciousness of Christ as our Savior. The other was deeply concerned about his soul. At a late hour of the night the Christian, in a delightful reverie, exclaimed aloud: "The precious blood of Christ."

His comrade, at the other end of the passage, heard the strange words, borne on the midnight air: "The precious blood of Christ!" The voice came to him as a message from heaven, and removed his load of guilt, and spake peace to his troubled soul.

Thousands and millions of children, have had all their sins taken away by the precious blood of the Lord Jesus Christ.—Ex.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Henry Altemus of Philadelphia, has issued a charming child-life story, called "Trif and Trixy," by John Habberton, of "Helen's Babies" fame.

It does not seem possible that the table for eight people can be provided for ten dollars a week. But Mrs. Rorer, the most famous cook in America, says it can be done. She has tried it and knows. She proves her case in The Ladies' Home Journal for October. She gives twenty-one menus covering a week's meals, and gives full, practical directions by which any woman can make as attractive meals as Mrs. Rorer explains, for this small sum of ten dollars.

What singular ideas on the subject of feminine toilets men did once have, to be sure, and how much they usually know about the matter nowadays! This is amusingly noticeable in current literature. Such blunders were once not uncommon as that made in "Austin Elliot," by Henry Kingsley, when he made his modest, quietly dressed little heroine wear "a big diamond clasp" to her demure, Quaker gray cloak, in which she was wont to creep off to week-day church services. Obviously Mr. Kingsley had no notion that if a woman possessed "a big diamond clasp" she would not wear it in the street as well as anywhere else. This ignorance is rather a relief to the man millinery of present day novels. Once in a while one does come, to be sure, to a mistake like Mr. Howells' in "April Hopes" where he made a bride in veil and satin drive directly from the church to the train of cars. But these slips of the masculine pen are rare indeed any more.—New York Times.

The following is taken from a contributor to The Scotsman in regard to the last moments of Mrs. Oliphant: "Hearing that she was very ill, I went down on Sunday, June 20th, to Wimbledon, and found her on her death bed. Her voice was still strong, with its old, familiar tone; her wonderful eyes were as lambent as ever; and her mind was as calm and clear as a summer's sea. 'I am dying,' she said; 'I do not think I can last through the night.' Thinking of the 'Little Pilgrim,' and the 'Seen and the Unseen,' and the many touching efforts her eager imagination had made to lift the impenetrable veil, I said, 'The world to which you are going is a familiar world to you.' 'I have no thoughts,' she replied, 'not even of my boys, but only of my Saviour waiting to receive me, and of the Father.'"

NORTH CAROLINA.

The Presbytery of Albemarle :—Has just closed its sessions at this place. Nine ministers and eight elders were in attendance. Rev. W. T. Walker was made moderator and Rev. Jas. Thomas and Mr. J. B. Sparrow temporary clerks.

Rev. A. R. Shaw was received from the Presbytery of Fort Worth. As pastor elect of the Henderson church, the call from that church was put into his hands and accepted.

Presbytery holds an adjourned meeting at Henderson on the 30th inst., and a committee of installation, Rev. Dr. Daniel and Rev. Messrs. Caldwell and Wharton were appointed. At the same meeting Presbytery will act on the resignation of Rev. Mr. Walker of his pastoral charge of the Nutbush church.

Presbytery also licensed Mr. John Stanly Thomas a former candidate under its care and dismissed him at his own request to the care of the Presbytery of Wilmington.

The plan of nominating commissioners to the next General Assembly at the fall meeting was tried this year and Rev. Messrs. Jno. B. Morton and F. H. Johnston, with Elders Jno. Webb and J. M. B. Hunt were put in nomination—the election to take place at the spring meeting which is appointed for Tarboro, on the Tuesday after the second Sabbath in April at 7.30 p. m.

An interesting Foreign Mission meeting was held and preaching every day and night. Rev. Dr. Payne whose absence is always regretted was specially remembered in a resolution of sympathy and at the throne of grace on account of bodily affliction requiring surgical treatment.

The Littleton church building has undergone repairs and been enlarged so as almost to double its capacity for seats. Rev. Mr. Walker has been detained over the Sabbath by the pastor Mr. Wharton to conduct a dedicatory service. The outlook here for growth in the church is promising and the Littleton people without regard to denomination were exceedingly kind and courteous to the members of the Presbytery, a fact which was gratefully recognized by them.

STATED CLERK.

Littleton, Oct. 19th.

Hendersonville :—Rev. S. C. Caldwell, of Tallahassee, Fla., has had a unanimous call to the Hendersonville church and has accepted. The manse is being repaired and he will move in next week. He has been supplying the church for several weeks. The church has never, before, had a man for the whole of his time.

Greensboro :—The Ladies' Missionary Society of Westminster church had a most pleasant and profitable meeting on the 4th inst. There were twenty-five of the thirty members present and three names were enrolled. The exercises consisted of music and contributed papers upon the "Responsibility of Not Doing" and "Do Foreign Missions Pay." The amount contributed was $24.25.

Chapel Hill :—Yesterday, Oct. 10th, was our regular communion service for the last quarter and it was announced that six members had been received by letter since our previous communion. The attendance of the University students on the church service is now very gratifying. The Westminster League is getting in working shape. Some noble young men are in it and it is sure to do us good. The new officers are: C. H. Johnston, President; J. M. Hardy, Vice-President; J. B. Massey, Secretary.

D. J. C.

Greensboro, First Church :—Our Sunday-school yesterday, broke the record, having in attendance 330. Last week it was a sight, day by day, to see the young ladies' coming into the State Normal College, and will be no doubt the largest number this year in its history. Our church yesterday started a Mission Sunday-school at the Finishing Mills about a mile out.

M.

Mecklenburg Presbytery :— We have few notes from the Presbytery. Will give further officially very soon. Presbytery met in Providence church on 6th inst. Rev. J. J. Harrell was elected moderator. Graham Street church, Charlotte, was granted permission to renew the call for pastoral services of Rev. W. A. Wynne, of Bramwell, W. Va. A call from Wadesboro and Morven churches for pastoral services of Rev. M. C. Arrowood was placed in his hands. Licentiate Winter was received from Enoree Presbytery and a call from Rutherfordton placed in his hands.

VIRGINIA.

Alexandria :—The session met at the manse Sunday, Oct. 10th and received two members into the church. The pastor, Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, was still unable to preach, though he is much better and expects to be out again in a few days. Rev. A. P. Saunders, D. D., who is much beloved by the congregation, preached at both services.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Enoree Presbytery :—Held its fall sessions at Union, S. C., Sept. 28th-30th and had an attendance of twenty-one ministers and twenty-six elders. Rev. S. P. Fulton just returned for needed rest from Japan, where he has labored for nine years, was moderator. The conference on the State of Religion, held after the hearing of the reports of the churches and the Executive Committees, was devoted specially to the discussion of means for promoting the progress and efficiency of the church. It was pointed out that this Presbytery has made more rapid growth than the Church in general, having doubled its communing membership in nineteen years. And as indicative of continued development, commissions were authorized to organize, if the way be clear, new churches at four different points. The pastoral relation between Rev. W. L. Boggs and the churches of Antioch, Mt. Tabor (G.,) Center Point and Woodruff was dissolved that he might labor as evangelist of Presbytery in co-operation with the Synod's Committee of Evangelization.

But the matter of chief interest before the Presbytery was a protest from South Carolina Presbytery on the ground that Rev. S. C. Todd, a minister of the Presbytery had been reported as preaching in one of South Carolina Presbytery's churches the doctrine of "entire instantaneous sanctification in this life." A carefully prepared paper in reply was presented by the committee on bill and overtures, which expressed regret if the report was true, and declared that the Presbytery in no wise countenanced and approved said doctrine, or its promulgation. Three ministers opposed this paper as reflecting upon themselves, although denying that they held or taught the doctrine named. But after a long and warm discussion, conducted in excellent spirit, however, the paper was adopted. Notice has been served of a complaint to Synod.

L.

MISSISSIPPI.

Lexington :—The pastor. Rev. E. L. Siler, was assisted at recent communion service by Rev. J. B. Hutton, of Jackson. One person was received.

MARYLAND.

Mt. Washington Church : The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated last Sunday, Oct. 10th. Four new members were received. It is especially noticeable in the present pastorate that there is a marked increase of interest on the part of the young people. Rev. Byron Clark is pastor.

Maryland Presbytery :—The Presbytery of Maryland met at Mt. Washington church of which Rev. Byron Clark is pastor on Tuesday, Oct. 5th. Rev. R. L. McNair was moderator and Ruling Elder Mr. H. B. Davidson was temporary clerk. Rev. J. D. Thomas offered his resignation as pastor of Harmony church. Rev. Adolph E. Baker accepted the call to Springfield church. Wednesday night the Presbytery celebrated the 250th anniversary of the Westminster Assembly with addresses by Ruling Elder Thomas B. Gresham, of the Franklin Street Presbyterian church, and Dr. Markland his pastor.

KENTUCKY.

Beulah Church :—This church near Louisville recently enjoyed a protracted service conducted by Rev. J. B. Gordan and Rev. Ernest Thompson. Six young persons were received into the church. Mr. Gordan was installed pastor on the 3rd inst., the service being conducted by Rev. Messrs. Ernest Thompson, J. C. Molloy and T. E. Converse.

GENERAL.

The Presbyterian Evangelist, Mr. R. W. George, of Stokes county, has visited our section and held a meeting for us lasting seven days and great was the result. The Lord wonderfully blessed his work. Christians were strengthened and twenty-five souls have found Christ Jesus in the forgiveness of their sins. Ten have joined New Hope M. E. Church and others will join elsewhere.

Rev. Carter Helen Jones, son of Rev. Dr. J. Wm. Jones, formerly chaplain in the Confederate Army and so well-known as author of Religion in the Camp, has been called from the pastorate of a leading Baptist church in Louisville, Ky., to the pastorate of the Second Baptist church of Richmond, Va. Mr. Jones is about thirty-five years of age and an exceptionally fine preacher, as those who heard him in Wilmington during the Baptist General Association in May universally will testify.

We see by the Interior that fourteen members were received into the membership of the Presbyterian church at Evanston, on Sunday, the 3rd inst. This church is served by Rev. Dr. John H. Boyd, formerly of Charlotte, N. C.

Rev. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of the Central church of Baltimore has been called to the pastorate of Immanuel church, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Palmyra Presbytery and Palmyra Presbytery" is the illustration given by the last issue of The Herald and Presbyter. The scene is the meeting of the presbyteries of the Northern and Southern Churches at Kirksville, Mo., and the joint celebration by them of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Westminster Standards. While we do not agree with our contemporary in the matter of organic union, we are glad to note anything like cordial fraternization between these two branches of our Presbyterian Church.

PERSONALS.

We regret to learn that Rev. D. W. Fox, of Red Springs is suffering severely with one of his eyes. We trust that the trouble is only temporary and that he may soon be entirely relieved.

Rev. Geo. A. Doyle has resigned the pastorate of the church at Clarksburg, W. Va.

Rev. Dr. Moses Hoge has returned to Richmond after a visit of ten days to New York and Washington.

The health of Dr. J. Henry Smith, it is painful to learn, is not so good as a few weeks ago. Hope had been entertained of permanent improvement, but for the last week or two he has been laid aside. His friends, though not without anxiety, still hope his health may be restored.

Rev. T. J. Allison pastor of Sugar Creek church will assist Rev. Dr. Pharr pastor of Prospect church at the fall communion, third Sunday of October.

Rev. Dr. Jere Witherspoon pastor of the First church, Baltimore, has been unanimously called to the Grace Street church, Richmond to succeed Rev. Dr. Fair.

Rev. P. C. Morton preached at Immanuel church, Wilmington, on last Sabbath in the morning and evening.

Rev. S. C. Byrd, of Lafayette church, New Orleans, has declined the call to the pastorate of the church at Toccoa, Ga.

Rev. John C. Barr has been invited to continue as supply of Prytania Street church, New Orleans.

Rev. James H. Nall, D. D., who has been visiting his brother, the Rev. R. H. Nall, of Greenwood, S. C, has returned to his charge at New Orleans.

Rev. W. R. McDonald, of Staunton, Va., has been called to the church at Iron Gate, Alleghany county.

Rev. G. W. Lawson, who has served Bethesda church, Virginia during the summer has left for his new field of labor at Columbus, Ga.

DR. PLUMER'S STORY.

On my way to the General Assembly at Nashville in 1867, I met up with Dr. Leighton Wilson, and Dr. Wm. S. Plumer, at Columbia, S. C. Immediately after my introduction to Dr. Plumer, as pastor of the Salisbury church, he began to recount his experience in regard to Salisbury, substantially in the following words:

"In 1827 I attended a meeting of the Synod of North Carolina in Salisbury. In company with some others I travelled in the public stage to the meeting of the Synod. On the same stage with us was a gentleman, who claimed to have been a soldier of the Revolution—a man who from his dress and conversation seemed to be a man of means and of liberal education. He could make himself an agreeable companion and entertained us with many reminiscenses of days long gone by. But he often gave utterance to infidel opinions, and was profuse in his denunciations of his fellow men, and complained bitterly of the treatment which he had received from them. In short he appeared to be a miserable misanthrope wearing out his closing years of life in hopeless bitterness of soul. We were all glad when we reached Salisbury, not merely because our tiresome journey was ended, but mainly because we would get rid of our infidel fellow traveller.

The sessions of the Synod were held in the church, but public preaching was held under a bush arbor, in the northern part of the town, a few squares distant. I was sitting near the stand on Sabbath morning just before preaching, when I saw a venerable looking man come slowly walking down the central aisle. His long white hair hung down to his shoulders. He was dressed in home-spun clothes, country made, and he leaned upon a long staff that came up to his breast. As he came near the stand a young man who was sitting upon a rough seat, and leaning against a tree for a back arose and with deference said to the old man, "Mr. Bass, take my seat." "Oh no," said the old man, "I do not want to take your seat." "Oh yes, you must," said the young man, "I will get another." So he walked off, and left the old man standing there. Mr. Bass leaned his head upon the top of his staff for several moments, and when he lifted his face, his eyes were filled with tears. Then he said aloud, "I don't know what to do. Everybody is so good to me. God is so good to me, and I don't deserve any of this goodness." The old man was the venerable John Bass, a ruling elder of Back Creek church, a farmer of moderate means, and reverenced all the country around for his eminent piety. He too had been a revolutionary soldier, but unlike our stage companion, instead of being embittered by the injustice and unkindness of his fellowmen, was overwhelmed with a sense of his own unworthiness, and the kindness of God and his neighbors. It was a striking illustration of the different effects upon the human heart of infidelity and of true religion."

A PERSONAL GREETING FROM DR. STUART.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—Mrs. Stuart and I have parted with our sons and our dear kindred in the east, and we spent a delightful day in Kansas City with Dr. S. M. Neel and family and some of their good church people. Then we came on and spent five days with Mrs. S.'s sister at this place. Now we are starting to San Francisco, where we expect to meet Miss French, from whom we parted a few days ago, at St. Louis, and then we go aboard "The City of Pekin" and set sail at 1 p. m., on the 2d of October. We expect to go via Honolulu and Japan, and arrive in Shanghai on the 28th of October.

We have had a delightful visit in the home land, and now our hearts turn with joy towards the home and the friends and the work in the land of Sinim.

We feel very grateful to all the friends in the homeland, who have shown us so much kindness, and we now avail ourselves of the columns of your paper to bid them all a tender farewell. With very kindest regards,

Yours fraternally,
JOHN L. STUART.

HAMPDEN SIDNEY NOTES.

The students of Union Seminary have just passed through a very precious season of prayer closing with the communion of the Lord's Supper on the first Sabbath. In pursuance of the Assembly's action in re the week of prayer the student body met for a few minutes every evening of the week preceding the Sabbath and engaged in secret and spoken prayer for the blessing of God upon the nations of the earth, and especially upon God's people during this month.

On Sunday night the regular program of the society was rendered. The subject was Japan, and was treated in three phases: The Country and the People, The Missionaries and their Work, The Present Outlook for Japan. It was declared to be one of the most interesting and instructive of these meetings we have had.

New students continue to drop in at this late hour. Two arrived within the last two weeks. These swell our number to sixty-six. Professors and students are in good health. Hampden Sidney College has one hundred and twenty-seven students on the grounds.

Converse College has begun its eighth year of work with an enrollment of 402 students which is the largest opening in its history, and the work in all of the departments is moving on smoothly. Each member of the large faculty is present, refreshed by summer study and travel for the winter's work. Twelve States are represented in the student body, and with correspondence in hand an enrollment of 500 students is expected during the year. Two excellent brick buildings have been erected during the summer, each with a covered way of thirty feet from the main buildings. One building is an elegant infirmary, the other is for splendidly furnished toilet rooms. The buildings are arranged after the most modern hygienic plans. The plumbing in all of the buildings has been put in new this summer by experts according to strict city regulations which insures the best possible sanitary arrangements.

The students are a fine body of young women and have gone to work with enthusiasm and zeal. The annual Bible work is begun again with all of the students and continues each year as an important part of college work. The thoughtful and home-like care of the students, the freedom and quiet of the beautiful grounds and buildings, the most excellent appointments make Converse an ideal place for the great work it is doing.

BEAUTIFUL SEA SHELLS.

Every one admires them. Since coming South I have received numerous inquiries from Northern people for seashells, and now I am prepared to answer yes, I can send you shells, for I have made quite a collection of lovely shells, both from our own coast, the coral reefs, and some beautiful ones from the West India islands. HOW TO BUILD UP COUNTRY CHURCHES.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

How to bring the masses in our large towns within ear-shot of the Gospel, is one of the most constantly threshed questions of the day. But the percentage of attendance upon places of Sabbath worship in the rural districts shows a lamentable falling off during the last fifty years. The statistics published by Dr. Josiah Strong, of the Evangelical Alliance, and other high authorities prove this sad fact. The farming population of New England, of New York, of New Jersey, and of the Northern States generally (we cannot speak as intelligently in regard to the South), used to be a churchgoing population. At present an immense proportion of the people on farms and in the small hamlets seldom enter the house of God. Their Sabbaths are spent in sitting idly about their dwellings, or strolling in their fields, or in visiting neighbors, or, in too many cases, in some form of amusement. The excuse that their hard work during the week necessitates entire bodily rest on the Lord's Day was not made by their forefathers in past generations; and as a matter of fact, the dwellers in the rural districts for half of the year have more leisure and less toil than the dwellers in the cities.

This subject is one of vital importance; it touches the religious life, the conscience-life of the nation. Rapidly as the cities grow, the majority of the American people live in what may be called the agricultural districts. How can the rural population be reached? How can the non-churchgoers be brought to the houses of worship? How can the country churches be filled up? How can the careless and unconverted class be brought under the reach and power of a living Gospel?

The first answer to these questions concerns the country ministers. Here, for example, is a Christian minister who has accepted the charge of a rural parish. His first business is—or should be—to find out who live in that parish, and that he can only do by going among the people thoroughly. A missionary to China does not wait for the Chinese to come to him; he goes after them. An ambassador of Jesus Christ to the residents of a rural region is under the same obligation to go after those residents, rich or poor, high or humble. He ought to know just where every family within the reasonable bounds of his parish stands, and this he can only do by proper personal inquiry. When he ascertains that any particular family belongs regularly to some other congregation he has nothing further to do with them. He is a shepherd, but not a sheep-stealer. When he comes upon a family or an individual who does not attend upon any place of divine worship his first duty undoubtedly is to use every possible influence to bring that family or that person to the church in which he preaches. He is not set to work for salary, but to watch for souls. Every human soul that he can reach he is bound to reach.

It is not enough to extend a cordial invitation to non-churchgoers. To call at a farmhouse or at the dwelling of some humble day-laborer and ask the inmates to attend this church, may prove a bootless business, or, in some cases, be regarded as a piece of clerical "electioneering." He should, first of all, become acquainted with the family or the person; he should interest himself in them, and seek to win their personal regard. A minister can do very little good to those who do not like him, and none at all to those who will not listen to him. His first aim should be to win hearts. If there is sickness in the house, let him sympathize with and do what he can for the sufferers; if there is trouble, let him turn comforter; if there are children, let him notice them, and get hold of them. The chief power of every genuine minister of Jesus Christ is heart-power; that was our Divine Master's real power, after all. When a minister has won a hold on the hearts of any household, he can bring them to listen to the Gospel message intrusted to him. Congregations are built up externally by thorough pastoral visitation and personal effort; they are built up internally by faithful, fearless, loving setting forth of God's glorious Word. Dr. Chalmers, of Scotland, was the most colossal minister of Christ during the first third of this century; and about the most memorable sentence he ever uttered was that "a house-going minister makes a churchgoing people." It is my intensely earnest conviction that the foremost duty of every ordained preacher is not merely to prepare sermons, but to be a shepherd of souls, and especially of every soul that is outside of the fold of Christ. Every successful rural pastor will say "Amen" to this declaration.

The responsibility for this lamentably increasing neglect of all religious ordinances in the rural communities may rest in part upon the ministry; it also rests, in part, upon the officers and members of many of the churches. The personal and social relations of people in the country are very different from those of residents in the large cities. Every farmer is apt to know every other farmer; every merchant knows his customers, and the humblest day-laborer is not a stranger to his neighbors. This personal acquaintance in a community is an immense advantage in creating a church-life; it more than compensates for the distances between residences or from a house of worship. If the hearts of rural Christians are up to blood-heat, their opportunities for personal efforts, for the conversion, and for quickening the spiritual life of their neighbors, are far greater than those of Christians in the great towns. Personal acquaintance affords religious opportunity and creates religious responsibility. Then, also, the dwellers in the country have not the thousands things to absorb their time and attention that the residents of cities have. My own early life was spent in a farming region, and the last forty-five years of it in a great city; and from my own observation, I am persuaded that it is easier to cultivate a strong spiritual life in the country than it is in the towns. I recall now a rural church in my native region to which the farmers came for miles around, unhindered by the deepest mud in March, or the deepest snows in January. Two services on the Lord's Day did not weary them; the pastor gave them strong meat on Sunday, and a grip of his hand during the week. In revival seasons he got some help from a neighboring pastor; for the joyful work of leading souls to Christ was not put out "on commission" to itinerant strangers. Church-members worked for spiritual harvests just as they worked for harvests of wheat and corn on their own farms. The long winters were especially favorable for spiritual activities.

Now what was possible in rural communities a half century ago is equally possible now; it is realized now when pastor and people come up to the full measure of their duty. If all rural ministers would scour their parishes to gather in the neglecters of the Sabbath and the sanctuary, and if church-members would keep the spiritual atmosphere of their hearts warm, and the spiritual life of their church active and aggressive, this sorrowful shame and scandal of religious decline in the country region would be soon abated. It was from the rural parishes that the mighty ministers like Payson and Finney and Bishop Simpson came, and the mighty missionaries like Judson and Spalding and Goodell; they reared our leading Christian laymen and "mothers of Israel." On the life of the country churches depends, in large measure, the social, moral and religious health of our nation. Decline there means decay and death! A new spiritual life there means new life everywhere. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear!"

Fourth Quarter—Lesson IV.

Oct. 24th, 1897.—Acts xxvi: 19-32.

Commit to memory verses 22-23.

Subject.—Paul Before King Agrippa.

Golden Text. "Whosoever therefore shall confess Me before men, him will I confess also before My Father which is in heaven." Matt. x. 32.

CATECHISM.

Question 63. Which is the fifth commandment?

Answer. The fifth commandment is: Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Time. A. D., 60.

Place. Caesarea.

INTRODUCTORY.

After Paul had been in prison two years, the Roman Governor Felix, before whom our last lesson left the apostle, was removed on account of grave complaints of his conduct. Porcius Festus was appointed as his successor. He was a much better man than Felix. Josephus says that he governed his stormy province with wisdom and firmness, putting down the assassins who were then harassing Judea. His rule was cut short by death before he had completed his second year of office.

Felix had made the Jews angry and hoping to conciliate them, though there was no legal prosecution of Paul, was base enough to leave him in prison. After this the Jews sought to have Paul taken to Jerusalem for trial where they had more influence over the courts. As Paul saw his helplessness in such a case and because he was unjustly held, he appealed to Cæsar. Meantime Agrippa the king with his wife who was a Jewess had come to visit the governor. At their request an occasion was appointed for them to hear what Paul would say of his Christian life and hopes. At this hearing our lesson forms the latter part of the address before the king. He had related again his conversion when our lesson begins.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 19. Whereupon. After hearing the call and appointment of Jesus. King Agruppa was Herod Agrippa II, the son of Herod Agrippa who slew James and imprisoned Peter. He was grand son of Herod the Great. The heavenly vision which was given to him at the time of his conversion. It had cost Paul much, but he obeyed the command of Christ and now gladly rejoiced in it.

Vs. 20. Damascus where Paul was baptized and received his sight as a believer in Jesus the Christ, was the oldest city of the world, one hundred and thirty miles northeast of Jerusalem. Immediately after his conversion Paul testified of Christ at Damascus. Then after two or more years probably in the desert of Arabia, Paul returned to Damascus and went to Jerusalem throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles. These brief phrases covered the ministry of the apostle until this time. That they should repent: as the first deep essential necessity in being saved.

Vs. 21. For these causes. The preaching of repentance and turning to the Gentiles. This last was a sufficient reason to the Jews why they caught him in the temple and went about to kill him. But it was a reason also why the Romans should release him.

Vs. 22. Help as of a friend. I continue: the work of preaching Christ. Small and great, every rank of society. The Prophets and Moses: the Old Testament Scriptures.

Vs. 23. That Jesus was the Christ and that He should suffer, making atonement for sin and that He arose from the dead and is therefore the living Saviour. The people, the Jews. Gentiles, all other nations but the Jews.

Vs. 24. Festus the Roman Governor who had arranged the audience and now thought Paul mad by his much study of these perplexing problems. Much learning is "many writings."

Vs. 25. I am not mad. The emphasis was on the personal pronoun. Words of truth and soberness, what I have found to be the truth and not the ravings of a madman. From the worldly standpoint of Festus these words seemed foolishness. To Paul they had eternal value.

Vs. 26. The King Agrippa, as a Jew acquainted with Scriptures, knew of these things.

Vs. 27. Believest thou the prophets? This implied that he ought to know them and is bold and faithful in Paul dealing with an immortal soul.

Vs. 28. Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. Even me the king, the sinner, the hardened violator of social law by my marriage, hast thou startled and searched until if it could be, if I could give up, if I would but yield, I might become a Christian. There were many hindrances in the way of Agrippa becoming a Christian, his throne, his wealth, his companions, his life of sin.

Vs. 29. I would to God. I earnestly desire and would ask God. Except these bonds. At the opening Paul stretched forth one hand free, now at the close he lifts up the other chained, only to show his desire that others might be Christians without having to suffer as he did.

Vs. 30. The king rose and the others in the order of their rank.

Vs. 31. Nothing worthy of death or of bonds was a true verdict and a complete vindication of the apostle Paul.

Vs. 32. This man might have been set at liberty, as a matter of legal procedure. But in God's Providence his being a prisoner would bring him to Rome also to preach the Gospel.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. What is it to be a Christian? To be what the apostle Paul was, a sufferer being saved—a prisoner free.

2. What is it to be almost persuaded? To be what Agrippa was, the king free in bondage, a sinner being lost.

3. Who is willing to be only almost persuaded?

Notes:

Why should we confess Christ? From loyalty; Christ is our Lord, our Master and our King. We are His; by right of creation his, and He exercises absolute sovereignty over us and has entire propriety in us. We are His.

From love inspired by gratitude; Gratitude for the terrible doom He has saved us from; gratitude for the infinitely tender mercies of His daily providence, and gratitude for the ineffable joy and happiness yet to come for those who receive and confess Him here upon earth. Loyalty is the direction of conscience, the impelment to do the right. Love is the outgoing of the heart, the twining of the affections around Him who alone can satisfy the desire of the soul. Loyalty and love should combine and fuse in, furnishing adequate reason for confession of Christ as our Lord and Saviour.

How shall we confess Christ? All men owe it to Christ to confess Him before men. Before the poor and the rich, the beggar and the king, the wise and the ignorant, before all men without distinction of race or condition—without fear or desire for favor. The following from Canon Liddon is in point just here: "Something more than fifty years ago there was a small dinner party at the other end of London. The ladies had withdrawn, and under the guidance of one member of the company the conversation took a turn, of which it will be enough here and now to say it was utter dishonorable to Jesus Christ our Lord. One of the guests said nothing, but presently asked the host's permission to ring the bell, and when the servant appeared he ordered his carriage. He then, with the courtesy of perfect self command, expressed his regret at being obliged to retire; but explained that he was still a Christian. Mark the phrase—for it made a deep impression at the time—"still a Christian." Perhaps it occurs to you that the guest who was capable of this act of simple courage must have been a bishop, or at least a clegyman. He was not. The party was made up entirely of laymen, and the guest in question became the great prime minister of the early years of Queen Victoria. He was the late Sir Robert Peel.

Christ may be confessed verbally and ordinarily must be so confessed. Before the session, or the congregation, or in proper season as occasion may require in the various circumstances and in the social relations of life. But confession is not mere recognition, nor even acknowledgment—it is acceptance and appropriation as Saviour—involving intelligent appreciation of the work He has done for us and yet will do in us, and the heartful clinging to Him as the One whom the soul loveth. This confession of Christ will manifest itself in the active duties of life; if sincere it must be practical. The life must adorn the doctrine.

But it may in God's wise providence fall to the lot of His servants to confess Christ by suffering—suffering even where there cannot even be the solace of friends or the sense of support given by knowledge of the fact of human sympathy. The confession may be a showing of Christ's work in perfecting the confessor in the grace of humble and patient submission to His will,

Thus we may confess Christ verbally, actively or passively as He may ordain and direct by His word or by His providence—and whosoever shall confess Him before men, him will He confess before His Father which is in Heaven—but fearfully remember, whosoever denieth Him, him will He deny before His Father which is in heaven.

RICHMOND. At "Woodside," the paternal home, near Milton, N. C., Friday, September 10th, Nat. M. Richmond, in the 48th year of his age. He was a man of clear intellect, of great force of character, of indomitable courage and high Christian integrity. He had for years held official positions in the county government and filled them with such marked honesty and fair dealing as gained the esteem and confidence of all his fellow-citizens. His great force of will and character were tempered by great tenderness of heart; he never refused to do a kindness that was in his power. The suspension of business, the gathering of the whole community at his funeral manifested the very high regard for him in his native village.

For several years he had been an efficient deacon in the Milton Presbyterian church, and the superintendent of the Sunday-school also. His home life was marked by a very consistent Christian character. A most devoted husband, a tender father, a loving brother, he made his home the centre of all that was sweet and attractive. His end was peace. Just before his death calling the members of his family around him to give his last farewell, and sending messages of love to absent ones, he assured them all of the Saviour's presence with him, and so he crossed the river leaning upon the rod and staff of his blessed Lord and Master.

In connection with the death of Mr. Nathaniel M. Richmond, who was for above seventeen years a deacon of Milton church, N. C, and for the last four years a superintendent of the Sabbath-school, the officers of said church and the teachers and scholars of the Sabbath-school feel constrained to put on record their thoughts and feelings as follows:

1st. That in the death of Bro. Richmond, we feel that we, as individuals and as laborers in the cause of Christ have sustained a heavy loss. Humble, genuine, brave and fairminded, he gave forth an influence elevating, purifying and strengthening that will long be remembered.

2d. That as a Christian and in the discharge of his offices among us, he so lived and labored as to secure the respect and confidence of all who knew him. While firm, conservative, consistent, he was also gentle, genial and patient and thus worked in harmony with both old and young.

3d. That we tender to his wife and children our profoundest sympathy in their terrible bereavement and pray that God in his contiuuance of past goodness will sustain and strengthen and comfort them and enable them in time from the heart to say, "Thy will be done."

4. That these records of respect and affection be sent to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN for insertion and a copy sent to his esteemed wife and family.

SINCERITY.

Be thou sincere, No greater virtue shines
With purer radiance on the jewelled string
Of virtue's rosary; no word defines
Its meaning full with a clearer setting.

Wert thou thrice genius and thy love would bring
A hundred blessings down upon my head,
I'd rather that my heart's last breath were fled
Than feel the anguish of thy falsehood's sting.

Truth gains a way where rarest gifts are naught;
Truth wins a place exalted o'er deceit;
Truth is the surest pathway to the heart,
The only footing on which friends should meet.
If thou, my friend, affection givest me,
Be sure 'tis tempered with sincerity.

"FAITH LATIMER."

BY REMINGTON.

In Boston, under the shadow of the State House, "Faith Latimer" (Mrs. Maria O. Miller) was born. Her family upon both sides is of Puritan stock, and, though her ancestors did not come over in the famous Mayflower, they settled in New England long before the War of the Revolution. Her father was for many years a merchant of Boston, and both her parents were members of the famous Old South Church. Her mother was a woman of great literary taste and ability, and Professor Edwards Park of Andover, who is a relative of the family, took great interest in her development, and aided her in her studies and reading.

Faith Latimer inherited her mother's taste, and from her earliest childhood has been a true lover of books. Being left motherless, she was sent to Wheaton Seminary, Newton, Massachusetts, to be educated, and she graduated the youngest scholar who had ever received a diploma up to that time. Soon after, she took a special course at Maplewood Institute, Pittsfield. Her vacations were spent with her mother's relatives in New England, and the lessons she there learned from the industrious and frugal characters about her are gratefully remembered and practically demonstrated in her daily life.

While quite young, she married a merchant of Louisville, Kentucky, a Virginian by birth, who left her a widow in 1888. He was a man of the highest integrity and moral worth. Hers was an ideally happy marriage, and left no remorse mingled with the sadness of separation. Louisville is still her home. Mrs. Miller has always been pre-eminently a wife and mother, and home duties are never neglected for outside work. The loss of a daughter in early wedded life had a marked influence upon her character. Her love of home and children has led her to devote the best energies of her life to their education; and few women in the private walks of life have labored so untiringly for the moral and religious improvement of the young as she has done. For many years she has led an infant class at Sunday-school.

Faith Latimer has written several books for children, which have been treasured and welcomed in homes and libraries. In years past her pen has furnished many verses and articles which have been published, often anonymously. So quietly has this little woman labored that few of her familiar acquaintances have any knowledge of the amount of study and literary work which she has sent out into the world through various papers and magazines.

Her love of nature and all that is beautiful in poetry, music, and art; her great industry, wonderful memory, and rare gifts as a conversationalist—make her a delightful companion and loyal friend.

Faith Latimer has passed through many bereavements, but so strong is her faith, and so full is her heart with divine love, that her life-work goes on with cheerfulness and unflagging energy.—Sunday School Times.

For a Sty in the Eye.—When you feel that pricking pain, and see the fatal little spot of red on the eyelid which surely foretells the coming of a sty, put into a small bag a teaspoonful of black tea, on which pour enough boiling water to moisten; as soon as cool enough put it on the eye, and let it remain until morning. The sty will, in all probability be gone. If not, one more application will be certain to remove it.

The Boundary Line.

When a young girl steps from girlhood into womanhood, she enters a new and strange country. A land of promise and hope, yet full of hidden dangers. Whether she will find happiness or misery depends largely upon the health and condition of the delicate, special organism which is the source and centre of her womanhood.

The lives of young women are often wrecked because of a mistaken sense of modesty, which leads them to neglect the earlier symptoms of feminine weakness.

These troubles unless corrected, develop into serious chronic difficulties which become a dragging burden, ruining life's best opportunities and blighting all possibility of happy wifehood and motherhood.

Any woman suffering from these delicate complaints needs the health-giving power of Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It heals and strengthens the womanly organs; stops weakening drains; gives vitality to the nerve-centres, and restores perfect organic soundness and constitutional energy. It is the only medicine devised for this purpose by a skilled and experienced specialist in diseases of the feminine organism.

Mrs. W. B. Duncan, of Arlington, Mo., writes: "I have used your 'Favorite Prescription' and am never tired of sounding its praise. When my lady friends complain, I say: 'Why don't you take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription?' I told an anxious mother, whose daughter (18 years old) had not been right for five months, about the medicine, and after the young lady had taken two-thirds of a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' she was all right. She had been treated by two of our best doctors."

Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" sent paper-bound on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Or, a handsome cloth-bound copy for 31 stamps. Address, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

LITTLE PATTY.

Cross little Patty sat under a tree,
As fretful as ever a child could be.
"Keep still!" to a singing bird she said;
"You are out of tune and you hurt my head,
Do stop!" she cried to a dancing brook,
A lamb and a pussy-cat came to look
At cross little Patty beneath the tree,
As fretful as ever a child could be.

The pussy-cat wondered to see her pout,
And the frisky lambkin skipped about,
But the brook tripped on over stones and moss,
And never found out that Patty was cross.
The bird in the tree-top sang away,
And these were the words she meant to say:
"You poor little girl! why can't you see
That there's nothing at all the matter with me?
Mend your manners, my dearie, soon,
Or you'll find the whole world out of tune."

Somehow, the wind in the leafy tree,
And the rippling water so wild and free,
The bird on the bough, and the snow-white lamb,
And the gentle pussy so mild and calm,
Made Patty ashamed of her naughty mood;
She shook herself well and said: "I'll be good."
And, presto! the Patty beneath the tree
Was just as sweet as a child could be.

WHY BUSTER WOULDN'T BELIEVE JIM.

Such a howl! Buster screamed as if he would split his throat, and Sim and Essie seemed as much distressed as the baby. Of course mother flew to the spot, but mother was in the garret unpacking winter blankets, and though mother-feet always seem to have wings when babies cry, a good many tears had been shed when she got there.

And for once tears helped the hurt, for the trouble was that Buster had taken the little silver pepper pot to play with, and of course he pulled the top off, and of course he got the dreadful stuff in his eyes.

"Jim, how could you let your brother play with the pepper-cruet?" said his mother.

"I told him not to, mother," insisted Jim.

"I told him it would get in his eyes and smart like fire; didn't I, Buster?"

"Yes," sobbed the baby, "he telled me, but I didn't believe him."

"Why, Buster, did you think Jim would tell you a story?"

"He said it was a wild cat, and it was just Frisk," explained Buster, and mother looked puzzled, you may be sure.

"A wild cat? How could he say the pepper-pot was a wild cat?

Buster laughed aloud, showing that the tears had done good in washing his blue eyes, but Jim hung his head and did not laugh a little bit. Mamma looked at Jim and waited to hear what it all meant.

"It was this morning," said Jim, twisting out of sight of his mother's eyes, "we were playing blind-man's bluff, and Buster would be blind man, though he couldn't catch anything but Frisk, and Frisk was't playin."

"And when he caught Frisk," prompted his mother, for Jim's story had come a stand-still

"He telled me it was a wild cat, and scared me," said Buster, finishing the story.

Was that right, Jim? asked mother.

"I was just fooling, mother."

"Would you slap me real hard," asked mother, "and hurt me just for fun?"

"O, no! mother," cried the little boy.

"But you have slapped the truth and hurt it so that your little brother doesn't believe what you say now."

Jim had nothing to say for himself, but in his little heart he resolved not to tell the least bit of a fib, even in fun.—E. P. Allen, in Sunbeam.

SHE WAS A STRANGER.

The following story, which comes from the west, brings with it a lesson for all, old and young:

"A Sunday-school missionary, while addressing a Sunday-school, noticed a little girl shabbily dressed and barefoot, shrinking in the corner, her little sunburned face buried in her hands, and sobbing as if her heart would break. Soon, however, another little girl about eleven years of age, got up and went to her. Taking her by the hand, she led her out to a brook, where she seated the little one on a log. Then kneeling beside her this good Samaritan took off the ragged sunbonnet, and, dipping her hand in the water, bathed the other's hot eyes and tearstained face, and smoothed the tangled hair, talking cheerily all the while.

"The little one brightened up, the tears vanished, and smiles came creeping around the rosy mouth. The missionary, who had followed the two, stepped forward and asked, 'Is this your sister, my dear?'

"'No, sir,' answered the child, with tender, earnest eyes; 'I have no sister.'

"'Oh, one of the neighbor's children,' replied the missionary; 'a little schoolmate, perhaps?'

"'No, sir; she is a stranger. I never saw her before'

"'Then how came you to take her out and have such a care for her?'

"'Because she was a stranger, sir, and seemed all alone, and needed somebody to be kind to her.'"—Christian Standard.

What is it that saves the life of the world from being utterly rotten, but the Christian elements that are in it?—Drummond.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6th, 1897.

One of the notable events of the week was the annual demonstration meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which was held in the First Congregational church. The building was filled to its utmost capacity and there was much enthusiasm when the various local unions marched into the church with banners flying. The recitation in unison of the District motto—"For God and Home and Native Land—Loyal Unto Death—was decidedly impressive, and Mrs. Welsh's chalk talk on "Danger Signals," applying the system of colored lights used on railroads as warnings of the effect of spirituous liquors on the human system, was both interesting and instructive. Mrs. Mary F. Wells, National Organizer, was the principal speaker, and nothing she said was more pleasing to her hearers than her reference to the late Neal Dow, the grand old man of the temperance cause—"I am thinking of an old man who has passed over to the promised land. I wonder whether he is pleased with what his followers here are doing; with the growing weakness of the rum-power, or with the steady increase of strength among the temperance workers." Later, after Mrs. Wells had referred to Gen. Dow as one who had shipped heavenward after standing bravely for his principles for forty years and had said: "and his spirit and determination are treasures willed to us," the following resolution was adopted, and the secretary directed to send a copy to Miss Dow:

"Resolved, That the W. C. T. U. of the District of Columbia, in annual demonstration to-night, extend to you our sincere condolence upon the death of your venerable and revered father, Gen. Neal Dow."

Mrs Wells referred to the building the union purposes to erect in Washington, and, probably in answer to those who objected to the creation of a large building debt, said: "We will begin it under debt, but do men never purchase real estate or build buildings on borrowed capital or secured notes?"

The forty-fifth annual meeting of the Washington Y. M. C. A., was held this week, and the talk at the meeting was largely devoted to the new building which the association has determined to have. The President of the association said on that subject in his annual address: "Although an active canvass has not begun, yet there has been subscribed the sum of $30,000. We need $125,000 in addition to the present subscription. In order to acquire the title to the adjacent lot and to pay for the construction and equipment of the building. Our canvass is to be in earnest and far-reaching, leaving no sympathizer unsolicited. Judging from the past liberality of the people of Washington we confidently expect that they will contribute the amount required. The people of Washington are public-spirited and no appeal has ever yet gone unheeded.

The police statistics of Washington present an indisputable argument showing that the work of the Anti Saloon League is bearing good fruit. During the four years since the league was organized the number of licensed saloons has each year decreased, and, notwithstanding the steady increase in the population of the city, the number of arrests for intoxication have also decreased each year. This shows that fewer saloons make less drunkenness, and if there were no saloons either licensed or unlicensed there would be little or no public drunkenness.

Canon Gore, of Westminster Abbey, preached twice in Washington Sunday. His morning sermon, on "The Brotherhood of Man" was a surprise to those who have not kept pace with the growth of broad ideas in the Church of England. He preached from the words of St. Paul, "May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height." T.
